The affairs of Spain have turned out as I anticipated, and if you refer to my letters, you will find that I foretold all that has occurred. M. Olozaga is no more minister: he was driven from office nominally by the Queen, but literally Narvaez and Serrano, on the 20th. No one was acquainted with Spain or the Government supposed that M. Olozaga would remain long at the head of the Government. His opponents were numerous and powerful. The Moderates, notwithstanding his recent reconciliation with Christine hated him for his ungentlemanly conduct to the Queen Mother on her quitting Spain, and only made use of him as a stepping-stone to power. The Liberals placed no faith in him, and regarded him as a renegade. Hence numerous defections from among the Moderates and Ultra-Liberals, and the nomination of M. Pidel, one of the satellites of Espartero, as President of the Congress! The new ministry is not formed, but it is a curious fact, that Serrano remains in office, and will form a part of the new administration. The Moderates now govern the Queen, and consequently the country, but can they for any length of time maintain their present position? In my opinion, decidedly not. Olozaga will intrigue, Lopez will intrigue, Christine will intrigue, the army will intrigue, for it is a fact, although the heads of army are favourable to the Moderates, the majority of the officers and serjeants are their deadly enemies. Besides, they will have to contend with the municipal Council of Madrid, and the disorganised National Guards. The former have already declared that they never would consent to be governed by the Moderates and the latter are prepared to take up arms against them when the force for action shall have arrived. In the meantime, the greatest disorder and anarchy reign in Madrid, and the streets are nightly filled with armed bands. On the 30th, a placard was posted, declaring that it was the duty of the Government to re-organise the National Guards, gave great offence to the people, and in a very few hours, two hundred armed men, dressed in terrific style, assembled before the Town-house, and before the Place de la Constitution, shouting, "The National Guards for ever!" "Death to the Traitors!" "Liberty or Death!" "Down with the Ministers," "The National Independence for ever." Sixty of these brigands, marched towards the house of the Minister of War, General Oraa, who was on duty there, put the guard immediately under arms, and ordered a company of the infantry, supported by cavalry, to clear the place. The troops fired a few shots in the air, and then made a charge, by which about fifteen of the rioters were wounded. Some arrests were made, and the mob dispersed. The same night Narvaez was shot at, and again the miscreants escaped. And yet the French newspaper publishes M. Madoz's flattering picture of the Paris populace. In the following terms, gives a fair statement of the present state of affairs in Spain. "We were far," says the journal, "from suspecting yesterday, on reading the letter of M. Olozaga, that this superb progression was the dying song of the swan. A telegraphic despatch informs us that the Presidency of the Council of Ministers, has been withdrawn from M. Olozaga. He had brought forward Mr. Pidel, as a candidate for the Presidency of the Chamber of Deputies; but the opposition would not have him, and elected M. Pidel. The Ministers, thus defeated, demanded the dissolution of the Cortes. To this the Queen would not consent, and Ministry of almost the preceding day was dismissed. A new ministerial crisis. This is probable, for the most complete anarchy continues to reign in the Government, and the excitement of the public mind is greater now than ever. The moderates, whose succour was applied for, are proud of their triumph, and they hold with a league six thousand bayonets, proclaimed as the man fitted to govern, in defiance from authority having scarcely grasped it, a coalition formed within a period of twenty-four hours, and in the same Chamber which had brought him into office. In the meantime, Madrid is in a state of agitation almost every mind—this reaction that is preparing is generally suspected, and we again see put forward the system of Queen Christina, and every body perceives that a new civil war must soon be the result of inflamed passions." The Journal des Débats adds more, and describes the state of the capital to be most alarming; it adds, that the hatred between the Moderates and the Ultra Liberals had risen to such a height, that daily blood was being shed. The Ultra Liberals now openly threaten to the insurrection which drove Espartero from Spain, Narvaez, when remonstrated with by his friends for forming a coalition with his enemies, the Ultra Liberals, replied, Vereant dummodo tantum oderint. This cannot be the favourable augurate, it means, "Let me act, you will soon see to whom the cake belongs." It was reported on the frontier, that Olozaga had been arrested, but I believe this not to be true; it is probably originated from the fact, that M. Olozaga having been seized by the Heraldo with treason, brought an action against the proprietors of that paper. Let us now wait for the new comedy—the Ministry to be formed by General Serrano and Frias—the first act will, in all probability be a dissolution of the Cortes—the second, another civil war—the finale will be dreadful!

We have nothing very interesting from Catalonia. Prim has issued a proclamation declaring the confiscation of the property of all those who aid and assist another; this officer still holds possession of Fort Figueras, makes frequent sorties, and greatly annoys the Queen's troops. Barcelona is tranquil; already have the following journals appeared:—El Corresponsal, Diario de Avisos, Lucesas, La Preservadad, La Verdad, El Genio, and El Imparcial; a new paper was advertised as soon to appear under the title, Dominus Vobiscum.

The friend from Madrid to whom I referred in my letter of the 29th nights since the mail from Madrid to Bayonne was stopped by a band of robbers near the wood of Aranda; the passengers were stripped of everything they had about them, but were not ill-treated.

ITALY

The last accounts from the Papal States this week are more satisfactory than the last; many arrests have, however, been made, and, amongst others, several priests belonging to the garrison of Ancona.

In the higher circles it was generally reported that the object of the secret mission of Prince Carini to Madrid was to solicit the hand of Isabella for a scion of the house of Naples, and that the pretension was supported by M. Guizot.

Cardinal Charles-Marie-Pediconi died on the 21st November, at Rome. The Cardinal was born at Benevento, on the 2nd of November, 1760, and was raised to the sacred purple by Pius VII, on the 13th of March, 1823.

The Cologne Gazette states from Naples, November 14, that the British Ambassador at that Court has declared to the government, that independently of all other considerations connected with the occupation of the island of Lampedusa, the Neapolitans, England can never permit it to be made a colony for convicts, on account of the vicinity of the island of Malta.

Accounts from Bocagna of the 25th ult., state, that the bands of malefactors had recently infested the district of Galliera had been dispersed, and that several of the individuals who composed them were in the hands of justice. Their chief, Thiarella, had succeeded in effecting his escape. The prisoners are to be tried by a civil tribunal.

GERMANY

A letter from Berlin, of the 27th November, says, that a company had been formed in the Prussian capital, for guaranteeing travellers by railroads from accidents. The society undertakes to pay a certain sum, in proportion to the gravity of the accident. Should a person be killed, his family will receive the amount. No public are not to be called on to pay anything to the society, but the directors railroads are to give it a trifling sum for every traveller. It was expected that royal sanction would be given to this novel undertaking.

The naturalist Schemper, after having resided for six years in Abyssinia, had obtained for himself an excellent position with King Theo, who has appointed him engineer of an extensive district. In one of his letters he says, "I am now proprietor of a vast district, containing many thousand inhabitants, and over which I am Sovereign, like a Count of the Empire of the middle ages. But I am poor; there is nothing on it but corn, arms, and cattle. Money is scarce, and I am willing to procure it by the violent means used by the great men of Abyssinia."

The Governor of Mecklenburg-Strelitz has contracted a loan with the house of Solomon, for the sum of 1,500,000 thalers, at three-and-a-half per cent, to meet the expense of that part of the Berlin and Hamburg railroad which will run through its territories.

HANOVER, Nov. 26.—It is probable that the Assembly of the States will not be convoked before April next.

FRANCE

The Government journals are very angry with the Legitimists for addressing the Duke de Bordeaux as their king. The Journal des Débats says, "M. Berryer and his colleagues must be called upon to explain what they did with their titles Deputies at the Court of the Duke of Bordeaux, and how they can reconcile their fidelity to the King of the French with that species of a proclamation of a king of France whom M. Chabot does not recognise. They have enjoyed the gratification of this scandalous adventure. Their time now expires it. We shall wait to see them at the bar of the Chamber of Deputies."

The King and the Royal Family will quit St. Cloud on the 10th, to take up their ordinary residence in the Tuileries. It is said that the King intends paying a short visit to Chateau d'Eu.

The Paris Chamber of Commerce has named a commission, composed of Messrs. Cosse Lefevre, Michel, and Bourdon, to examine and report on the project of a colonization of French Guyana.

It is the 27th of the present month that Louis Philippe will, for the thirteenth time, preside at the opening of the Chambers. The first was the session which began 1830, on the 3rd of August; then the 23rd July, 1831; 19th of November, 1832; 20th of April, 1833; the 31st of July, 1834; the 29th of December, 1835; the 27th of December, 1836; the 18th of November, 1837; the 17th December, 1838; the 5th November, 1840; the 27th December, 1841; and the 25th July, 1842.

It is confidently reported that an Anglo-French company has been formed, and intends to apply for the privilege of constructing a railroad between Paris and Lyons, branching from the Corbeil road. M. Charles Laffite, of Paris, and Mr. J. H. Ashwood, of London, appear at the head of this new undertaking.

Last week was placed in front of the house No. 34, Rue de Richelieu, a fine black marble slab, with the following inscription, "Moliere died in this house, on the 17th of February, 1673, aged 51 years."

It will have been remarked that the triumphal arch at the Barrier del' Etoile is in an unfinished state. It is intended, so I am informed, to place twenty four colossal statues round it, representing the most celebrated captains of the empire.

Eight cases of bas relief, from the ruins of the ancient temple the Parthenon, have reached Paris, and are intended as a gift to the Royal Society of Beaux-arts.

The Jesuits are working hard in every parish to form associations of their order. They possess a magnificent house, Nos. 18 and 20, Rue des Postes.

The weather is particularly mild, so much so that we have several almond trees in blossom

From the 1st of January next, police guardians will be stationed in each street night and day, to protect the inhabitants from the robberies almost hourly committed.

On Friday last was presented for the first time at the Opera Comique, the long-announced opera, in one act, called "The Slave of Camoens" The libretto by M. St. Georges, the music by M. de Flotow. The poem is well written and interesting. M. de Flotow, although previously highly represented as a composer of great merit, has, in his present opera, surpassed any that he has yet written. The music is melodious, graceful, and, if I may use the expression, en bon ton. The opera was received with the greatest enthusiasm, by a crowded house of the élite of our fashionable circles. I am sure that were "The Slave of Camoens" to be adapted to the English stage, it would have an immense success.

With the exception of the opera of M. de Flotow, we have had nothing fresh in the musical world, since my last. Persiani's "Fantasma" will be brought out this week, at the Italian Opera. Mario, Ronconi, Formasari, and Morelli, will appear in it.

Doehler has quitted Florence for Genoa; he intends passing the winter in France. Dreyschock is giving concerts, with great success, in all the principal cities on the Rhine.

GREECE.

The new National Assembly of Greece was opened at Athens, on the 20th ult. by the King in person, who made a speech from the throne, in which he said, "Free municipal laws, provincial councils, and trials by jury, were the precursor, of representative government in Greece. Our task is now to place the crowning stone on the edifice, by the introduction and establishment of a Constitution."

TURKEY.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 8.—The Greek revolution gains gradually on the provinces bordering upon Turkey. Some bands of Rayahs have assembled in the neighbourhood of Janina and of Monastirca; but there are several Mussulmans among them. Their object, however, is principally pillage. But if collisions between these bodies of Christians and of Mussulmans should take place, the peace not only of Turkey but of Europe will be endangered. The Ottoman Porte, which pretends to throw itself into the arms of France and England, is nevertheless full of suspicion. It is believed that in the Assembly a motion will be made to give King Otho the title of King of the Greeks, instead of King of the Hellenes. The Porte attributes the recent promotion of the elections of the political refugees from Macedonia, an attack upon its rights, as it considers them still Turkish subjects, though residing in Greece. The Divan is placing a considerable force on the Greek frontier. Omar Pacha has marched to Monastira with more than 10,000 men. Namik Pacha is also going with several battalions Prince Alexander has detached himself insensibly from Russia, and he now appears to follow the impulse that will be given to him by the French cabinet. The troubles in Bosnia are not yet ended. Kiamil Pacha, who long resisted the Russians in that country, has been appointed Governor.

Nov. 13.—Halil Pacha was deposed last week. He is succeeded by Fethi Ahmed Pacha, the Sultan's brother-in-law. This change may be attributed to the execution of the Armenian; and it is fortunate that so conspicuous an individual could be pointed out, whose character could give the indignant complaints of the representatives of the three powers, and rendered a compliance with their demands not only feasible, but advisable. It was with difficulty that Rizn Pacha himself escaped the anger of the Sultan, upon the communication of the decision of the plenipotentiaries were brought to his notice. Rizn Pacha has at last obtained the appointment of Reschid Pacha as envoy to Paris, hoping thereby to get rid of a dreaded rival.

EGYPT

ALEXANDRIA, Nov. 23.—The Pacha left for Assouan on the 9th instant, having previously made some private sales of produce, which occasioned a strong remonstrance from the French Consul-General, who complained of the injustice to the other parties in thus favouring a few. The consequence has been, that his Highness has since refused to sell anything except by the medium of the public auction. It is expected that the Pacha will only be absent a month or six weeks.

HAYTI.

By an arrival from Hayti, of the 14th ult., we find that the French Government has consented to delay the prosecution of its claims, under the treaty of 1838, until the establishment of a definitive Government in that country. It appears that Hayti is far from being quiet. In Jeremie, the inhabitants were fearful of inroads from the mountains. They expected to be plundered and murdered. So great was their alarm on the 10th, that men, women, and children turned out almost en masse, and formed a line of defence with barrels of sand, &c. Nothing serious, however, had occurred up to the 14th.

AMERICA.

The Hottinguer, Captain Bursley, arrived in the Mersey, on Tuesday night, bringing New York papers to the 19th ult. Captain Bursley has run his vessel across the Atlantic in fifteen days, from land to land. His advices are three days later than those brought by the Acadia, which left the steam-ship via Boston.

The Twenty-eighth Congress will assemble at Washington, in two weeks from Monday next. In the Senate, parties will stand:—Whigs twenty-nine, Locos twenty-three, giving a majority of six. In the House of Metsrs. Locos number 15 or 17, are Van Buren's men, the others for Calhoun, Johnson or Buchanan for President.

CANADA.—The seat of Government resolutions were adopted in the Legislative Council without debate, the protesting members being absent; and on the 10th instant both Houses waited on the Governor with the address to the Queen, asking the selection of Montreal as the permanent Metropolis reserved for transmission to London. A meeting of the citizens was held at Kingston, to take measures for sending delegates to London, for the purpose of remonstrating against the removal of the seat of Government. Nearly £300 was subscribed on the spot, to defray expenses.

THE OVERLAND MAIL.

INDIA AND CHINA.

The Oriental steam-packet, bringing the Overland Mail from India and China, arrived at Malta on the 25th inst., and left Alexandria on the 28rd; the Peninsula steamer, for Marseilles, carrying on the mail on the same day. It was despatched from Bombay by the Atalanta steamer on the 1st of November. By the arrival of this mail we have news from Bombay of that date; from Calcutta, October 21; Ceylon, October 22; Macao, August 28; Canton, August 4; Hong Kong, August 24; Nankin, August 24; Delhi, October, 21; Lahore, October 12, Madras, October 31, Manilla, July 30; Mauritius, July 30; Soinde, October 15, and Singapore, September 16.

BOMBAY, Nov. 1.

THE PUNJAUB

The main topic of interest during the month has been the terrible revolution at Lahore, intimation of the outbreak of which, and of the butcheries which marked its commencement, arrived at Loodiana on the 21st of September. Subsequent accounts have put us in possession, not only of the events which succeeded the massacre of Shere Sing and his family, but of full details of the circumstances attending that deed of wickedness and atrocity. Immediately after the assassination of Shere Sing, the minister of the Maharajah, which was current at the time of the dispatch of the last mail, has been confirmed by authentic tidings. He was treacherously murdered by Ajeet Sing, the son of Alexander of the Punjaub; and Dhiaht, not long afterwards, met his death during the siege of the citadel of Lahore, which was undertaken by Heera Sing, with the view of avenging the slaughter of his father, Dhyan Sing. The result of the siege was, that a supposed son of Runjeet Sing, the old "Lion of Lahore," named Dhuleep Sing, was raised to the throne. Heera Sing taking the post of Prime Minister. Thus matters at present stand. Nothing whatever is known as to the policy which will be pursued by Lord Ellenborough—whether he will at once interfere in the affairs of the distracted state, or for a while hold the decline interfering at all. In this state of uncertainty, speculations as to the future are to be based on the indications of passing events, or on mere rumour. The report is, that an army of observation, upwards of 30,000 strong, is about to be assembled on the Sciklı frontier, and this, I think, may be depended upon. The Army of Exercise is still to be organised on the banks of the Jumna. The Bengal troops ordered to Scinde for the purpose of relieving the Bombay regiments which at present occupy that province, have all been countermanded, and are for the present to remain at Ferozepore. The accounts given by different writers of the manner of Shere Sing's murder very considerably differ. All, however, seem to agree that the revolution was brought about by a band of conspirators, and that of these Dhyan Sing was the chief. It is now said that the event was hastened by a declaration on the part of Shere Sing, while intoxicated, to the effect that he proposed availing the first favourable opportunity of making away with his ministers and wholly, and in due course, come to the ears of the intended victim. Ajeet Sing, the minister's principal confederate, was, at the time appointed, on the 14th of September. It was agreed that Sher Sing that he should proceed on the following day to review the troops of Ajeet Sing, and endeavour to gain their good will, by bestowing honours and rewards on the officers. On this suggestion, he acted—and his conference with his life. He is said to have been presented, at the review, with a splendid rifle, and whilst in the act of receiving it from the donor, Ajeet Sing, was shot through the body with the piece, which had been purposely loaded. A scene of confusion ensued, during which a great number of his followers were slain. The head of the sovereign was cut off, and placed on a spear; and Ajeet then proceeded towards the city in triumph at the head of his troops. When he arrived at the gates, Pertaub Sing, the son of the Maharajah, a youth of fourteen, was in the act of passing out, and the regicide immediately attacked his party and put him to death. A savage outrage was next perpetrated in the palace, where the wives and children of Shere Sing and his son were inhumanly massacred. Ajeet Sing is said to have seized an infant born to the murdered monarch only a day previously, and trampled it to death upon the ground! Soon after the commission of these atrocities, an altercation took place between Ajeet and Dhyan Sing, with reference, as it appears, to the question of succession, when the former, as if not already glutted with blood, took the life of the minister, thus removing the sole obstacle to the attainment of the object of his ambition. He then took possession of the citadel and palace of Lahore, and proclaimed himself Maharajah. His career, however, was soon cut short, and himself hurried into that eternity to which he had in so short a space of time swept so many of his fellow-creatures Heera Sing, the son of Dhyan Sing, burned to revenge the slaughter of his sire, and, aided by his uncle Soochet Sing, and the gallant and experienced General Ventura, collected all the troops he could muster together and laid vigorous siege to the strong hold in which Ajeet had taken refuge. They were victorious; the fortress was taken, and the miscreant, on endeavouring to effect his escape, was slain, together with Lena Sing Bundara, and several of his friends and adherents. Dhuleep Sing, a boy six or eight years old, who was said to be the only surviving son of Runjeet Sing, but generally thought spurious, was immediately placed on the throne, and proclamations were issued intimating his accession, and commanding obedience; while an official account of the occurrences which had preceded his assumption of regal authority was transmitted to the British Government, with a request that we would recognise him as the ruling power.

The result of this communication is unknown. The Rajah Golab Sing, the brother of Dhyan and Soochet Sing, is reported to have arrived at Lahore a short time subsequently to these proceedings, and to have expressed all that had been done by his nephew, Heera Sing; he was accompanied by an enormous army, amounting, it is said, to 35,000 men. Our information as to more recent events is in the last degree meagre and unsatisfactory. Confused reports have been in circulation of the assassination of Heera Sing, and afterwards of Golab Sing.

The latest accounts from the Punjaub state that Heera Sing is "engaged in organising the army, and despatching the detachments to different parts of the country, especially towards Moultan; he is prepared to meet the British, should they oppose him, and is planning to withdraw the troops by particulars of the atrocities which they would commit should they come to Lahore, especially that of killing cows." The present Government, whether strong or weak, appears to be dreadfully afraid of the bodies of a British invasion.

Lord Ellenborough has, at all events, done well to be prepared. The large army to which we have referred, as proposed to be assembled on the Sciklı frontier, will consist, it is said, of 30,000 men, infantry and cavalry, with some fifty or sixty pieces of artillery. Should the army on the Sciklı frontier—which is to be styled the "Army of the North"—and the "Army of Exercise" both assemble, the force at command will be sufficient to make the Punjaub with perfect ease.

AFFGHANISTAN

Some very important intelligence has been received from Cabul; Dost Mahomed would seem to be tottering on his throne, and it would not be surprising if new wars before long to arrive of his downfall. A full chief, named Mahbu Shahdel Khan, having boldly refused allegiance, the inhabitants of Logur, and other districts adjacent, immediately followed his authority at defiance, which was no sooner done than their example was followed by nearly all the tribes of the neighbourhood of Cabul. Thus the sources whence a considerable portion of the revenue of the country was derived were suddenly closed; and the Dost found himself unable to pay the troops he was organising The latter, seeing little prospect of obtaining the amount due to them, left his service; and at the date of the last accounts, he had but little more than 3000 horse and foot at his disposal. Meanwhile, his constant and most oppressive exactions had incensed the principal chiefs at Cabul against him, and a conspiracy had been formed, and an insurrection effected his assassination, which, however, proved unsuccessful. Ukbar Khan had for some time been on bad terms with his father, owing to the overtures which the Dost had made for the friendship of the British Government—a course of proceeding which by no means pleased Ukbar Khan With a view of preventing the proposed mission of Hyder Khan to India, he has contrived to have him sent to Ghuznee. Sultur Jung has arrived at Candahar, and the Dost, who views his presence with jealousy, proposes sending him to his family at Lahore. Dost Mahomed is also represented as being jealous of the increasing power and influence of Ukbar Khan; and is even reported to have "organised a system to observe his movements." In the hope of improving his position with the Sirdars, he has given one of his daughters in marriage to Rhumshoodeen Khan; but it scarcely seems likely that he will, by this means, succeed in overcoming the strong aversion to his rule which is unquestionably beginning to be on all hands experienced.

It is possible enough there may have been some exaggeration in the accounts received; indeed, we have reason to believe that they cannot be strictly depended on; and in the present case it is difficult to reconcile the above state of affairs with reports which have prevailed that the Dost meditates the seizure of Peshawur, intends to proceed to Candahar, &c.

SCINDE

There is little news from Scinde. The province is perfectly quiet, and no military movements of consequence have taken place. The season has been very sickly, and the troops (Bengal) at Sukkur and Shikarpore have, in particular, severely suffered

In a despatch, by the last accounts, that an attack on our troops is apprehended from the hill tribes and Moultanees, and that a reinforcement has, in consequence, been despatched from Sukkur to Shikarpore. It was reported, some time since, that Sheer Mahomed Khan had left Hyderabad for the purpose of collecting aid to expel us from the country; and, it must be confessed, this looks something like a practical confirmation of the intelligence.

The piece property captured at Meanee, after the battle, was brought down in the same vessel with Sheer Mahomed. It is valued at seventy lacks of rupees (£700,000). Rumours are still current in Scinde that it is the intention of the Government to restore it to him.

THE NIZAM'S COUNTRY.

From intelligence recently received, it appears probable that a valuable slice of the territory of his Highness the Nizam Nasir-ud-Dowlah will, ere long, be added to our dominions. His Highness is in considerable difficulties, and has asked the Governor-General to make him a loan of two crores of rupees; and this, it is believed, will be done, but that Government will take payment in territory, and the valley of Heerar is talked of as likely to be ceded.

It was expected that the intelligence of the Sciklı revolution would have induced Lord Ellenborough to proceed to the north west province; but his lordship still remains at Calcutta (or rather Barrackpore), and the opinion gains ground, that his stay is owing to the nature of the instructions understood to have been received by him some time ago from the home authorities, relative to the inexpediency of a separation from his council.

CHINA.

Our news from the Celestial Empire extends to the 28th of August, from Macao. It is, comparatively, of little importance. Little business has of late been done at Canton, owing to the unsettling the new arrangements; and this is said to be owing, in a great measure, to the conduct of the Hong merchants, who, naturally dissatisfied with changes which have struck a death-blow to their lucrative monopoly, and further incensed by an unjust claim preferred on behalf of the Government of Pekin, for a sum of four millions of dollars, which, it is alleged, they bound themselves to pay when Canton was ransomed, they have positively refused, either to enter into new bonds, or transact business, or afford facilities to others who are willing to do so. Hopes, however, were entertained, at the date of the last advices, that a compromise would be effected. The report of Kiang, the officer appointed to inquire into the circumstances of the massacre of the crews of the Anne and the Nerbudda, has been published by Sir Henry Pottinger, accompanied by a translation from the Pekin Gazette, containing the "imperial commands" relative to the offenders. "Kiang's report," says the Canton Courier, "fully confirms the original statement, as to the cold-blooded butchery of the unhappy crews of the Anne and Nerbudda; the utter falsity of the representation made to the Emperor by the officers of Formosa, that the victims of the assembly had landed with hostile intentions, and been vanquished in battle by the troops of the territory they invaded. This was communicated to them, confessed their guilt, and submitted in silence to the Emperor's behests. The extract from the Pekin Gazette, published along with the report of Kiang, orders that Tshungsa and Yaou-yung should be deprived of their rank, and handed over to the Board of Punishments; and that the officers and others who were rewarded for exerting themselves in the imaginary conflict with the foreigners, together with all the civil and military functionaries who had been promoted and rewarded for their diligence, should be deprived of the honours thus fraudulently obtained."

Sir Henry Pottinger had arrived at MACAO, where he proposed to stay for a few days.

SURREY SESSIONS.

On Tuesday the usual report of the state of the various prisons in the county, viz Horsemonger-lane Gaol, Brixton House of Correction, Guildford House of Correction, and Kingston House of Correction, was laid before the Court, and signed by the Chairman. There was no peculiar feature in it deserving of remark.

POLICE.

GUILDHALL.—On Thursday, John Fitch and James Jewell, porters to Messrs Morson and Morgan, wholesale stationers, Farringdon-street, were charged with stealing fourteen quires of outside folio post paper and 56lbs. of wrappers; and George and Job Palmer, stationers, in Cooper's-row, Tower-hill, were charged with receiving the same. Fitch was discharged and the others committed for trial.

Edward Moore and Henry Clare, two persons of respectable appearance, who had been charged with Mr. Alderman Gibbs, the gardevinier, with stealing a purse to., but he could not do it, and the summons was at once dismissed, the prisoner being perfectly justified in administering the "punishment" he had done to the officer for his illegal conduct in arresting him without authority.

The Liverpool Albion states that the Lord Mayor of York has ordered the police of that city to apprehend all boys or others guilty of whistling in the streets.

EPITOME OF NEWS.

The School of Design at Somerset House has established a class for the instruction of females in wood engraving. It is already well attended, and has added another to the very limited opportunities for the occupation of female talent which exist in this country.

A fowling-piece, or gun of any other description, cannot legally be exported from England to Ireland without a license from the Privy Council, the fee on which amounts to £2 12s. 6d.

The Provisional Government of Hayti has sent an agent to England to endeavour to form companies for working the mines and clearing the forests of that country.

His Grace the Duke of Northumberland has contributed £50 towards the purpose of establishing a police to protect the salmon fisheries of the river Tweed from the depredations of poachers during the close time of salmon.

The Marchioness of Waterford has purchased three entire cargoes of coal for Christmas distribution, gratis, amongst the poor on the noble lord's estate at Curraghmore.

We understand that the Rev. J. E. Cox, M.A., of Southtown, Great Yarmouth, is mostones as one of the candidates for the preachership of Lincoln's Inn, about to be vacated by the elevation of Archdeacon Lonsdale to the episcopal bench.

One of the beautiful horses sent out to Lisbon in the Pasha, a month ago, as a present from our Queen to her Majesty of Portugal, died within a few days after landing at Lisbon.

On Saturday no fewer than 16 vessels were entered inwards at the Custom House from St. Petersburg; 2 from Riga, and 1 from Memel. Their cargoes consist of tallow, flax, hemp, &c.

Lieutenant General Sir Peregrine Maitland has been appointed Governor of the Cape of Good Hope, in place of Sir G. Napier.

During the week ending Nov. 24, the number of persons passing into or leaving France for and from England were—at Boulogne, 925; at Calais, 247 total, 1172

The Augsburg Gazette states that the Duke de Bordeaux was refused the hand of the Neapolitan Princess who is about to be married to the Duke d'Aumale

The Macclesfield branch of the Manchester and Birmingham Railway is to leave the main line near the Cheadle station, and to terminate near Beech hill in Macclesfield.

The recruiting department at Chatham is proceeding with the greatest activity: almost every day batches of recruits are pouring into the town

At the Chester Cheese Fair, on Wednesday week last upwards of 800 tons were piled for sale, about a third of which went back unsold. The show was very fine, and at a reduction of 5s. to 5s. per cwt from the last fair. Prices ruled generally from 45s. to 60s.

It is reported that a proposed railway between Gravesend and Chatham is favourably regarded by Government. The route is not on the banks of the Canal, as was once intended

Large quantities of foreign timber have been lately received at Chatham, and a survey is daily expected to be given on the quantity of several thousand loads of British oak, and these circumstances, together with the recent demand for shipwrights, look somewhat warlike.

On Tuesday an insolvent named Mary Smith made her appearance in the court at Portugal-street. She is about 80 years of age.

The Veloce French steamer (the very same which ran down the Lizard) has been fired into by the castles of the Dardanelles, for attempting to pass without a firman. One shot touched her, but caused no material injury. No doubt this will be another insult to be avenged

The regulation for the admission of boys, as limited number of pursers, and for the increase of the half-pay of officers of that rank, has at length been issued. The arrangement is to be retrospective, and to take effect from the first of July last.

We believe that negotiations are now going on, which are likely to come to a satisfactory conclusion, for a marriage between a Neapolitan Prince and Queen Isabella of Spain.

Mr. Macgregor, British Consul at Elsineur, has been appointed by Government to the post of Consul-General in China, and in a few weeks will arrive in London, to proceed to Canton.

A party of nine Algonquin Indians, from the wilds of North America, have just arrived in London, from the north-eastern shore of Lake Huron, in the vicinity of the Georgian Bay.

W. Thompson, Esq., M.P. for Westmoreland, has been created a Knight of the Imperial Order of the Rose, by the Emperor of Brazil. The honorable member is scant of the Imperial Government for Europe.

We are given to understand that the privilege of late years granted to soldiers, of purchasing their discharges, has been suspended in the corps serving in Ireland, in consequence of the demand for the services of every available soldier in that country.

A few days ago, eight living specimens of the falcon arrived in Newcastle from Iceland, and are at present in the possession of Mr. Proctor of Durham, through whose instrumentality they were obtained. It is said they are for his Grace the Duke of Leeds, and are intended to be trained for the purpose of hawking.

The Right Hon. Lord Kenyon has subscribed £20, and the Hon. John Stuart Wortley £5, towards the fund now being raised for the liberation of Mr. Gutzlaff.

Mr. Anson has announced to the Rev. Thomas Page that her Majesty Queen Victoria intends to subscribe £50 towards the Memorial to Albert Zinc, towards the scheme nearly completed, in connection with Christ Church, Virginia Water, Egham.

There is a rumour amongst the profession that the Government contemplates a modification of the criminal law, and also that one of the earliest announcements of the next session of Parliament will be a bill for the abolition of appeals in settlement cases.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE, FRIDAY.—More than an average supply of English wheat has been received up to our market this week, owing to which, and the absence of the principal buyers, the demand for that article was very inactive, at barely Monday's quotations. Foreign wheat was also a dull sale, and the turn lower. Upwards of 13,000 quarters of barley have come to hand since our last, which produced a heavy inquiry, yet the rates were not lower. The malt trade was inactive, at previous rates. Although the supply of oats was small the trade with that article, on account of most of the dealers being well in stock, was heavy. Beans, peas, and flour, at the last quotations

ARRIVALS.—English Wheat, 5770; Barley, 12310. Oats, 8060 quarters. Irish Oats 4780 quarters. Foreign: Wheat, 2170: Oats, 1150 quarters. Flour 6892 sacks; Malt, 4280 quarters.

English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 42s to 44s; ditto white, 45s to 48s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 42s to 45s; ditto, white, 44s to 47s; rye, 32s to 33s; grinding barley, 25s to 26s; malting, 28s to 30s; malting, 31s to 33s; Lincoln and Norfolk malt, 56s to 62s; brown oats, 20s to 24s, Kingston and Ware, 26s to 28s; Chevalier, 28s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feed oats, 17s to 21s; potato ditto, 19s to 23s; Youghal and Cork, black, 17s to 18s; ditto white, 19s to 20s; tick beans, new, 34s to 36s, ditto, old, 34s to 38s; grey peas, 36s to 38s; maple, 35s to 36s; white, 36s to 38s; harlers, 32s to 37s per quarter Town and country, 6s to 42s; Suffolk, 40s to 46s; Scotch and Yorkshire, 36s to 38s per 5 cwt. Foreign.—Free wheat, 50s to 56s. Dantzig, red, 50s to 52s; white, 52s to 54s. In Bond: Barley, 20s; oats, new, 15s to 17s; ditto old, 16s to 16s 6d; beans, 32s to 36s, peas, 32s to 37s per quarter. Flour, America, 25s to 26s; Baltic, 22s per barrel.

The Seed Trade.—Canary seed very heavy on sale, at barely late rates, but in most other kinds of seeds, a fair amount of business is doing.

Flour.—The prices of wheaten bread in the metropolis are from 8½d to 9d; of household ditto, 7d to 8d per 4lb loaf

Imported Stocks in granary.—Wheat, 51s 1d; barley, 31s 8d; oats, 19s 0d; rye, 30s 7d; beans, 31s 10d; peas, 33s 6d.

Duties on Foreign Corn.—Wheat, 19s; barley, 7s; oats, 5s; rye, 10s 6d; beans, 10s 6d; peas, 5s 6d.

Tea.—Two public sales of tea have been held this week, and at which the biddings have been spiritedless, at a decline in the value of a quarter of a penny per lb, and most other kinds of 2d per lb. The stock, in London, is now nearly 4,400,000lbs larger than at the corresponding period in 1842

Sugar.—For good and fine sugars there has been a steady demand, at full prices, but all other descriptions have sold on somewhat easier terms.

Molasses.—The article is very dull, and prices are on the decline.

Coffee.—Although the market for coffee is heavy, holders remain firm, and full quotations are still realized.

Rice.—The article is very dull, but we have no alteration to notice in its value.

Spices.—Pimento is declined 2s per cwt, all other kinds of oil are in good sale, but not cheaper.

Provisions.—Irish butter is still very little required for, and prices have a downward tendency. The supply of foreign butter is larger, and meets a slow inquiry, at from 80s to 90s for the best Friesland. In the bacon market, the rates are drooping. Lard remains dull of sale, at reduced prices. Hams are rather heavy; but in all other kinds of provisions next to nothing is doing.

Tallow.—The market is inactive. Fine yellow candle on the spot is selling at 41s 9d to 42s; and for spring delivery, 42s 3d to 42s 9d

Coals.—Chester Main, 15s 9d. New Tanfield, 14s; Townley, 14s 6d; Wylam, 15s 6d; Braddyll's Hetton, 20s; Lambton, 20s; Caradon, 20s; Adelaide, 19s 3d per ton.

Hops.—We have not quite so much business passing here as during the past three weeks, nevertheless the demand is steady, at fully previous rates. Prices per pocket:—Weald of Kent, 48s 3d to 56s 0d; Mid Kent, 48s 0d to 52s 0d; East Kent, 46s 4d to 47; Choice, 48s to 50s 0d; Sussex, 45s 6d to 48s 0d, Yearling Kents, 36s to 42s 0d, ditto Sussex, 36s 4d to 40s 0d, Farnham's, 1843, 42s to 46s 0d.

Wool.—About 1600 packages of wool have reached the port of London this week. By private contract only a moderate business is doing, at late rates.

Provisions.—Though the supply of potatoes is large, the trade ruled steady, at prices varying from 40s. to 70s per ton

Smithfield.—Notwithstanding the near approach of the great Christmas market, which will be held here on Monday next, the number of beasts on offer this morning were by no means numerous, and, comparatively speaking, of middling time of year quality, though there were some exceedingly fine Scots and Herefords amongst them. The attendance of buyers being small, the beef trade was heavy, and Monday's quotations were barely supported. Sheep were again in scanty supply, yet the sale for them, if we except that for the best Old Downs was in a sluggish state at previous currencies. Although the supply of calves was large, the veal trade was active, at an advance of 2d per 8lb. In pigs the best sorts was dear at full quotations. Much sows were held at from 40s to 42s 0d each. Per 8lbs. to sink the offal.—Coarse and inferior beasts, 2s 8d to 3s 8d; second quality ditto, 3s 10d to 4s 4d, prime large oxen, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; prime Scots, &c., 3s 10d to 4s 0d, coarse and inferior sheep, 3s 10d to 4s 2d; second quality ditto, 4s 4d to 4s 6d, prime coarse woolled sheep, 3s 8d to 3s 10d; prime Southdowns ditto, 4s 0d to 4s 4d, large coarse calves, 3s 4d to 4s 0d, prime small ditto, 4s 2d to 4s 6d; large hogs 3s 2d to 3s 10d, small porkers, 4s 0d to 4s 2d; suckling calves, 18s to 28s; quarter old store pigs, 15s to 17s each Beasts, 538; cows, 124; sheep, 3800; calves, 204; pigs, 340.

Newgate and Leadenhall.—Prime beef and mutton in steady demand at full prices but otherwise the trade ruled dull.—Per 8lbs. by the carcass—Inferior beef, 2s 4d to 2s 8d; middling ditto, 2s 8d to 3s 0d; prime ditto, 3s 2d to 3s 4d; ditto small ditto, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; large pork, 3s 0d to 3s 6d, inferior mutton, 2s 8d to 3s 0d; middling ditto, 3s 0d to 3s 8d, prime ditto, 3s10d to 4s 0d; veal, 3s 0d to 4s 4d; small pork, 3s 8d to 4s 0d.

ROBERT HERBERT.

COMMERCE AND MONEY

The information received in the course of this week from the manufacturing districts continues to be perfectly satisfactory. At this time of the year the demand for goods for home consumption is always restricted in its amount; but with the exception of all discrepancies of a small and the export orders so considerable, that prices continue to be well supported and, what is far more important, the manufacturing labourers are kept in full employment. The value of our export trade, therefore, exceeds that of our foreign imports, and the consequence, last fortnight post day, on the Royal Exchange, was, a larger amount of bills drawn on foreign nations than the demand for them required, which produced a further improvement in the rates of the Foreign Exchanges. That money is increasing, in this country, in its amount, and great abundance of this necessary article has again appeared in the money market London in the course of this week. The interest to be obtained on the loans of it, and the late advance in the rates of discount, however, have brought numerous sellers to our last publication, for within the last quarter of a year an improvement of somewhere about 20 per cent. has occurred in the value of nearly all descriptions of goods, and likewise in the raw material from which they are manufactured, and, consequently, therefore, a proportionately larger amount of money to represent them. The pressure of money, however, continues to influence the prices of the shares of most stock associations. The demand pressure for those of the Union Bank of London, although the quotation of them still remains at par. But it is amongst the dealers in railway shares that the influence of the present abundance of money is chiefly apparent. An active demand for all descriptions of them is manifested, and the quotations have improved in the value of many of them. This is particularly the case with the Dover, Brighton, London and Birmingham, and Great Western shares, the advance in which is from £3 to £5 each. For the shares of the South Western, and also for those of the Paris and Rouen lines, increased purchases have also been witnessed, and the Midland, North Midland, and York and North Midland, similar observations are applicable. Confidence is thus gaining ground in the soundness of these undertakings, in which eighty millions sterling are already embarked, and a still larger field for similar investment is gradually presenting itself for the profitable employment of British capital.

Not much activity has existed during the week on the foreign Stock Exchange, and although, probably, the usual amount of business may have been transacted in Foreign Securities, still it has not been exceeded by much; interest on the part of the public. The unsettled state of Spain, and some doubts being entertained of the regular payment of the next dividend, are injuring Spanish credit;—if the thing be possible—and causes much business in the market for that bonds. For Greek bonds, the active demand continues, and at about 12 per the overdue Coupons. For the prices of Foreign Securities generally, we refer in our quotations.

On the English Stock Exchange no extensive business has been done throughout the week, and yet prices of all descriptions of Funded Stock have been well supported. Consols for the 1st January opening have been sold at 86¾ less the January dividend, making their present value 87. Exchequer Bills and India Bonds are in great demand, and an advance of 4s. on their previous high prices has been submitted to by purchasers.

Towards the conclusion of the week's operations on the English Stock Exchange, less activity prevailed than at its commencement, and Consols fell to a quotation of 86¾ sellers 3 per cent, under our quotation of them. This alteration, however, was not occasioned by any political news; but is only one of those slight reactions to which all pecuniary transactions are invariably subjected. Money was sufficiently abundant at the rate of 2 per Cent., and our quotations for all other descriptions of British Securities were fairly maintained. Mexican Bonds, however, have been one per cent. in consequence of the receipt of money towards payment of the dividends, by the West India steam-packet Thames. This shows that the Mexican Government, at all events, intend not to repudiate their national pecuniary engagements

BRITISH FUNDS.—3 per Cent Consols, shut; 3 per Cent Reduced, 94¾ to 95; Bank Stock, 172 to 173; India Stock, 273 to 274; 3½ per Cents, Reduced, 103¼; New 3½ per Cents, 103¼; 12 13 16; India Bonds, 7s premium; Exchequer Bills, 56s. to 60s pm.; Consols for Account, ex. the January Dividend, 86¾; London and Westminster Bank, 22½; United Bank of London, 10; London Joint Stock Bank, 12½; National Bank of Ireland, 14¾.

FOREIGN BONDS AND STOCK.—Austrian Bonds, 5, 114 to 115; Belgian, 105¼ to 106; Brazilian, 7-8ths; Chilean, 101; Colombian 12 ex. Venezuela, 10 per Cent., 4 ex. dit.; Dutch 5 per Cents, 100; Buenos Ayres Bonds, 58 to 59; Peruvian, 5 per Cents, 75 ex. Coupons Converted, 44; Spanish Fives, 21¼ to 21; Spanish Threes, 13¼ to 13¾; Mexican Bonds, 19¾; Russian, 113 to 116; Danish, 86 to 87; Greek ex. the Coupons, 13; Venezuela, 38.

SHARES IN JOINT STOCK AND OTHER COMPANIES.—Birmingham and Derby, 95 to 97; Birmingham and Gloucester, 60 to 61; Bristol and Exeter, 63 to 64½; Eastern Counties, 8¾; Great Western, 30 premium; Hull and Selby, 33 to 34; Brighton, 42 to 43; Blackwall, 5½; Greenwich, 3½; Birmingham and London, 220 to 222; South Western, 89 to 90; Croydon, 19½; Manchester and Leeds, 31 premium; Manchester and Bormingham, 8 to 9; Midland Counties, 45 to 46; Newcastle and Darlington, 12 premium; North Midland, 38 to 39; Northern and Eastern, 9 premium; Paris and Rouen, 29 to 30; Rouen and Havre, 12½; Sambre and Meuse, 2½; South Eastern and Dover, 23 to 24; York and North Midland, 17 to 18, ex. New.

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, DEC. 5.

WAR OFFICE, DEC. 5.—1st Dragoon Guards: H. G Sutton, to be Cornet, vice Child.—2d Lieut. Jackson Vaines Tuthill to be Captain, vice Elliott; Lieut. C. W. Calvert, to be Lieutenant, vice Lord Aberdeen; Cornet N. R. Robinus, to be Lieutenant, vice Tuthill; 11th. Lieut. Shoto, J. Lord Aberdeen, to be Lieutenant, vice Hon. Cornet W. H. Sandes to be Lieutenant, vice B. Cave; W. Foster to be Cornet, vice Sandes.—1st Foot Guards: Dame to be Lieutenant-Colonel vice Mullen; Captain and Lieutenant Hon. Wm. Montagu Douglas Scott to be Major, vice Deane; Lieut. H. Draper Neville to be Captain, vice Montgomery; Ensign W Reader to be Lieutenant, vice Neville; H. Allen Murray Deane to be Ensign, vice Reader 3d.—Lieut. J. Grey Balfour to be Lieutenant, vice Cunningham.—4th. Second Lieut. W Knotsford Gordon to be First Lieutenant vice Wagner.—22nd Lieut. J. C. Conolly to be Lieutenant, vice Calvert.—27th: C. Adrian Wolfe Murray to be Captain, vice Hon. Wm. Murray.—32nd: Ensign J. E. T. Quayle to be Lieutenant, vice Knollys; Ensign W. R. Evans; Cadet P. A. Quartley to be Ensign, vice Williamson.—41st: Lieut. J Madden to be Lieutenant, vice J. Campbell.—44th: Assist-Surg. Wm. Wilkinson to be Surgeon, vice Hall.—60th. Staff-Surg. of the Second Class A. H. Cowen to be Surgeon, vice Hall.—67th: Lieut. C. B Hague to be Captain, vice Prower; Ensign R. E. W. Prower to be Lieutenant, vice Hague; R. C Peel to be Ensign, vice Wood.—83rd: Capt. F. J. E. Villiers to be Captain, vice A. C Ramsay.—97th: Lieut. W. Reed to be Lieutenant, vice Gordon; Ensign Hon. Wm. Cornwallis Clerihew, M.D., to be Surgeon, vice G. Griffin.—98rd: W. G. B. Campbell to be Ensign, vice Gordon.

Ceylon Rifles.—Lieut. R. E. F. Brereton to be Lieutenant, vice Brett.

ROYAL MILITARY COLLEGE.—Assist.-Surg. M. Neale, M.D., to be Assistant-Surgeon, vice Stewart.

HOSPITAL STAFF.—Staff Assist. Surg. T. R. James, M.D., to be Staff Surgeon of the Second Class, vice Cowen.

MEMORANDUM.—The exchange between Lieut. Campbell, of the 4th Foot, and Lieut. Blackall, of the 49th Foot, on the 9th of November, 1843, has been cancelled.

BANKRUPTCIES SUPERSEDED.—EDWARD HART, Wolverhampton, Staffordshire, spectacle maker. JOHN WOOD, Coleman-street, City, tobacconist.

BANKRUPTS.—M. ALLEN, dealer in patent wood carving, Henrietta street, Covent-garden.—E. T. GORE, textile dresser, Chesterfield, Derbyshire.—J. L. HEATHCOTE, shipowner, Abchurch-lane, London.—R. FURBY, baker, Drayton, Berkshire.—H. TREGENT, merchant, Bassinghall street, City.—J. GIBSON, grocer, Kirton-in-Lindsey.—R. S. DUFFIELD, druggist, Birmingham.—W SHAW, saddler, Stafford.—E. B. BAYLEY, stuff printer, Pendleton, Lancashire.—C. E. SHORT, calico printer, Woodend, Cheshire.

FRIDAY, DEC. 8

MEMBER RETURNED TO SERVE IN THE PRESENT PARLIAMENT.

CROWN OFFICE, DEC. 8.—COUNTY OF KILKENNY.—Pierce Somerset Butler, of Lodge-Park, in the county of Kilkenny, Esq., in the room of Edmund Wyse, Esq., deceased.

BANKRUPTS.—H CONGREVE, dealer in patent medicine, Batter's terrace, Peckham. W. COX, money-scrivener, Daventry, Northamptonshire.—T. HAUGH, silk manufacturer, Macclesfield.—J. Rothwell-green.—C. BOND, bookbinder, King William-street, St. Martin-le-Grand.—R. REYNOLDS, silk printer, Phœnix bridge, Mitcham.—A. WALES, wood splitter, Spring-street, Paddington.—J. and J. PINNOCK, engravers, Bishopsgate-street.—J. paper manufacturer, Horsforth, Yorkshire.—T. BENTLEY, cloth manufacturer, Hawden, Yorkshire.—J. HAYES, innkeeper, Taunton.—J. DYSON, saycht manufacturer, Sheffield

BIRTHS

At Clarence-terrace, Regent's-park, the wife of George Reid, Esq., of a daughter.—At Bridesham, the wife of Mayow Wynell Adams, Esq., of a daughter.—The lady of Dempster Heming, Esq., of Calderwell Hall, of a son.—At Sandy, the lady of Colonel Thynne, Esq., late M.P. for Bath, of a daughter.—Viscountess Jocelyn, of a daughter.—At Hatfield, the Hon. and Rev. Robert Harbord Gascoyne Cecil, of a son.—At Spring Garden Villa, Teignmouth, Devon, the lady of Edward Daring Walker, Esq., M.D., of a son.—At Goldings, Essingoake, the lady of F. X. Apletree, Esq., of a daughter.—At St. Helier's, Derby, the lady of Edward Strutt, Esq., M.P., of a son.—At Longwood, Hants, the Countess of Northesk, of a son and heir.

MARRIAGES.

At the Parish Church, Prestbury, by the Rev. William Wilson, M.A., incumbent of St. James's, Macclesfield, and Domestic Chaplain to the Right Hon. the Earl of Courtown, to Margaret Jane, eldest daughter of the late Philip Antrobus, Esq., of Tymmer Heath, in the county of Berks, and niece to Sir Kingsmill Jervis, Bart., of Mr. Dixon's Academy, Macclesfield, only daughter of the late Mr. Charles Walker, of Bodymoor Green House, Kingsbury.—At St. Peter's Church, Hammersmith, Charles Cecil Cave, Esq., Commander R.N., to Charlotte, relict of Lieut.-Colonel Crockshank, K.H., of Bath, and daughter of the Rev. Charles Hyde Wollaston, of Chiswick.—At Somerby, Lincolnshire, Henry B. Brereton, Esq., of Chatham, to Rosina, daughter of Thomas Hills, Esq., R.N., of Holden-hill, Sussex.—At Lowestoft, Sir C. Latrender, Bart., to Elizabeth, daughter of John Dereteut, Esq.—At Hatfield, the Rev. Arthur Annesley Gascoyne Cecil Dudley Heath, Herts, to Frances Catherine, youngest daughter of John Parnther, Esq., of Hatfield.—The Ven. James Saunt, Archdeacon of Dromore, eldest son of the late Rev. Sankey of Dromore, to Emma, daughter of the Rev. R. E. Warburton, of Norley-bank, Chester.—At Montreal, the Rev. Henry Hascal, Missionary of Sherbrooke, to Kingsmill Jervis, daughter of the late James Wilkinson, Esq., of Hanover-square, Macdonald Bourchier, Esq., R.N., to Mary, daughter of the late Rear-Admiral Hancock.—Henry Tweedy, Esq., to Elizabeth, daughter of Lieut.-General Owen, Mansion-house, Dublin.—At Somerby, Lincolnshire, George T. L. Hansard, of Mortimer-street, Cavendish-square, to Mary Frances Constantia, the youngest daughter of Geo. B. G. Kelly, of Acton House, county of Middlesex, Esq.

DEATHS.

At Donhead, Wilts, Sarah, widow of the late William Burton, Esq., of Wykin Hall, Leicestershire.—Vincent Dowling, Esq., barrister-at-law, of Bedford-row, Holborn, and of Fitzwilliam buildings, Clydell Trouts, aged 57.—At his house, in Devonshire place, in his 84th year, General Edward Normoton, Colonel of the 15th Regiment Light Infantry, and Governor of Chester.—At Pall Mall, James Henry Burstow, Esq., late of the Barrack Department, Tower, in the 82nd year of his age.—In Anglesea-place, Southampton, Robert Walmsley, Esq., aged 82.—At his house, at Cannon's Grove, near Taunton, in the 47th year of his age, V. Stuckey Reynolds, Esq., a magistrate for the county of Somerset.—At Stamford Hill, Jane, relict of the late Joshua Heb-on, Esq., in the 56th year of her age.—The Rev. Thomas Moss, Vicar of Walton-on-the-Hill, near Liverpool.—Penelope Dowager Lady Clarina, relict of Major-General Lord Clarina.—At Pellyscoon, Denbighshire, the residence of her daughter, Lady Erskine, Mary, relict of the Rev. Hugh Williams, of Plasiss, Conway, in her 83rd year.—Lieut. Colonel Williamson, Commandant of the Royal Military Asylum, at Chelsea, and formerly of the 70th Regiment.—At 35, Lower Islington Terrace, London, Mr. John Jameson, of the Money Order Office, General Post-office.

THE QUEEN'S VISIT TO THE MIDLAND COUNTIES.

In our journal of last week, we chronicled the royal progress to Wednesday morning; when our record left her Majesty and the Prince Consort in the enjoyment of the splendid hospitality of Drayton Manor.

On Thursday, her Majesty breakfasted at half-past eight o'clock. At half-past nine her Majesty and the Prince went out to walk on the terrace and in the grounds. They also proceeded to inspect the farmyard and dairy. Towards eleven o'clock, his Royal Highness, attended by Mr. Anson and the Earl of Jersey, accompanied by the Duke of Buccleuch and Sir Robert Peel, went out to shoot. The Prince first went in a boat on the water, duck shooting, and shot two ducks. He then went to cover shooting, and killed 60 pheasants, 25 hares, 8 rabbits, and 1 woodcock. About 200 head of game were killed by the whole party

At the half-past one o'clock the Prince returned, when the royal party partook of lunch. At a few minutes after two o'clock her Majesty and Prince Albert, attended by their suites, and accompanied by the Duke of Wellington, Sir Robert Peel, and some of the most distinguished guests, left Drayton Manor for Lichfield.

HER MAJESTY'S VISIT TO LICHFIELD.

The inhabitants of Lichfield were not aware, until about noon on Wednesday, that her Majesty intended to visit their city and cathedral on the following day. Every arrangement, however, which could be devised to give her Majesty a loyal and enthusiastic reception was promptly determined upon.

At an exceedingly early hour on Thursday morning, workmen and others were busily engaged in the erection of four triumphal arches, and the decoration of the houses in the streets through which her Majesty would pass to the cathedral.

Towards noon the city assumed a most beautiful appearance. Looking up Bird-street the appearance presented was that of an elegant avenue, the flags, banners, garlands, and evergreens, in endless variety, with which every house was decked, combined with the triumphal arches in the distance, contributing to produce this splendid effect. The first triumphal arch was erected at the entrance of the city, on the Tamworth road. It was an imitation of stone-work, and was profusely ornamented with evergreens, flags, and banners. On one side was emblazoned, in large characters, the inscription "United for the good of the people;" on the reverse, "God prosper the Union." There were two other arches, bearing transparencies, which were illuminated before her Majesty's return. The fourth grand triumphal arch was erected in the Close, a short distance from the entrance to the cathedral. It was covered with evergreens to an immense height in the centre, and was adorned with numerous flags. Over the centre of the arch was a painting, representing the crown, bible, and sceptre on a cushion, with the words "Welcome Victoria" inscribed above. The reverse bore the same inscription, with the addition of the letters V.R. This arch is engraved upon the next page.

Towards one o'clock, a numerous cavalcade proceeded to the entrance of the city: the procession included most of the carriages of the neighbouring gentry. The Mayor (T. G. Lomax, Esq.), whose courtesy and character we have much pleasure in acknowledging, and the High Sheriff of the city occupied a grand state carriage, having the city arms emblazoned on the panels, and drawn by four greys. At about a quarter past three o'clock, the royal party arrived at the first triumphal arch, already described; and, having halted, a platform prepared for the occasion, the Mayor presented the Queen, according to custom, with the mace, upon a crimson velvet cushion; when, her Majesty first addressed the Mayor, and said:—"Mr. Mayor, I receive with pleasure this respectable."

The Mayor: "May it please your Majesty to accept our sincere and hearty welcome to our ancient and loyal city. I humbly offer to your Majesty this mace, an emblem of my office, presented to the city by King Charles the Second." [Her Majesty was heard to say, "How very handsome they are—they are beautiful."] I return it to your Majesty, in acknowledgment of my dutiful deference to your Majesty's royal prerogative and authority."

Her Majesty, having touched the mace three several times, most graciously bowed, and returned it to the Mayor; and then said, "I recollect having seen you before;" to which the Mayor replied, "I had the honour of addressing our Majesty on a former visit to this city." (This alludes to the occasion of her Majesty's visit in 1832; in which year Mr. Lomax was then the High Bailiff, as he is now the Mayor.) This interesting ceremonial is represented in the first engraving on the next page.

The whole cavalcade passed by the Mayor, Sheriff, and other members of the Corporation, then moved onwards. Her Majesty's reception was of the most cordial and enthusiastic description. The Duke of Wellington and Sir Robert Peel were also loudly cheered. The bells of the cathedral and other churches rang right merrily.

The Lichfield troop of Yeomanry awaited the arrival of her Majesty at the Close, where also the entire royal band was stationed, and when the carriages at the entrance of the cathedral to the Bishop's Palace, and Chapter House, and followed by Sir Robert and Lady Peel, the Duke of Wellington, and other distinguished visitors, her Majesty proceeded to inspect the monument to Bishop Hyder; and then walked through the choir, and viewed with great interest that admirable production of Chantrey's chisel—the Sleeping Children. Having viewed the other monuments, remarkable for their antiquity or beauty, her Majesty visited the Cathedral Library, which was lighted up, and there inspected several ancient manuscripts and books. During her Majesty's stay within the cathedral, the Mayor of Lichfield presented her and the Prince with a copy each of the history of Lichfield Cathedral, bound in royal purple satin, and elegantly gilt, laid on a crimson velvet cushion. Her Majesty and the Prince were pleased to accept the gift, for which they most graciously thanked the Mayor. The Vicars Choral, including Mr. Machin, were present, in antici-ation of the usual evening service being gone through; but owing, we suppose, to the lateness of the hour, her Majesty made no request on the subject; but the organ sent forth its sweetly solemn tones during the stay of the royal party.

Lichfield Cathedral, although it sustained considerable injury during the civil wars, and has suffered much from the influence of time and weather on a mouldering stone, is still grand and beautiful; the western front, shown in our engraving, is of noble design; it was originally very rich in tabernacled statues; three western portals are profusely enriched with sculpture; and the painted windows are of almost unequalled brilliancy. There are three spires, of which the central one rises to the height of 188 feet.

The Queen and Prince Albert departed from the cathedral about four o'clock. They returned by the same route as on their entrance, and reached Drayton Manor about half-past four.

In the evening there will long be rendered memorable in the annals of Lichfield, was concluded by a ball, at the Guildhall, in honour of her Majesty's visit.

Lichfield is celebrated in historical recollections as having been visited by very many of our English monarchs. In 1245, King Henry III. visited this city. In 1397, King Richard II. kept his Christmas in the Close. On the 15th August, 1485, the Earl of Richmond, afterwards King Henry VII. passed the night in his camp near Lichfield; and the next morning was joyfully received into the city. King James I. was at Lichfield in 1603 and 1624. In June, 1645 after the battle of Naseby, Charles I. retired to Lichfield, and slept in the Close. In 1661, the inhabitants formed themselves into a military association for the service of King Charles II. and defence of the city, under the command of Captain Anthony Dyott. On the 31st of August, 1687, King James II. came to Lichfield, and touched divers persons that had the evil in the cathedral. In June, 1690, King William passed through and slept at the Deanery. In 1745, this city was for a short time the head quarters of the Duke of Cumberland, who was advancing with the King's troops against the Pretender. Queen Anne sojourned here four July 30th to August 3d, 1754. In 1813 George IV. (when Prince of Wales) and the Duke of Clarence (afterwards William IV.) visited Lichfield on their way to

HER MAJESTY'S ENTRANCE INTO LICHFIELD—PRESENTATION OF THE MACE.

HER MAJESTY'S VISIT TO LICHFIELD CATHEDRAL.

Beaudesert. On the 26th October, 1832, her present beloved Majesty (then Princess Victoria) visited Lichfield, and attended service at the cathedral; and in November, 1839, her Majesty Queen Adelaide visited the cathedral amidst universal rejoicings.

Lichfield claims no inconsiderable distinction, in giving birth to several of the most illustrious in the biography of their country—The father of Camden; Elias Ashmole; Smalridge, the friend of Addison; Newton, the preacher; Dr. Johnson, the celebrated lexicographer, to whom a monument has lately been erected in the Market-place.

At the Free Grammar School (now, and for several years past, in disuse) many eminent men have received the rudiments of their education—viz., Addison, Gregory King, Wollaston, five judges, David Garrick, and Samuel Johnson.

The house where Dr. Johnson was born is still standing, and is an object of great curiosity to all strangers. (See the engraving.)

At Tamworth, on the previous evening, an ox was roasted whole in Lichfield-street; and on Thursday upwards of 2000 persons partook of roast beef and plum-pudding at Tamworth Castle, the Town-hall, and the National School-rooms. The dinner comprised upwards of 2000 pounds weight of beef, 600 pounds weight of plum pudding, 2250 quarts of ale, with bread and potatoes in great abundance.

The working classes of the villages of Fazeley, Wilnecote, Wigginton, and every hamlet in Tamworth parish, were also entertained with the above genuine old English fare.

The invitations to dinner this evening at Drayton Manor comprised, besides those who were Sir Robert Peel's guests for the period of her Majesty's stay, the Earl of Aylesford, the Earl of Dartmouth, Mr. Watts Russell and Mr. Adderley, the members for North Staffordshire; Captain A'Court, and Sir Francis Lawley.

THE DEPARTURE FOR CHATSWORTH.

On Friday morning her Majesty and Prince Albert took their departure from Drayton Manor, at twenty minutes past ten o'clock. The morning was beautifully fine. Her Majesty was escorted by the Yeomanry, preceded by Sir R. Peel's tenantry on horseback. Sir R. Peel himself, with the High Sheriff, and the sons of each, rode in front of the Royal carriage, which was also accompanied by the officers of the county constabulary. The children of Drayton Basset and Fazeley schools were drawn up in line in the park, and, as the Royal party passed, greeted her Majesty and her illustrious Consort with loyal acclamations. The Royal cortège proceeded through the village of Fazeley, the inhabitants of which had erected a triumphal arch, and garlanded their houses. In passing through Tamworth, on their way to the station, the Queen's carriage stopped at the last triumphal arch, to receive the farewell of the Mayor and Corporation. Her Majesty was received on the platform at the railway by Sir R. Peel, Earl Talbot, the High Sheriff, and Mr. Hatton.

BIRTHPLACE OF DR. JOHNSON, AT LICHFIELD.

Her Majesty, on taking leave of Lady Peel, who had accompanied her to the station, shook her cordially by the hand, as she also did Lady Peel's daughter. Her Majesty started by the special train for Derby, Chesterfield, and Chatsworth, at half-past eleven o'clock. Her Majesty wore a blue satin dress, and a crimson velvet pelisse.

The Duke of Wellington also left Drayton Manor on Friday morning.

The Queen Dowager and Prince Edward of Saxe Weimar also took their departure in the course of the day, for Gopsall Hall, the seat of Earl Howe, near Atherstone.

The Royal Standard waved from the top of the mansion at Drayton Manor during her Majesty's visit. Loyal addresses from the Mayor and Council of Lichfield, to her Majesty and Prince Albert, were presented by Sir Robert Peel, who, in a letter to the Mayor, has conveyed her Majesty's gracious approbation of the excellent arrangements made at Lichfield, as well as the very great satisfaction of her Majesty and the Prince at the demonstration of loyalty.

ARCH AT LICHFIELD, NEAR THE CATHEDRAL.

Amongst the flattering boasts to which some of the members of the Staffordshire Yeomanry give utterance, is an agreeable compliment said to have been paid by her Majesty to that corps, on the presentation of Major Majendie at Drayton Manor. Upon the gallant officer being presented as the Adjutant of the Queen's Royal Regiment of Staffordshire Yeomanry, her Majesty familiarly remarked, "Oh, I recollect, that is my own regiment."

At five minutes to eleven the train started from Tamworth, amidst the enthusiastic cheers of the crowd.

The road-side from Tamworth to Derby, and so on to Chesterfield, was at every point lined with spectators. The same enthusiasm which had previously attended her Majesty's presence was fully kept up on this occasion.

The distance to Burton, 13 miles, was performed in 13 minutes. There were crowds of people ranged on the road-side, flags were hoisted, and a party of the yeomanry were there to receive her. The cheering as the train shot by was very great.

At Willington there were similar demonstrations.

ARRIVAL OF HER MAJESTY AT THE DERBY RAILWAY STATION.

Derby station was reached at half-past eleven. This station has frequently been the subject of admiration, and it certainly afforded facilities for giving her Majesty a brilliant reception. Its vast area was crowded with well-dressed persons, and every place around presented a dense mass of human beings. Nothing could exceed the enthusiasm of their loyalty as her Majesty arrived and as she departed from the station.

A party of the militia, under the command of Captain Dixon, presented arms to her Majesty when the train stopped, the band playing the national anthem, and the out-pensioners, under the command of Captain Jones, fired a salute.

Independent altogether of the preparations at the station, the scene in the neighbourhood was really striking. Multitudes of people, who might have been numbered by thousands, crowded in masses upon the bridge and on the banks of the Derwent, clustered on the housetops, on the hedgerows, on the parapets of the bridges, and even climbed the trees. The shouting and cheering were deafening.

At Derby, the engine was changed, and during the time that necessarily elapsed the crowds in the station had the best opportunity of seeing the royal pair. At twenty minutes to twelve o'clock they again left Derby.

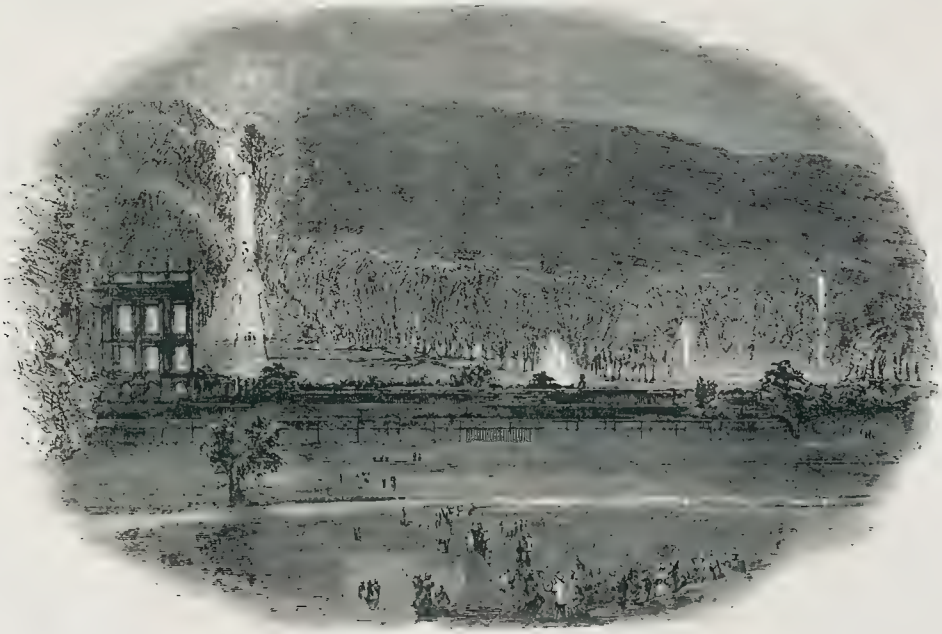
BRIDGE IN CHATSWORTH PARK.

The road from Tamworth had been through a very interesting country. Perhaps there is no part of England more thickly studded with the seats of wealthy proprietors. Between Tamworth and Burton the railroad runs by the seat of Captain A'Court, of Lady Wilmot Horton (of Catton Hall), and by Drakelow Hall, the seat of Captain Des Voeux. At a short distance past Burton is the beautiful spire of Repton Church (one of the best specimens of the old spires), which is 500 years old. Near Willington the rail passes through the property of Sir Francis Burdett, and at a short distance beyond Burton is Rolleston-hall, the seat of Sir Oswald Mosley, Bart., and about three miles from Derby is the seat of Sir Hugh Seymour Blane, "The Pastures," a beautiful place.

Belper was reached at eleven minutes to twelve o'clock. Here too a multitude of people had collected, who cheered most lustily just beyond Belper, at the mills of Messrs Strutt, on the banks of the Derwent, there were many people.

Ambergate station was crowded with anxious faces, but the train passed it with remarkable velocity.

At the Chesterfield station the assemblage of spectators was very great, and a large open space was kept in the front of it by a body of the Derbyshire yeomanry, and detachments of police. The platform at the station was covered with scarlet cloth, and a lofty awning, supported on cast iron pillars, was carried over it along the whole extent of the station-house. A number of orange, lemon, and other rare trees and exotics, were disposed very tastefully about the platform and the interior of the building. The Chairman of the Board of Directors of the North Midland Company, W. L. Newton, Esq., arrived in Chesterfield by the half-past ten o'clock train, from Derby, in order to receive her Majesty and the Prince. At five minutes to twelve o'clock the Duke of Devonshire arrived at the station in a carriage and four. Mr. W. Evans, M.P. for North Derbyshire, Hon. G. H. Cavendish, M.P., and a great number of the clergy and gentry connected with the immediate neighbourhood, were in the station-house at the time. The Mayor (Mr. T. Clarke), and the members of the Corporation, bearing white wands, arrived shortly after the Duke of Devonshire.



ILLUMINATION AT CHATSWORTH.

Precisely at twenty-four minutes past twelve, the train (which consisted of five carriages) stopped at the platform, where the Duke of Devonshire, with Mr. W. L. Newton, were in waiting. The moment her Majesty's eye rested upon the noble duke, she rose, smiled, and bowed to him; and Prince Albert made similar signs of recognition to his grace. The Queen was assisted down the steps of the carriage by the noble duke, whose arm her Majesty took. The entry of the Queen on the station was greeted with warm and repeated bursts of cheering, which her Majesty and the Prince very graciously acknowledged.

The Queen, having complained of cold, was conducted into the waiting-room, and during the retirement of her Majesty and the Prince, the addresses were presented by the Mayor, through the medium of the Earl of Jersey, Master of the Horse. A few minutes only had elapsed before the arrival of the Duke of Devonshire's elegant new state carriage was notified by the Earl of Jersey to the Royal personages. The Queen immediately appeared, leaning on Prince Albert's arm, and was conducted by the Duke of Devonshire to the carriage, which drove off amid thunders of applause, and the performance of the national anthem by a band stationed at hand.

THE GRAND CONSERVATORY AT CHATSWORTH.

In the town of Chesterfield the preparations for the reception of her Majesty were in the right royal spirit. Bands of music paraded the town; all business was suspended; the streets presented a perfect blaze of decoration and embellishment; and about eleven o'clock the three troops of yeomanry cavalry were drawn up in double lines along the route which the Royal carriages had to take. At eleven o'clock the members of the Corporation met at the Guildhall, and proceeded thence, headed by the Mayor, down to the station.

Three triumphal arches were put up along the line of the Royal procession at the public expense, and four more were erected by different gentlemen at their own cost. Flags, garlands, and emblematical devices were exhibited in great numbers.

The carriages having quitted the railway station, were driven slowly through Chesterfield, amidst the most enthusiastic greeting from the multitudes which lined the sides of the streets—the platform—and every spot that commanded a view of the carriage in which her Majesty and Royal Consort rode.

Our engraving shows the royal procession passing through the Market-place; in the view is seen the remarkable crooked spire of the fine old church; it is 230 feet high, and it's crookedness may be the result of some accident (perhaps the effect of lightning), which is not recorded.

The royal party was escorted through the town, and along the road to Chatsworth, by detachments of the yeomanry cavalry, who relieved one another at proper intervals.

(Continued on page 376.

THEATRE ROYAL, ENGLISH OPERA.—M. JULLIEN'S ANNUAL SERIES OF CONCERTS.—(Positively the Two Last Weeks.)—M. JULLIEN has the honour to announce, that the success of the English Quadrille, and indeed of all the Novelties performed during the present season, has been so unprecedented, that he will continue the present Series of Concerts until Christmas. The several new Engagements entered into render the assemblage of talent at these concerts quite without parallel, and the Programme being changed every evening, are so arranged as to afford an opportunity to visitors of at all times hearing a celebrated performer.

PRINCIPAL SOLO PERFORMERS.

Bassoon, } M. Baumann	Flute, Mr. Richardson	Cornet-a-Piston, M. Laurent
Clarionet, Mr. Lazarus	Violin, M. Remy	Cornet-a-Piston, Herr Koenig
Oboe, Mr. Barrett	Concertina, Mr. Case	&c. &c. &c.
Harp, Mr. F. Chatterton	Violoncello, Mr. Hancock

Doors open at half-past seven; commence at eight o'clock.

Promenade and Pit Stall Boxes, 1s.; Dress Circle, 2s. 6d.; Private Boxes, £1 1s.

Tickets to be obtained of Mr. KELLY, Box-office of the Theatre, of Mr MITCHELL, Old Bond-street; Mr ANDREWS, New Bond-street; SAMS, St. James-street; and MESS. JULLIEN'S Office, 3, Maddox-street, Bond-street.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—BRILLIANT EFFECTS are produced by ARMSTRONG'S HYDRO-ELECTRIC MACHINE at Three o'clock, and at Eight in the Evenings (except Saturday Evenings). By LONGBOTTOM'S OPAQUE MICROSCOPE the singular Optical Illusion of converting a Matrix into the appearance of being a Cast in bold relief is exhibited, with a variety of other curious effects. Particulars of the CHEMICAL and PHILOSOPHICAL LECTURES, which are delivered daily, are suspended in the Hall of Manufactures. DISSOLVING VIEWS. DIVER and DIVING BELL. Numerous STEAM ENGINES and other MODELS at work. The original CRAYON DRAWINGS of RAPHAEL'S CARTOONS, &c. &c.—Admission, One Shilling.—Schools half-price.

THE ST. JAMES'S THEATRE. MONDAY EVENING, DEC 11, to Commence at Eight o'Clock, MR BRAHAM'S SIXTH CONCERT, when Mr Braham, Mr Charles Braham, and Mr Hamilton Braham will perform Selections from Hellen, Doherty, Gordon, Chesshire, Purcell, Braham, Lover, &c.—Stalls, 5s.; Boxes, 3 Pit, 2s 6d.; Gallery Stalls, 2s.; Gallery, 1s. 6d.; at the Box office. Private Boxes, £2 2s., £1 11s 6d, and £1 1s.; at MITCHELL'S, Sams's, the Theatre, and of Mr. BRAHAM, 2, Gloucester-road, Hyde Park-gardens.

Mr. BRAHAM'S and Mr. D. BRAHAM'S CONCERT, at the Philosophical Institution, Beaumont-square, DEC. 12.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK

SUNDAY, Dec. 10th.—Second Sunday in Advent.
MONDAY, 11th.—Charles XII. killed, 1718.
TUESDAY, 12th.—Lord Rend born, 1724.
WEDNESDAY, 13th.—St. Lucy
THURSDAY, 14th.—Day breaks 5h. 54m.
FRIDAY, 15th.—J. Wilkes died, 1083.
SATURDAY, 16th.—

HIGH WATER at London-bridge, for the Week ending December 16.

Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.
h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.
4 31 4 48	5 8 5 21	5 52 6 5	6 40 7 5	7 34 8 4	8 38 9 14

ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS,
TERMS, PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

	£	s.	d.
Per Quarter	0	6	6
Half-year	0	13	0
One Year	1	6	0

May be had of all Newsmen and Booksellers, or at the Office, 198, Strand.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

CENSUS.—"B. D."—The Government Census is only taken every ten years; the next enumeration will take place in 1851; our list contains the population of upwards of 11,000 parishes and places in England and Wales, and is the most complete work of the kind which has ever been published. It may be had of any bookseller or newsvender, with or without this paper, being a complete work of itself, and forming sixteen pages, size of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, price sixpence, stamped for circulation by post.

CENSUS ERRATA.—"The following parishes were omitted in their proper place:—Buckford, Cheshire, pop. 559; Denio, Carnarvon, pop. 2367; Greatham, Sussex, pop. 64; Kelsale, Suffolk, pop. 1126.

"John Macready."—The casts may be obtained of any modeller in plaster of Paris.

"A. B." should write to the manager of the theatre respecting the play in question.

"J. H." Burlington Hotel.—The copy of the translation of Huber's work on the English universities has been received, and shall be noticed as soon as our arrangements will permit.

"A Provincial." "An Old Reader." "M. H.," "A Brighton Subscriber."—Harding's Shorthand is now about half-a-crown.

"A. Z.' should consult the "Mechanic's Magazine," wherein he may find the information he requires.

"W. N. D."—Lewis's Treatise on Chess.

"A Constant Reader and Admirer."—Coleridge's fame principally rests upon his powers as a critic in poetry, in which he was, perhaps, superior to Southey, who ranked higher as a prose writer than a poet. Cowper was considered by Southey to have been "the most popular poet of his generation; while Thomson as a charming poet, and one whose works have ever been the delight of all classes.

"A Reader" is thanked for the extract from the "Patriarch."

"A Would-be-Demosthenes" should consult the "Stammerer's Hand-book," to be ordered of any bookseller.

"B. A. Clerk"—We know nothing of the parties named. The payment may be made by either address.

"Clifton," Guernsey.—Who is the "good fellow" in Guernsey?

"T. E., Liverpool.—We believe the troop to be nomenclator the commander.

"R. G. Lakeman"—The secretary of the Croydon Railway Company would probably furnish the address of the inventor of the new carriage.

"H. K. B.' should write to the editor of the "New Monthly Magazine."

"E. K., St. Leonard's-on-Sea"—Each numbers of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS may be had of the publisher, or, by order, of any newsman.

"H. W" "Barnstaple.—Will our correspondent forward the sketches?

"F. A. M., Portsea"—is thanked for the correction of our statement respecting the newly-discovered remains of the Dinornis. (See page 359 of our journal.) DINORNIS was a misprint.

"R. H., Bermondsey, will consider that we cannot proceed without the information

"J. S.," Bristol, should consult Elmer's Treatise on the Law of Dilapidations.

"One of our Military Subscribers" should order the Saturday's edition of our journal.

"Amo," Beckangley.—Certainly not.

"M. M. S." Finchley.—

"Nauticus."—We have not room for the long letter.

"J. W. B."—Oswald's Etymological Dictionary.

"H. B. J."—Bedford.—Our correspondent's solution of the conjecture is correct.

"J. G. R.," Birmingham.—The respectability of signatures will add weight to the memorial.

"J. W. D.,' Liverpool -The Treatise on Huberdashery may be obtained by order of any bookseller.

"Domestic" —The omission last week was accidental. We usually devote as much space as our arrangements will allow.

An effective lithograph of Luton Hoo, during the late fire, has been published at Dunstable, as a memorial of that event

"An Old Subscriber" is thanked for the ticket of admission to the Islington Literary Institution.

"A Fellow Christian" is thanked for his sensible letter.

"T. B., Barnley-street, Clarendon-square.—We cannot avail ourselves of our correspondent's suggestion.

Several correspondents are thanked for communications respecting Chatsworth, Belvoir, and other scenes of her Majesty's visit.

"J. C."—The account of the celestial phenomenon on the 27*th inst. did not reach us in time for engraving.*

Intelligible.—Recollection of Sweete Musicke, by "X. X. S.;" Acrostic, by "Gawaxa;" Ode, by "H. M.," Dublin; A Lay for a Lake-side, by "Gamma;" Chirade, by "Sphinx;" On Love, by "I. L."

CHESS.—A Tyro"—Solution to No 43 received.

"R. B."—Black can castle after having been checked, provided he is not in check at the time, and that he has never moved his king nor the rook with which he castles

"F. O"—A pawn can be pushed two squares, but the adversary can take it en passant with a pawn. St. Amand, therefore, if he had thought proper, could have placed his P on the B 6th, and removed Mr. Staunton's pawn from the board.

"Philidor."—The king cannot castle when the square over which he leaps is guarded by one of his adversary's pieces.

THE ROYAL PROGRESS.

Numerous engravings of this important event, which it has been found impossible to insert in the present number of our journal, shall appear next week. There are illustrations of Belvoir, Leicester, Wolverton, Rugby, Watford, Uxbridge, &c., all of which will be executed in a style of art superior even to the engravings in the present number.

DUBLIN STATE TRIALS.

We are compelled to defer till next week a finely engraved group of portraits of the counsel for the prosecution. The conclusion of the inaugural address at the Historical Society is also unavoidably deferred

SMITHFIELD CHRISTMAS CATTLE SHOW.

Next week we shall present to our readers spirited and faithful portraits of the principal prize-awarded by the Smithfield Club.

GRAND MILITARY DISPLAY AT CHELTENHAM

Four characteristic views of the grand spectacle, on occasion at Cheltenham Castle will appear next week.

 Several communications shall be replied to in our next,

BRAHAM.—In our leader of last week on the Frauds in Trade, the passage "unites every principle of honour, &c.," should be "violates every principle, &c.

☞ The Romance will be concluded next week.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1843.

We are preparing for our winter festivities—we have entered upon the Christmas month. The annual cattle show—that great gathering of fatted beeves, and sheep, and pigs—that wonderous result of fodder, vegetables, oilcake, and linseed—the citizen's marvel and the farmer's pride—is now astonishing its thousands of holiday spectators; but soon they will pass from the show to the slaughter-house, and we shall see our butchers' portals straining under the weight of "flesh thick-ribbed with fat," and garnished with holly and Christmas berries to crown it for the feast. There will be broad staring signs of plenty—superabounding plenty, in every street—visions of savory roastings will fill the eyes of the comfortable; and those who have their Christmas dinner sure, will indulge in the anticipatory glory of having it good also!—But for those who will have no Christmas dinner. We direct the charities of the community to such. We do not enjoin good people to take their eyes away from the luscious temptation of their beef; but we tell them not to lose the Christian in the Epicure—but to go into the ranks of the starving, and look at them with their hearts. Now is the season when it behoves every being who can think and feel, to look into the wants of the poor; and private charity—large, liberal, and abounding—must in some measure atone for the errors of cruel and deficient legislation. Under God's providence, the season has been one of clemency and mildness hitherto and, even on the threshold of December, we have had sunshine instead of snow; but still, never was destitution more far spread in range, or more deep seated in its character, than at the present crisis of poverty and distress. The soul sickens—the heart bleeds at the dreadful pictures of want, wretchedness, and disease, which the faithful public press exhibits to a community which we hope will not allow its commiseration to exceed its relief. There have been this week two dreadful instances recorded of an excess of human affliction almost out-bounding belief—and a sad, sad shame to us that they could have existed in England in any age or time.

One of these is the case of a family named Holloway, whose shuddering story really makes blood curdle in the veins. In some dark region, known only to misery, were this wretched family existing, amid calamities that appal the heart. One son lay dead, and there was no burial for his wasted body. The survivors had no means to procure a funeral, so that the flesh tenement, whose spirit had departed, put on its corruption, and became a putrid and rotten corpse. The offensive odour of the body was as a plague within that desolate chamber; and yet the living brother of the dead lay beside it—in the suffering of typhus fever—until the noxious poison of the thing decayed, touched the breath and crept over the limbs of the enduring being whom it had once embraced in brotherhood and love. All the apartment was wretched—wretched, hopelessly—and toiling women were at hard-starving work although it was the Lord's day! They were at the slop-work of the advertising Jews!! So were the family discovered, and so, happily, relieved—but theirs was not an isolated woe. As the officer who had discovered their wretched abode was leaving it, he had his attention called to another case of overweighing affliction—and here is the terrible detail of what he saw:—

The dwelling to which Mr. Ross called the attention of Ellis was in a most dilapidated condition: when they knocked for admission there was some little delay in opening the door, which induced Ellis to peep in through the chinks, when he saw a gaunt meagre-looking figure preparing to put on a pair of trousers, which he had just been repairing with a few patches On gaining admission to the miserable abode, the first object which he beheld was a naivering child, in a state of almost complete nudity, the only covering it had being a pair of torn trousers—no coat, waistcoat, shoes, stockings, nor even a shirt. One broken chair formed the whole furniture of the place, except a few rags in one corner of the room, which composed the bedding of the whole family, consisting of Somerhinsell (a widower), and two children. Ellis said it was scarcely possible to conceive a human being more destitute and destitute. When questioned by the officer, Noonan, who is a hod-whipper, and that since the death of his wife, which occurred about two years ago, all had gone wrong with him. Even at full work, he could scarcely support his family, as the utmost he could earn was 15s. a-week, and out of that the habits of those engaged in the work compelled him to spend a considerable portion in beer. He, however, was only able to procure occasional employment, and having no wife to take care of his little earnings, they frequently found themselves on the point of starvation. When asked why he did not apply for parochial relief, the poor fellow said he was afraid they would compel him to go to the union, and he would rather endure anything than be separated from his children.

Another picture of this man's condition stated, that his room had no windows, and that it was marvellous on other accounts how existence in it could be either sustained or endured. But it made a far more dreadful disclosure. The two children from whom this affectionate pauper—with the human love strong in his bosom—would still not be separated—these children to whom, in his unselfishness, he clung through all the terrors of his dreadful destitution—were idiots—brainless idiots, through want! When his visitors entered their tenements, the wild young starvlings made a monkey chatter without sense—incoherent babblings—mad grimaces—and capered about their hovel floor with all the strange insanity of a savage fright! It was an animal terror—nothing more—at the sight of human beings who had flesh and clothes! -Horrible most horrible!

We need not say, that in both of the above cases, immediate relief was teadered—but we have to remind our readers that there are reported to be hundreds of families in parallel conditions of misery to that—at this moment there are thousands starving to death!

We confess that we cannot read of such discoveries of destitution, and figure to ourselves the frightful mass of it—if these be cance-findings—which never meets the eye, without a consciousness that there should be a sort of official commission established at this season of the year, in parishes, for the purpose of dragging dreary misery from its lurking places, and bringing it within charity's reach. This might be easily effected by a few humane persons undertaking, and relieving each other in the duty, and not only should they be helped by the magistrates and assisted by the parish officers, but they would have a whole flood of pity and private benevolence, following their path of research, and carrying consolation and relief into the most hopeless and unhappy of the city's saddest homes. God will prosper, and man bless all who at this season—in the plentitude of food and festivity—have a heart for the alleviation of sorrow, and a memory for the deplorable poor.

The royal progress is over, and the Court has returned to Windsor. Drayton Manor is restored to the ordinary quietude of the private life of the Premier, and Chatsworth and Belvoir are, as far as the royal party is concerned, "left alone in their glory." Change of scene—slight relaxation of the etiquette of the palace (which, we suppose, was unavoidable)—greetings from a loyal people, and courtesies from nobles who vie with each other in making the royal reception all that it should be—all this cannot but leave an agreeable impression behind; we sincerely trust that it has done so, and that the impression may be often renewed on future occasions.

All the accounts of the proceedings we have read speak of the warm welcome her Majesty has received wherever she has appeared. Triumphal arches spanned her course, and hearty cheers met and followed her upon it. Everywhere it seems to have been a sort of holiday; thus both the nobility and people were seen by her Majesty under the best and most favourable aspect. Still there must have been much that did not meet the eye of Royalty in its excursion from point to point; the utmost that the passing traveller can perceive is the surface of things; this is a necessity. And that the state of things may be far different from the indications that appear on the surface, we have too ample proof. The Emperor Nicholas of Russia, during his meteor-like flights from one part of his empire to another, sometimes travels by roads made on purpose for him. In most of the remote districts, the officials "set their houses in order," and prepare for the imperial inspection. Roads are hastily repaired, bridges imperfectly mended, and all the labour required for these extraordinary exertions being forced, the hardships and sufferings of the peasantry are extreme, while everything being done in a hurry, is consequently done imperfectly. As soon as the Imperial eye is withdrawn, everything falls back into its old course, and so remains, till another Royal visit, at some indefinite time, may stir up the surface of the corrupt and stagnant waters. We believe it is Count Segur who relates some rather amusing instances of the manner in which "the nakedness of the land" in Russia was often embellished, to render it agreeable to the view of the Empress Catherine—sometimes with very indifferent success. But with us it is not the outward face of nature that requires embellishment. Nature has made it rich, and cultivation has rendered it beautiful. There is no attempt to disguise anything. That which cannot be seen, is that which is never visible without absolute search is made for it, for it does not appear on the surface. What does not meet the eye is destitution, poverty, suffering; things which are buried from the light in noisome habitations and stifling rooms, which come not forth in the market places and the highways to join its greetings with those of the more fortunate. The gladness of heart, without which such greetings are nothing worth, is not felt, and where all is bright and joyous, the presence of misery seems an unwelcome intrusion. But because it is not seen, and the less does it exist; we know that could a wish banish it at once from her realms, that wish would not long be unbreathed by the Royal lips, and therefore we are anxious that the mind of her Majesty should not be misled, to imagine, from an outward show of festivity and rejoicing, that the tales of national distress which have reached her are exaggerated, or that the dark picture of the sufferings of great masses of the people has been overdrawn.

THE COURT AND HAUT TON.

Viscount Melbourne arrived in South-street, on Tuesday evening, from his visit to the Duke of Devonshire, at Chatsworth.

The Duke and Duchess de Nemours intended, on their return from England, to land at Boulogne, but were driven by the wind into Dunkirk. On Tuesday they arrived at Boulogne, where they were received, with all due honours, by the sub prefect, the mayor, and several of the other public functionaries.

ILLNESS OF LADY BURDETT.—We regret to state that the above lady continues severely indisposed, at the mansion of Sir Francis, in St. James's-place. Dr. Ferguson is in attendance on her ladyship; and the answer to inquiries, on Tuesday, was, that she had passed a restless night, but, on the whole, she was rather better.

The Right. Hon. Edward Ellice, M.P., and the Dowager Countess of Leicester, have arrived at Naples, from Florence and Rome, and they intend to pass the winter in that capital. Mr. Edward Ellice, M.P., and Mrs. Ellice, are staying at Glenyrwich, Inverness-shire, until the middle of the month, when they leave for the south.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, attended by Baron Knesebeck, arrived in town, on Saturday morning last, from honouring Sir Gore Ouseley with a visit at his seat, Hall Barne Park, Bucks. Shortly before eleven o'clock, his Royal Highness, attended by Baron Knesebeck, went from the Cambridge House, to the Euston-square terminus, and left town, by the Birmingham Railway, for Gopsal Hall, Leicestershire, the seat of Earl Howe, to meet her Majesty the Queen Dowager

THE DUC DE BORDEAUX.—Belgrave-square continues to be thronged with visitors from France to the Duc de Bordeaux; but no arrivals have, it is said, been deeply affected his Royal Highness more than some equestrians from the working classes. Some of these loyal, spirited, although humble operatives, have actually come as far as from the shores of the Mediterranean to offer their homage to exiled Royalty. On Sunday the Duc de Bordeaux, attended by his suite, went to mass in George-street, Portman-square. The hour of ten o'clock was fixed for the service, and the chapel was filled with distinguished Frenchmen. It is affirmed that the stay of his Royal Highness in Belgrave-square, will be prolonged to the 15th inst, before his tour is resumed. The Duke of Beaufort has invited his Royal Highness to be present at one of the lawn meets at Badminton, which his Royal Highness the Duc de Bordeaux, who is an excellent horseman, has, it is understood, accepted this invitation.

Earl Fitzwilliam is labouring under severe indisposition. His lordship attended the quarterly court of proprietors at Peterborough-house, on Saturday, but was unable to undertake the duties of the day as chairman, and after a brief stay, left some time before the public business commenced

The Duke and Duchess of Buccleuch, on leaving Chatsworth, proceeded by railway to Darlington, and from thence went direct to Scotland. The noble Duke and Duchess intend to remain there until about the second week in the ensuing month. The Duke's birthday was celebrated last week, with many rejoicings at Dalkeith, Drumlanrig Castle, and at the several seats on his Grace, in Scotland.

Lord and Lady Dunmanon and the Hon Misses Ponsonby, who have been residing several months at Beaubrough, Lancashire, arrived in Cavendish-square on Monday last.

Viscount Palmerston arrived in town on Tuesday morning, from Chatsworth, and left yesterday for Broadlands, near Romsey. The noble viscount, on his arrival in town, was informed of the accouchment of Viscountess Jocelyn, who was safely delivered of the above sent, on Saturday last, of a daughter. Her ladyship and infant are going on well

Earl Grey continues in the enjoyment of excellent health at Howick Hall. Viscount and Viscountess Howick and a family circle surround the venerable earl and countess at their seat in Northumberland.

The Earl of Devon is accompanied to Ireland by Mr. Edward Courtenay, nephew of the noble earl, who is to act as private secretary to his lordship on the commission appointed to inquire into the tenure of land in that country.

The Duchess of Gloucester continues indisposed; but the answer to inquiries is that the royal duchess is going on favourably.

THE DUKE DE BORDEAUX.—The departure of his Royal Highness the Duke de Bordeaux is fixed for the 15th inst, to continue his tour in Ireland by a visit to the southern and western counties. His Royal Highness on Tuesday visited Doctors' Commons, attended by Count Albert de Rodelscaval. His Royal Highness inspected with great interest Napoleon's will, written with his own hand, and afterwards the original will of Shakspeare, and the copy of Malone's.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

On Sunday week, 69 fishermen, who had been saved from shipwreck during the awful storm of the 16th ult., publicly returned thanks to Almighty God, in Cromer Church, for their preservation. They all row when sailed over by the officiating minister, and then, on their knees, joined in the beautiful form of thanksgiving in our church service.

The rectory of High Holyland, Yorkshire, which was recently vacated by the Rev. Dr. Wolff, is again vacant by the death of his successor, the Rev. Dr Fennell.

The senior canonry in the collegiate church of Manchester, and the rectory of St. Mary's Church, in that town, are vacant by the death of the Rev. Canon Gaskill, who died last week in his 81st year.

The rectory of Ingoldsby, Lincolnshire, in the gift of the Bishop of Lincoln, and valued at £1,800 a year, is vacant by the death of his predecessor, the Rev. Dr. Fennell.

The senior canonry in the collegiate church of Manchester, and the rectory of St. Mary's Church, in that town, are vacant by the death of the Rev. Canon Gaskill, who died last week in his 81st year.

The rectory of High Holyland, Yorkshire, which was recently vacated by the Rev. Dr. Wolff, is again vacant by the death of his successor, the Rev. Dr

GOVERNMENT CLERKS.—In several departments of the government a rule exists that clerks who take the benefit of the Insolvent Debtors' Act should be dismissed from their situation; and from a case which was heard in the Court of Bankruptcy on Monday it seems that a somewhat similar rule will be adopted respecting the new Insolvent Debtors' Act.

CITY ASSOCIATION FOR THE RELIEF OF THE POOR.—The annual meeting of the Society for the Relief of the Poor in the City of London was held last evening at the London Coffee-house, Ludgate-hill. Alderman Wilson having been elected to the chair, the minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary, and confirmed. It appeared that the committee had supplied the poor of London in the interval between December and March last year, with 30,280 bushels of coals, and 844,0lbs. 2d. exclusive of the delivery of 1,000 tickets, from a series of 2782 bushels of coals and 39,144 lbs. of potatoes. The receipts of the society for the year were stated at £2557 10s. 7d., and the disbursements at £2336 4s. 1d., leaving a balance of £219 6s. 8d. in the hands of Messrs. Coutts and Co. Donations were passed to Mr. Alderman Wilson, Mr. Phipps, the secretary, and other officers of the society. The meeting then adjourned until the first Wednesday in December, 844.

REGENT'S CANAL COMPANY.—The half yearly meeting of the members of this company was held on Wednesday, at the offices in the City-road. The report congratulates the members on the steady progress of the company's affairs.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF LONDON.—On Tuesday the members of this society held their December meeting at the house in Regent-street, Mr. W. Barchard, V.P., F.R.S., presiding, when his Grace the Earl of Zetland, Sir John W. Lubbock, Bart., and John Stuart, Esq., M.P., were added to the list of members.

FUNERAL OF MR. BENJAMIN WEBBER.—The remains of this comedian were interred on Monday afternoon in the church of St. Clement Danes, Strand, near his own residence, Pickett-place, Strand.

LONDON FARMERS' CLUB.—On Monday afternoon an extraordinary general meeting of the committee and members of the Farmers' Club, established for the use of farmers and others visiting London interested in the cultivation of the soil, and open to agriculturists and scientific men of all countries, was held at the house of the institution, York Hotel, Bridge-street, Blackfriars. A series of propositions underwent considerable discussion relative to the internal arrangements of the club.

MEETING OF PARLIAMENT.—HER Majesty will hold a Privy Council at Windsor Castle the latter end of next week, when Parliament will be further prorogued from Tuesday, the 19th inst., to a future day, then to meet for the despatch of business. We understand that there is no intention at present of calling the legislature together before the usual time of assembling.

THE PLANTAGENIC SCHOOL.—A quarterly court of the governors of this excellent institution was held on Tuesday at the London Coffee-house. The treasurer, Mr. R. S. Bosanquet, presided. The report read was highly satisfactory. The thanks of the court were voted to the Rev. Dr. Dealtry, chancellor of the diocese, for his sermon in behalf of the society, and some other formal resolutions having been adopted, the court adjourned.

COUNTRY NEWS.

ASHTON.—The weavers of Ashton and Stalybridge have not yet returned to the mills, and during the past week their numbers have been augmented by a turn-out of other factory hands. The conduct of the turn-outs has been remarkably quiet, utterly devoid of threat or intimidation of any description. During some descriptions of cloth has resulted from the stopping of the mills. The operatives held various meetings during last week, but nothing occurred worthy of more particular notice.

BEDFORDSHIRE.—During the past week Bedfordshire has been visited with several incendiary fires, some of which have been of a most alarming character. Immediately after the destruction of a large farm, Limestead, at Colmworth, in this county, were blazing at Maunden, Felmersham, and Biddenham, then at Aspley, and almost at the same hour, on the same evening, this awful work of destruction was going on at Ridgmont and Tebworth. Scarcely breathing time was allowed before another fire broke out in the neighbourhood of Maulden, and on Saturday night no less than three very extensive fires were raging at the same time.

SUSPECTED MURDER AND INCENDIARISM TO CONCEAL IT.—On Friday morning week, a large barn full of wheat, standing on the Brickhill side of the Kimbolton-road, the property of Alderman Higgins, near the town of Bedford, was discovered to be in flames, by some men, who ran to the barn, and saw two young men, named Parkins, chair-menders, running from one end of it; one had on his trousers, and the other his shirt; they rather coolly said, "We have had a narrow escape of our lives." Alarm was given, and two engines were quickly on the spot. One of the men joined with the firemen to work the engine, and did not make any remarks on there being anybody in the barn, which burnt into flames at both ends, and in the middle, as the men were observed to come out of one end of it. The other man sat down on a bank side near, and remained there. The fire judiciously prevented from going any further, and the corn was taken into custody by Superintendent Jebbet. Foul play was now suspected, for on the fire being much suppressed, the body of a man much burnt was discovered, which at first was taken to be a sack of wheat; some sacks had been in the burnt substance. The body exhibited a fractured skull and injuries not produced by fire. A private examination of witnesses has been taken by the magistrates.

CAMBRIDGE.—We regret to state that the measles and hooping-cough are visited the neighbourhood of Cambridge, especially Barnwell, with terrible effect. In wards of 100 children have died of the measles in one parish: some families have been left quite childless. Of the small-pox, which commenced in Barnwell, so the inmates are "down," as it is called, with it. One poor woman has six children ill at the time with this dreadful disease. The ravages of these complaints, as might be expected, are confined principally to the poorer classes.

DURHAM.—THE COLLIERIES.—We regret to learn that the pitmen in several neighbouring collieries have evinced a disposition to "strike." In one or two, we are informed, one or two men actually turned out, and we understand that preparations are on foot for following their example in other quarters.

HULL.—As a proof of the growing necessity for an increase of dock accommodation, the Union flag of the Hamburg steamer has been flying since last Tuesday morning week, as an indication that no more vessels arriving need enter the Humber Dock-basin, and the arrivals have since been very numerous.

KENT.—PROSPECTS OF THE HOP CROPS.—On Tuesday evening information was received at the Watling-street, Southwark-bridge road, and other stations of the fire-brigade, that a most destructive fire had broken out upon a farm in the occupation of Mr. Thomas Stow, immediately opposite the Bull Inn, Farnborough, Kent, upwards of fifteen miles from town. Upon arriving at the scene of desolation, we gleaned the following particulars:—The fire was discovered by a policeman, named Hughes, at a little after two o'clock on the morning of the time. At that moment it was raging in a shed contiguous to an extensive barn, which was stored with between 80 and 90 loads of hay, the property of Sir J. Lubbock, the banker, opposite the Mansion-house. The shed, the barn and its contents, with several outbuildings, were all consumed. The occupier is uninsured. The fire is said to have originated in the act of an incendiary, and a person is in charge of the police for the commission of the act. Much credit is due to Inspector M'Gill for his promptitude.

ANOTHER FIRE AT FARNBOROUGH.—Shortly after nine o'clock on Wednesday night last, a mounted express arrived at the Brigade-station in Southwark-bridge-road, with intelligence of another fire raging in the village of Farnborough, in Kent. Similar to state, the fire was found to have broken out in the dwelling-house of Mr. Sowy, which was entirely destroyed by fire on Monday night last. On the arrival of the engines the fire was extinguished, but not before the destruction of the roof. The origin of the conflagration, which has caused considerable sensation in this part of the county, is very mysterious

LIVERPOOL.—THE MURDER AT KNOWSLEY.—On Friday week, the prisoners previously examined on suspicion of having been concerned in the murder of a game-keeper at Knowsley were again brought up and fully committed for trial.

Owing, due to the railway carriages piping for hire, or to the high fares charged by the railways for short distances (or to all causes), coaches, which had been for some years almost extinct, are beginning to be again pretty frequent on the road between Liverpool and Warrington, and Liverpool and St. Helen's.

NORTHAMPTON.—AN ARC DE TRIOMPHE TO LORD HAMPTON CHRIST, Prince of Preston Pannell.—On Thursday last Mr. Christie visited this town, and he himself passed under the wooden monument in the north II, where the crowd stumbled and fell, and threw Mr. Christie with his leg on the iron side of the machine. It was ascertained that Mr. Christie had received several bruises, and that his leg was fractured.

NORWICH.—On Friday se'nnight, a barley stack, the property of Mr. Stephen Goode, of Horsham, was discovered to be on fire, and a reward of £20 has been offered for the apprehension of the offenders, as there is not the slightest doubt of its being the work of some incendiary.

MURDER OF A WIFE, BY HER HUSBAND.—An inquest was held on Monday last at Stockport, in the course of which it appeared that the deceased died on Friday morning, in consequence of injuries she had received on the preceding evening from her husband, George Fox, a bailiff attached to the Stockport Court of Requests. A verdict of wilful murder was returned.

YORKSHIRE.—REDUCTION OF RENTS.—Earl Beauchamp has returned 10 per cent. of the rental of his tenants in Worcestershire, and on May-day last a similar reduction was made by the noble earl. Earl Somers, at his rent-audit, last week, also returned 10 per cent. to his numerous tenantry in the same county. Mr. Saville Lane Fox, M.P., at his rent-audit at Bramham-park, Yorkshire, last week, returned 10 per cent. to his tenantry on the Orm estate.

IRELAND

SEIZURE OF ARMS.—FELON ALARM.—We give a paragraph on Saturday relating to the seizure of arms on board a steamer, on its arrival in Dublin on Thursday. An investigation into the matter was held before the magistrates of Henry-street police-office, on Friday week, when John Clements was brought forward, charged with "illegally importing fire-arms." It appeared by the sworn testimony of Mr. Edmonds, a merchant, residing on Kilkenny, that he was owner of a vessel about to sail for the coast of Africa, and on hiring some arms for her protection, such as are usually employed for that purpose, he went to the Castle to apply for a license to import just as much as the vessel required. The Privy Council not being sitting, nor likely to sit until it would be too late for his purpose, he wrote to Birmingham for the arms to be forwarded without any license. If he did not take this course, the vessel, which was under orders to sail, should have proceeded on her voyage without them. Mr. Duffy expressed himself satisfied with the truth of this statement, but he should retain the arms until he received orders to deliver them up from the Lord-Lieutenant. Clements was then discharged, and the parties left the office. It appears that the way the discovery took place was, the head fell out of the cask, and the pike-heads became exposed to view. The parties in charge of them went off at once, and gave information to the police, and hence all the alarm that followed.

The election for the county of Kilkenny took place on Friday week when Pierse Somerset Butler, Esq. (son of Colonel Butler, the present county member), was elected without opposition.

IRISH MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.—Timothy O'Brien, Esq., has been elected Lord Mayor of the City of Dublin for the ensuing year, on the motion of Alderman Meredith, seconded by Mr. Hamilton. In reply to Mr. Maunsell, one of the Council, the newly-elected Mayor said that he was an unconditional Repealer, and while presiding in the chair of the assembly, no man should know to what party he was attached. Alderman Meredith said, he presumed the elected Mayor of Kilkenny, as has also Alderman Shannon, a Repealer, of Limerick.

The gun-boats lately brought by her Majesty's steam-frigate Penelope, are intended for the Upper Shannon and the lower lakes formed by that river in its progress towards the lower branch. A considerable number of persons were assembled on the banks of the canal on Friday, to witness their being towed to Portobello, from the basin at Ringsend. They are immense boats, with great beam, capable of carrying two guns, and accommodating a large body of troops. They are double banked and each pulled by twelve rowers. As floating batteries, they are most formidable.

Lieutenant-General Sir Edward Blakeney, Commander of the Forces in Ireland, will make a general inspection of the Chelsea pensioners in the four provinces next January, when they are to be enrolled in local companies for active service. The pensioner department gets on admirably in the south of Ireland, and it expects to turn out a little army of veterans for service the first month of the new year.

A naval hospital, with twenty beds, is forthwith to be formed at Haulbowline Island, Cork, under the care of E. Hilditch, Esq., Surgeon, R.N.

The popular comedian, Mr. David Rees, was found dead in his bed, on Thursday morning week, at his lodgings, in the city of Cork.

REPEAL ASSOCIATION.—There was a very crowded meeting of the Repeal Association on Monday. At one o'clock the chair was taken by Thomas Steele, Esq., who gave a solemn adjuration to continued peace in Ireland. The meeting was addressed by Messrs. John O'Connell, Mr. P. Barrett, Dr. Grey, and Mr. O'Neill Daunt. The repeal rent for the week was announced to be £964 11s. 6d.

It is said that the trial of the State traverses will be a monster trial. The defendants' solicitors have been allocated to different parts of the country, to get up evidence respecting the various allegations in the voluminous indictment.

Mr. O'Connell left Limerick for Darrynane Abbey on Tuesday evening.

Rev. Wednesday last the brig Nelson, from Demerara, laden with rum, sugar, molasses, wood, &c., struck on Mace Island, about twelve miles from Clifden, on the Galway coast, and became a complete wreck. The mate and three of the crew, the only survivors, were discovered on the island by the Lieutenant of the Coast Guard service. Not a vestige of the wreck, or any part of the valuable cargo, has been discovered.

DEATH OF ONE OF THE TRAVERSERS.—The Rev. Peter James Tyrrell, P.P., Lusk, and one of the indicted "conspirators" against the Queen, died on Saturday week, reign Lady the Queen, her crown, and dignity," departed this life on Monday evening, at five o'clock P.M., at the age of fifty-one years. The Freeman attributes his death to cold caught on the day of the intended Clontarf meeting, by his exertions during most inclement weather to prevent the people in various localities from attending it. We gave a portrait of the deceased reverend gentleman in our paper of Saturday week.)

REPEAL BANQUET IN LIMERICK.—The public dinner to Mr. Smith O'Brien, M.P. for Limerick, and a recent convert to the advocacy of a repeal of the Union, took place on Monday last. It had been for some time looked forward to with much interest by the repealers of Ireland. There was in the morning a procession of the usual character to meet Mr. O'Brien, and conduct him into the city of Limerick. Mr. O'Connell, who was accommodated in his carriage by Mr. J. O'Connell, jun., the Rev. Mr. Doyle, and Mrs. Fitzpatrick, his daughter, arrived at Prince's Hotel at five o'clock, and was greeted by the people with loud cheers. The dinner was served in the Northumberland-buildings, when about 600 persons sat down. The room was tastefully decorated with banners and sevgreens. Mr. O'Connell presided. There was nothing remarkable in the majority of the speeches made on the occasion. Mr. O'Connell, in returning thanks when his health was drunk, said, with reference to the Attorney-General for Ireland: "The Attorney-General has been blamed for showing considerable ill-temper. Now, I am not at all surprised at it; indeed, I think him in a great measure excusable" (laughter)—for recollect, he had amongst the traversers persons against whom he exhausted all the bitterness of his nature, who in the House of Commons moved for an inquiry into the conduct of his father. The house did not comply with that motion, but it was not my fault. (Laughter.) I was as hostile when defeated as I was before, and consequently when a difficult affection is, it is not to be wondered at that he should be hostile to me. (Laughter.) [illegible] son John succeeded at the Youghall election, and Smith was defeated, [illegible] standing that he petitioned against my son; and no wonder he should not be overpleased at that defeat." (Laughter.) With reference to the result of the indictment, Mr. O'Connell, after disclaiming any intention of sedition or disloyalty, said:—"I am asked what is to become of the traversers? My answer is, that depends upon the jury. (Hear, hear.) It may take some time to trial, but the result must be an inevitable triumph to repeal, if we get a fair jury. (Hear, hear.) It is a good deal upon the dice—we may [illegible] [illegible] or we may be defeated." After requesting the people, in any event, to be guilty of no outrage, he said:—"It would, indeed, break my heart to think that there should be any disturbance. I would abandon the Repeal cause for the sake of an outbreak. Don't the people see that their enemies are perfectly prepared with troops, artillery, and ammunition? Let the people recollect that it was the unarmed rebellion of 1798 that carried the Union. (Cheers.) Give me a thousand men tranquillity which I conjured you to observe, and the Repeal is certain. (Cheers.) The present staff of army cannot last here two years. At present every [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

The assemblage was tremendously large, even beyond all expectation. The square and market-place, and the whole line of streets, extending more than two miles, was one mass of living beings. The order preserved was admirable.

The Duke of Wellington arrived at Chesterfield by the regular train, after the special train which conveyed her Majesty; he rode in his open carriage, and did not alight whilst the carriage was taken off the track: as soon as the horses were attached, he drove off to Chatsworth.

In the evening, a large party of the gentry, manufacturers, and tradesmen of the town and neighbourhood dined together at the Angel Inn, the Mayor in the chair. In the town beautiful illuminated devices were exhibited in the front of the houses, and at seven o'clock there was a grand display of fireworks as a finale to the day's rejoicings.

HER MAJESTY'S ARRIVAL AT CHATSWORTH.

At ten minutes to two o'clock, the state carriage of the Duke of Devonshire, with six horses, arrived at the grand lodge entrance to the demesne of Chatsworth at Baslow, and the approach of the royal cavalcade was announced by the discharge of ordnance from the hunting-tower, and the usual royal salute of twenty-one guns was fired from nine guns placed on the stand at the tower by a party of the royal artillery, under the command of Major Jebb, R.E.

The grand scene at the moment of the arrival of her Majesty is represented upon our front page.

The Queen and Prince, escorted by a squadron of the Derbyshire Yeomanry Cavalry, and followed by the Earl of Jersey, Lady Portman, Hon. Miss Paget, Mr. G. Anson, Colonel Bouverie, and Major-General Wemyss, in two carriages, came along the drive to the grand arch, and passed through into the court-yard, amidst joyful and enthusiastic plaudits. As her Majesty arrived, the royal standard was hoisted on the flag-staff over the noble stone arch. The Duke of Devonshire, Hon. George Cavendish, M.P., Lady Louisa Cavendish, and Lady Catherine Cavendish, and the other branches of the duke's family, were in waiting to receive her Majesty and his Royal Highness on alighting from the state equipage of the noble host.

Her Majesty was received in the sub-hall by the Duke of Devonshire and Lady Louisa Cavendish, and led to his grace's private apartments in the west front, which were appropriated exclusively for her Majesty's use during her stay at this splendid ducal residence; the Queen occupying in the second story the billiard room as her private sitting room, superbly fitted up for the occasion, in which is that masterly production of Landseer—Bolton Abbey in the Olden Time, a picture which reflects the highest credit on the English art. From this beautiful room, his grace conducted her Majesty to dinner along the gallery of cabinet paintings, &c., then into the music room, through the small drawing room, to the grand drawing room, where his grace's guests assembled to meet her Majesty. These three rooms are fitted up in the most magnificent manner, the walls are covered with Genoa velvet, and silk damasks; several superb Ottomans, on the centre of one of which is a beautiful sculptured group of cupids; and from the centre of another in the grand drawing room rises a copy by Bartolini, of that matchless statue the Venus de Medicis. These rooms comprise the most costly articles which wealth and the most exquisite taste could procure or design. Curtains of the richest silk damask, some of the finest pictures by the old masters, adorn the walls; mantel-pieces, of the purest statuary, ceilings richly gilt, with magnificent chandeliers suspended. These rooms have been seen by visitors, and described by tourists, but it is only on occasions like the present, that they appear in their full blaze of magnificence. From the grand drawing-room the illustrious party proceeded through the library, ante-library, &c., to the banqueting or grand dining-room, which was laid out with unusual splendour, his grace having ordered the whole of that unique and splendid suite of silver to be used upon the occasion, made expressly for the purpose of his embassy to St. Petersburgh, when appointed Ambassador Extraordinary to the Czar. The enrichments of the table, sideboards, &c., literally covered with a profusion of massive gold plate, exquisitely carved vases, urns, candelabra, in gold and silver, filled with the choicest flowers—the noble dimensions of the room itself, with a coved and paneled ceiling, richly gilt, the magnificent doorways, with costly columns supporting the cornice, the beautiful and unique mantel-pieces, with splendid figures as side accompaniments, together with the fine family portraits, all illumined with a glorious effulgence of lights judiciously disposed, presented a most imposing spectacle.

HIS GRACE THE DUKE OF DEVONSHIRE.

Immediately after her Majesty's arrival, the royal and noble party sat down to luncheon; at the termination of which, her Majesty, leaning on the arm of the Duke of Devonshire, accompanied by the Prince and the whole of the guests, proceeded through the state rooms, the sketch gallery, (so called from its containing the rough sketches, rarities indeed, of some of the most remarkable works of the greatest artists,) the statue gallery a place crowded with living marble, and the orangery. Her Majesty then signified her wish to see the conservatory, a building and collection of plants so grand and so rare as to be deservedly ranked among the minor wonders of England. To this she was conducted by the Duke and attended by the guests.

The Grand Conservatory, engraved upon the annexed page, is 300 feet long, by 145 feet wide, and covers about an acre of ground! The elevation of the central coved roof is 67 feet, with a span of about 70 feet, resting upon two rows of elegant iron columns. Round the centre, at the base of the dome, is carried a gallery; and direct through the centre is a spacious carriage-drive. From an elevation of four feet from the ground is one mass of glass; each plate being 4 feet long, by 6 inches wide: the ascent to the gallery is by steps of rock-work, covered with rare plants. By means of tanks, a circulation of hot and cold water is kept up, through tubes occupying six miles in length. The sash-bars, if laid end to end, would reach forty miles in length; and they contain 70,000 square feet of glass. Mr. Paxton, F.L.S., is the sole contriver and architect of this wonderful conservatory. Such is its extent and convenient arrangement, that as many as three or four carriages have been driven in it at one time. Among the vegetable Titans are the Arbutelon Stricturn, 20 feet high; Corypha Umbraculifera, or gigantic palm; the dwarf plantain, or banana, one plant of which bore 300 fruit last year.

The Royal party had previously passed into the grounds to see the rockwork. From the conservatory they went on the west terrace, from which her Majesty came to a tree which was planted eleven years ago by herself, while still a child. Her Majesty and her Royal Consort stood some time contemplating this memento of earlier years, and it was then arranged that Prince Albert should plant another tree by the side of that which had already grown up. He selected an oak sapling, and planted it with all due formality.

As her Majesty appeared at those points of the grounds, of which a view could be obtained from without, she was cheered in the most enthusiastic manner by multitudes of people there assembled.

Leaving the terrace her Majesty ascended the steps of the south front to go to the west garden, returning towards the mansion by the "Fragment Lodge," and proceeding thence to the apartments enclosed from the mansion for her Majesty's use.

It was about five o'clock when her Majesty and the Prince returned to their apartments, where they remained until the dinner hour.

Immediately before the dinner hour, half-past seven, the distinguished guests invited to meet her Majesty assembled in the drawing room. On her Majesty's appearance, she took the arm of the Duke of Devonshire. The Prince escorted Lady Louisa Cavendish; and the Royal party followed. As her Majesty approached the dining room, the military band at the mansion played the National Anthem. The Rev. R. C. Wilmot, the Duke's private chaplain, who sat at the lower end of the table, said grace.

The Queen sat in the centre of the table, and on her right Prince Albert and Lady Louisa Cavendish; on her left, the Duke of Devonshire and the Duchess of Buccleuch; opposite to her Majesty, the Duchess of Bedford and the Duke of Wellington.

Along the middle were eight superb candelabras of innumerable lights, two splendid oval bottles with the Burlington Arms in alto relievo, two candelabras of three figures playing the flute, each angle finished by the heads and antlers of stags; down the sides were twelve magnificent wine coolers; everything of dead and burnished silver. Covers were laid for 47. The side board was covered with gold plate of exquisite design; in the centre was a beautiful salver, containing the devices and inscriptions of the different snuff boxes presented to his Grace. In the front of this lay a matchless chain of filagree balls, several feet in length, part of the trappings of an elephant from the East. There were four large salvers, with exquisite designs in bas relievo. The dinner comprised everything in season, or that could be forced into perfection, and the ornamental pastry was such as to elicit a remark that the Duke's confectioner had excelled himself. Nor can we refrain from expressing our gratification in finding that, instead of six French cooks being engaged on this occasion, as reported in the neighbourhood, we found Mr. Howard, the well-known Chatsworth cook, with seven hearty Englishmen, as his assistants, preparing a dinner for England's Ocean Queen. The fruits were of the most extraordinary description. The [illegible], especially those near where her Majesty sat, were of themselves sufficient to stamp Mr. Paxton's character as a first-rate gardener.

CHATSWORTH. "THE PALACE OF THE PEAK."

Immediately after dinner the Hon. George Cavendish rose, and proposed "The Queen," and the band immediately played the national anthem. The health of her Majesty having been drunk with the deepest respect, the Hon. Mr. Cavendish soon after gave the health of his Royal Highness Prince Albert, upon which the band played "The Coburg March." No other toasts were given.

After dessert had been served, her Majesty and the ladies present retired to the drawing-room, the band playing the national anthem. They were soon joined by the Duke of Devonshire and the gentlemen.

For the following additional details we are indebted to the courtesy of a correspondent, who was one of the guests:—The dinner party comprised all the nobility named in the enclosed list. About sixty of the leading gentry of Derbyshire were invited to a "small party," at a quarter before ten o'clock, and assembled in the music saloon, which had been most splendidly fitted up with hangings of puce-coloured velvet and amber-coloured silk, and a slightly raised platform at the upper end for her Majesty, who entered the saloon at the above hour, leaning on the arm of the Duke of Devonshire, followed by Prince Albert and Lady Louisa Cavendish. Dancing immediately commenced, and was kept up with great spirit till twelve o'clock, when her Majesty retired, and the company adjourned to the superb banqueting-room to supper. Her Majesty danced the first quadrille with the Duke of Devonshire, the second with Lord Morpeth, waltzed a few times with Prince Albert, and went down and up a country dance with Lord Leveson. She appeared to enjoy the "hands across, down the middle, up again, and pousette" infinitely; dancing with much spirit and grace. She wore lace over a pink satin dress, a wreath of pale roses in her hair, and earrings, necklace, and string of diamonds intertwined in the plait of the back hair. I have obtained as correct a list of the party as it was possible.—Her Majesty and Prince Albert, Duke of Wellington, Duke of Devonshire, Duke and Duchess of Buccleuch, Duke and Duchess of Bedford, Viscount Melbourne, Viscount Palmerston, the Marquis and Marchioness of Normanby, Lord Morpeth, Lord and Lady Leveson, Earl Jersey,

Lord Alfred Paget, Lord and Lady Beauvale, Lord and Lady Emlyn, Lady Mary Howard, Hon. Matilda Paget, Hon. George and Lady Louisa Cavendish, Sir Augustus and Miss Clifford, Mr and Lady Em is Cavendish, Mr. Charles and Lady Catherine Cavendish, Col Cavendish, Mr G. Anson, Mr Frederick Leveson, Mrs. and Miss Arkwright, Sir Wm. Boothby and Miss Boothby, Lord Waterpark, Mr C. Cavendish, M.P., Mr L. Strutt, M.P., Lord Newburgh; Mr., Mrs., and Misses 2 Palmer Morewood, Major and Mrs. E. P. Coke, Mr and Mrs. Brande, Sir Henry Huntley, Sir George and Lady and Misses 2 Stanley, Hon W. S. Cotton, 1st Life Guards, Captain Arkwright, 6th Dragoons; Hon. Mrs. Dundas, Captain Underwood and Mrs. Underwood, &c.

The company invited to the ball were received in the sub-hall, passed through the beautiful inlaid marble corridor into the great hall, which was lit by a superb gilt tripod, upon one of the largest marble slabs we have ever seen, which was supported by a magnificent gilt stand, up the oak staircase, along the oak gallery, through the orangery, to the ball-room; but what surprised us most, was the appearance of the flight of steps leading from the orangery to the ball-room; to every step alternately was attached a beautiful plant, of the Erica Gracilis, and Erica Caffra, in full bloom; the one being a crimson purple, and the other a white: the effect was perfectly unique. The orangery, the general beauty of which is unknown to our readers, and which contains some of the finest plants in the kingdom, was, on this occasion, illuminated with a series of Chinese globe lanterns, which threw out in bold relief the different plants. The celebrated model of the Borghese vase was illuminated by a powerful argand burner, which displayed the figures sculptured on the sides in bold relief.

About half-past eleven o'clock, her Majesty retired, and proceeded to her supper-room, where the most distinguished of the guests were invited. The number of those present in the supper-room was sixteen, inclusive of her Majesty and her immediate suite.

Refreshments were provided for the other visitors in the banqueting-room.

Her Majesty retired to rest soon after midnight.

On Saturday morning the park was thronged by visitors from the neighbouring districts. About twelve o'clock, Prince Albert, accompanied by the Hon. G. H. Cavendish, M.P., and Mr. G. E. Anson, walked to the farm; after spending a short time at which, his Royal Highness returned to the house.

About half-past twelve a party, consisting of the Duke of Wellington and the Duke of Bedford, accompanied by Lord Alfred Paget, Lord Leveson, W. G. Cavendish, Esq., and several other distinguished persons went out on a shooting excursion, in the neighbourhood of Paisley. His Grace's guns were brought down by the train in which his Grace arrived at Chesterfield, but, by some strange mischance, they were lost or stolen between Chesterfield and Chatsworth. The party reached Edensor on their return to Chatsworth about half-past four o'clock. The noble and distinguished party enjoyed excellent sport, the total number of hares, rabbits, pheasants, partridges, &c., bagged by them being 200 head.

About half-past two o'clock her Majesty the Queen, Prince Albert, and a distinguished party, left Chatsworth to pay a visit to Haddon Hall, the celebrated and picturesque seat of the Duke of Rutland, which is situated at about six miles from Chatsworth. The cavalcade consisted of three open carriages and four, preceded by four outriders. The Queen and the Prince went through the whole range of rooms, the chapel, and great hall, and spent about two hours with evident delight in this interesting and beautiful spot. The cavalcade then returned to Chatsworth, passing up the vale of Wye to Bakewell, when her Majesty and the Prince were greeted very enthusiastically by the inhabitants. A triumphal arch was thrown across the road leading into the town, and another over the centre of the bridge, and the fine old peal of bells rung out a merry welcome for the first time this eighteen years. About half-past four o'clock the royal party returned to Chatsworth by way of Edensor.

At six o'clock, her Majesty, the Prince, the Duke of Wellington, the Duke of Devonshire, and other distinguished personages, visited the grand conservatory, which was brilliantly lighted with lamps, disposed along the ribs, by which the sides of this magnificent structure are divided, in a very tasteful manner. The effect of the scene was comparable to the fairy palace of some eastern tale.

Her Majesty and Prince Albert entered one of the duke's chariots: the Earl of Jersey and her Majesty's noble host seated themselves in the dicky behind the carriage, and, followed by two pony phaetons, the party repassed from the entrance arch into the park, and proceeding up the winding carriage-road leading to the heights, and through the magnificent rockery now in progress of formation, entered the conservatory. The military band on the terrace played the national anthem. At the entrance her Majesty was received by Mr. Paxton, who had the honour of showing to the Queen and her royal consort the matchless collection of tropical, temperate, and aquatic plants contained therein. Her Majesty, before the carriage had reached the east end of the conservatory, alighted, and, accompanied by her suite, then minutely inspected the shrubs and plants, and in allusion to the artificial decoration by lamps, remarked that "It was indeed a fairy scene, and gave her the highest possible delight." The Prince also, upon entering, emphatically exclaimed, "This is most beautiful."

HIS GRACE THE DUKE OF RUTLAND.

The dinner was served in the grand dining-room, at eight o'clock. The Duke of Devonshire entered the apartment, attired in the uniform of Lord Lieutenant. The Queen wore a light pink dress, and a tiara of sapphires. Prince Albert was attired in a plain evening dress, consisting of a blue dress coat and light vest. Covers were laid for 46 in the dining-room, and for 16 more in the noble oak-room, one of the finest apartments even in the magnificent "Palace of the Peak."

During the time that the royal party were dining the public were admitted (by ticket) to view the conservatory.

About ten o'clock, commenced a magnificent display of fireworks. The noble cascade was lit up with many coloured fires, and the whole extent of the gardens was a blaze of light. The Queen, Prince Albert, and the rest of the distinguished party enjoyed the magnificent scene from the windows of the south front. The Duke of Wellington, while contemplating the scene, is known to have remarked:—"I have travelled Europe through and through, and witnessed scenes of surpassing grandeur on many occasions, but never before did I see so magnificent a coup d'œil as that now extended before me." The display terminated about a quarter to eleven o'clock. In the large engraving annexed, our artist has endeavoured to convey to the reader an idea of this fairy scene.

On Sunday morning her Majesty and the Prince rose early, and breakfasted in the Queen's private apartments. The Duke of Wellington was up and out between six and seven o'clock.

At nine o'clock her Majesty and the Prince attended prayers in the chapel attached to the house, which were read by the Rev. R. C. Wilmot.

At twelve o'clock, the Royal pair attended Divine service in the private chapel, which was also performed by the Rev. R. C. Wilmot. The chapel is celebrated as possessing Verrio's chef d'œuvre "The Inspired Gifts of St. Thomas," as its altar-piece. The Scriptural paintings of Laguerre, with which the ceiling and other parts of the chapel are adorned, render it, perhaps, the most splendid private chapel in the kingdom. The statues of Hope and Faith, by Gibber, are among the best works of that eminent sculptor, and the carved cedar wainscotting and carved ornaments are unequalled.

The Royal party lunched in the Queen's private apartments.

At two o'clock the Queen and the Prince visited the gardens, and subsequently the farm at Edensor.

The dinner party in the evening comprised the same distinguished personages as on Saturday. Covers were laid for 47.

CHATSWORTH.

Chatsworth! thy stately mansion, and the pride
Of thy domain, strange contrast do present
To house and home in many a craggy rent
Of the wild Peak; where new-born waters glide
Through fields where thrifty occupants abide
As in a dear and chosen banishment,
With every semblance of entire content;
So kind is simple Nature, fairly tried!
Yet He, whose heart in childhood gave her troth
To pastoral dales, thin-set with modest farms,
May learn, if judgment strengthen with his growth,
That not for Fancy only, pomp hath charms;
And strenuous to protect from lawless harms
The extremes of favoured life, may honour both.—WORDSWORTH.

Chatsworth, one of the most magnificent private mansions in England, is one of the few seats in this country that deserves the name of a palace; but, neither of the abodes of the sovereign (Windsor excepted), approaches Chatsworth in extent, completeness, or splendour.

Chatsworth lies nine miles from Chesterfield, twenty-six miles from Derby, and ten from Matlock, and is popularly called one of the seven wonders of the Peak. The mansion stands in a park, nearly eleven miles in circumference, and beautifully diversified with hill and dale, wood and water; the river Derwent flowing with a serpentine course through the valley. The house rises amid a noble amphitheatre of wood, connected with the remote hills by a succession of forest scenery, until it terminates in the rude and barren mountains of the Peak.

The original Chatsworth House was begun in 1687, and completed in 1706, by William Cavendish, first Duke of Devonshire, upon the site of a more ancient edifice, in which Mary Queen of Scots passed a considerable portion of her long captivity. Sir John Gell garrisoned it for the Parliament in 1643, but capitulated to the Earl of Newcastle, who placed in it Colonel Eyre, with a sufficient force, to hold it for the King. In 1646, it withstood the siege of 400 Parliamentarians, under Colonel Gell, who, at the expiration of fourteen days, raised the siege, and retired to Derby. After the battle of Blenheim, in 1704, Marshal Tallard, the French General, having been made prisoner on that occasion, was sent to reside here.

Among the artists employed in raising this sumptuous pile, were Talman and Wren, the architects; Verrio, Laguerre, Ricard, and Thornhill, painters; Cibber, sculptor; and Gibbons, reputed to have executed the carvings in wood, although there is better reason to believe them to be the work of two natives of Derbyshire.

The mansion, which stands on the east bank of the Derwent, is in the Ionic style, and consists of an immense quadrangle, with two principal fronts. The roof is flat, and crowned with a balustrade and vases. An elegant northern wing has been added, and will be a lasting memorial of the abilities of Sir Jeffry Wyatville, and the taste and magnificence of the sixth Duke of Devonshire. The length of this addition, with the old part from which it extends, is 267 feet. The pleasure-grounds are eight acres in extent, and among the artificial works is a copper tree, the branches of which produce a shower. The fruit and vegetable gardens extend over twelve acres; and the flower-gardens are in highly enriched architectural taste, and embellished with sculptured baskets, statues, &c. The Duke of Devonshire allows all persons whatever to see the mansion and grounds every day in the year, Sundays not excepted.

DEPARTURE OF HER MAJESTY FROM CHATSWORTH.

On Monday, the weather was truly beautiful, and, for the time of

(Continued on page 379.)

SMITHFIELD CLUB CHRISTMAS CATTLE-SHOW.

AWARD OF PRIZES.

[ The figures at the commencement of each description signify the judges' number, and those at the end of each animal the number of entry.]

CLASS I.—Oxen or Steers, of any breed, under 5 years of age, without restrictions as to feeding, yet the kind or kinds of food must be certified.

4. Mr. Robert Burgess, of Cosgrave-place, Nottinghamshire, a 3 years 8½ months old Durham ox, bred by himself, from the stock of Earl Spencer, and fed on grass, vetches, hay, clover, cabbages, turnips, oilcake, and boiled barley. 167.—The third prize of £10.

13. Mr. H. Mann, of Pigburn, near Doncaster, an under 5 years 6 months old short-horned ox, bred by himself, and fed on hay, mangel, green clover, tares, white turnips, swedes, potatoes, and linseed cake. 168.—Commended.

19. Earl Spencer, of Althorp, near Northampton, a 4 year 6 months old Durham ox, bred by his lordship, and fed on swedes, mangold wurzel, cabbages, hay, oilcake, and beanmeal. 182.—The first prize of £20, and a silver medal.

23. Mr. J. Watson, of Thorney, near Peterborough, a 4 years 8½ months old Hereford ox, bred by Mr. C. Blakesley, of Shelderton, near Ludlow, and fed on hay, cake, barley and beanmeal, linseed, tares, carrots, and cabbages. 178.—The second prize of £15.

CLASS II.—Oxen or Steers, of any breed, under 5 years of age, weight 90 stone and upwards, that shall not have had cake, corn, meal, seeds, grains or distillers' wash, during twelve months previous to the 1st of August, 1843.

24. Mr. John Beasley, of Chapel Brampton, near Northampton, a 4 year 8 months old short-horned ox, bred by himself, from a bull of Earl Spencer, and fed on mangold wurzel, turnips, hay, and 170lb. of oilcake. 177.—The first prize of £ 10, and a silver medal.

25. The Duke of Bedford, of Woburn Abbey, Bedford, a 4 years 7 months old Hereford ox, bred by his Grace, and fed on grass, hay, turnips, carrots, mangold-wurzel, 1000lb. of barleymeal, 240lb. of beanmeal, and 1000lb. of linseed. 176.—Highly commended.

31. Mr. A. Perkins, of Arnesby, near Leicester, a 4 years 11 months old Hereford ox, bred by Mr. J. Williams, of Kingsland, near Leominster, and fed on grass, hay, turnips, and 1200lb. of oilcake. 170.—The second prize of £20.

33. Earl Spencer, of Althorp, near Northampton, a 4 year 7 months old Durham ox, bred by his lordship, and fed on swedes, mangold wurzel, cabbages, hay, 1143lb. of cake, and 12 bushels of beanmeal. 168.—Commended.

34. The Earl of Warwick, of Warwick Castle, a 4 years 8 months old Hereford ox, bred by Mr. W. Perry, of Monkland, near Leominster, and fed on grass, hay, turnips, potatoes, 95lb. of cake, 450lb. of barleymeal, and 360lb. of beanmeal. 167.—The third prize of £100.

CLASS III.—Oxen or Steers, of any breed, under 5 years of age, under 100 stone and above 70 stone weight, that shall not have had oake, corn, meal, seeds, grains, or distillers' wash, during 12 months previous to the 1st of August, 1843.

35. The Duke of Bedford, of Woburn Abbey, a 4 years 3 months old Hereford steer, bred by Mr. T. Davis, of Dilwyn, near Weobly, and fed on grass, hay, turnips, mangold wurzel, clover chaff, 925lb. of cake, and 5 bushels of beanflour. 166.—Commended.

36. Mr. Bouverie, of Delapré Abbey, near Northampton, a 4 years 8 months old Hereford ox, bred by Mr. J. King, of Colwall, near Ledbury, and fed on grass, hay, mangold wurzel, turnips, potatoes, 632lb. of cake, and 1 bushel of barleyflour. 165.—Commended.

43. Mr. J. T. Senior, of Broughton house, near Aylesbury, a 3 years 6 months old Hereford steer, bred by Mr. F. Stephens, of Hampton, near Kington, and fed on grass, hay and 730lb. of cake. 168.—The second prize of £10

45. Mr. G. Turner, of Barton, near Exeter, a 3 years 7 months old North Devon steer, bred by Mr. R. Messenger, of Molland, South Molton, and fed on hay mangold wurzel, 360lb. of cake, and 4 bushels of barleymeal. 168.—Commended.

46. Mr. T. Umbers, of Wappenbury, near Royal Leamington Spa, a 3 years 7 months old North Devon steer, bred by himself, and fed on grass, hay, turnips, 850lb. of cake, and 800lb. of barley and beanmeal. 148.—The first prize of £10 and a silver medal

55. Sir W. Wake, Bart., of Courteen Hall, Northampton, a 3 years 8 months old Hereford steer, bred by Mr. J. Williams, of Staunton-upon-Wye, and fed on grass, hay, mangold-wurzel, turnips, carrots, and 1,068lb. of cake. 147.—The second prize of £5.

CLASS V. Oxen or Steers, of any breed, under 4½ years of age, under 80 stone weight, without restrictions as to feeding, yet the kind or kinds of food must be specified.

56 Mr. W. J. Bailey, of Shenley-house, near Stoney Stratford, a 3 years 1 month old Hereford steer, bred by Mr. Stubbs, of Wheatmore, and fed on grass, hay, and oilcake. 146.—Highly commended.

59 Mr. T. Bridge, of Bunsbury, near Ingatestone, a 3 year 11 month old Hereford steer, bred by Mr. Arden, of the Ley, near Weobly, and fed on vegetable roots, grass, hay, oilcake, and beanmeal. 143.—The prize of £10 and a silver medal

63 Mr. J. Munnings, of Harpole, Northampton, a Scotch ox, fed on oilcake, beanmeal, grass, and hay. 139.—Highly commended.

64. Mr. J. Hulme, of Ballidon, Derby, a 3 year 8 months old Durham ox, bred by himself, and fed on turnips, potatoes, cut clover, tares, hay, oilcake, and beanmeal. 138.—Commended.

65. Mr. J. Tucker, of West Ham Abbey, Stratford, a 3 year 1 month old Hereford steer, bred by Mr. Roberts, of Tvintonbury, and fed on cake, meal, hay, swedes, and parsnips. 137.—Commended.

66. Mr. Waters, of Felix-hall, Kelvedon, a 3 year 6 months old Devon steer, bred by his Lordship, and fed on turnips, cake, hay, mangold wurzel, and beanmeal. 136.—Highly commended.

COWS.

CLASS VI.—Fattened COWS or Heifers, under 5 years of age. Freemartins and spayed Heifers are not qualified.

68. Messrs. Fuddington and Kemp, of Nether Broughton, near Louth, a 4 yea 8 months old short-horned heifer, bred by themselves, and fed on grass, hay cake, turnips, and beanmeal. 134.—The second prize of £10.

69. The Earl of Hardwicke, of Wimpole, near Arrington, a 4 year 3 months old short-horned heifer, bred by his Lordship, and fed on bean and barleymeal, mangold wurzel, and hay. 133.—Commended.

70. Mr. W. Ladds, of Ellington, near Huntingdon, a 4 year 1 month old Durham heifer, bred by himself, and fed on grass, swedes, cake, and beanmeal. 132.—Commended highly

71. The Earl of Radnor, of Coleshill, near Faringdon, a 2 year 7 months old Hereford and short-horned heifer, bred by his Lordship, and fed on hay, roots, corn, and cake. 131.—Highly commended.

73. Sir C. Tempest, Bart., of Broughton-hall, near Skipton, a 4 years 9 months old short-horned heifer, bred by himself, and fed on hay, cake, and turnips. 129.—The first prize of £20, and a silver medal, and a gold medal

74. The Rev. H. W. Wilson, of Kenyon-hall, near Lancaster, a 2 years 11 months old short-horned and Ayrshire heifer, bred by himself, and fed on cake, barleymeal, beans, peas, hay, and vegetables. 128. Third prize of £5.

CLASS VII.—Fattened Cows, of 5 years old and upwards. Freemartins and Spayed Heifers are not qualified.

76. Mr. Barnett, of Stratton-park, near Biggleswade, a 5 years 6 months old Durham cow, had one calf, bred by himself, and fed on grass, hay, oilcake, linseed and beanmeal, and carrots. 126.—The first prize of £20, and a silver medal.

78. Mr. J. T. Smith, of Thornby Grange, near Northampton, a 6 years 3 months old short-horned heifer, bred by Mr. Cook, of Cunnington, and fed on cake, beanmeal, carrots, and hay. 124.—The second prize of £5.

CLASS VIII.—Fattened Cows, of 5 years old and upwards, that shall have had at least two live calves as amicable births.

80. The Marquis of Exeter, of Burghley, a 7 years 2 months old Durham cow, had two calves, bred by himself, and fed on oilcake, barleymeal, and turnips. 122.—The second prize of £5.

81. Mr. E. Lakin, of Beauchamp Court, near Worcester, an 11 years 9 months old short-horned cow, had six calves, bred by himself, and fed on hay, grass, vetches, tares, cabbages, turnips, mangold wurzel, potatoes, oilcake, and beanmeal. 121.—The first prize of £20 and a silver medal.

SHEEP.

CLASS IX.—Long-woolled fat wether Sheep, 1 year old, that have never had cake, corn, meal, seeds, or pulse.

103. Mr. Thomas Twitchell, of Willington, Beds., a pen of three 20 months old Leicester wethers, bred by himself, from rams hired of Mr S. Bennett, of Bickerings-park, Woburn. 101.—The first prize of £20 and a silver medal.

105. Mr. Thomas Umbers, of Wappenbury, near Royal Leamington Spa, a pen of three 20 months old new Leicester wethers, bred by himself, from rams hired of Mr W. Umbers, jun., and Mr. J. Buckley. 100.—The second prize of £5.

CLASS X.—Long-woolled fat wether Sheep, 1 year old, under 8 stone weight, that have never had cake, corn, meal, seeds, or pulse.

104. Mr. J. S. Burgess, of Holme-Pierrepoint, near Nottingham, a pen of three 20 months long-woolled wethers, bred by himself. 99.—The prize of £10, and a silver medal.

CLASS XI.—Long-woolled fat wether Sheep, 1 year old, without restrictions as to feeding.

108 Mr. J. S. Burgess, of Holme-Pierrepoint, near Nottingham, a pen of three 20 months old Leicester wethers, bred by himself. 97.—Commended.

109. The Earl of Ellesmere, of Worsley New Manors, a pen of three 21 months old Leicester wethers, bred by himself. 96.—Commended.

112. Mr. George Parkinson, of Lurkin, near Bedford, Yorkshire, a pen of three 20 months old Leicester wethers, bred by himself, from rams hired of Sir T. Sykes, Bart. 91.

114. Mr. William Sandy, of Holme-Pierrepoint, near Nottingham, a pen of three 20 months old long-woolled wethers, bred by himself. 89.—The second prize of £5.

117. Mr. Thomas Twitchell, of Willington, near Bedford, a pen of three 20 months old Leicester wethers, bred by himself, from rams, hired of Mr. S. Bennett. 86.—The first prize of £20, a silver medal, and a gold medal

CLASS XII.—Long and short-woolled cross bred fat wether Sheep, one year old, without restrictions as to feeding.

121. The Duke of Manchester, of Kimbolton Castle, Kimbolton, a pen of three 21 months old Southdown and Leicester cross wethers, bred by Mr. G. Edie, Wytonhill-lodge, near Huntingdon, from rams of his grace. 82.—The second prize of £5.

122 Mr. Charles Tomson, of Sundon, near Luton, Bedfordshire, a pen of three 21 months old Down and Gloucester cross wethers, bred by himself. 81.—The first prize of £10, and a silver medal.

EXTRA STOCK.—LONG-WOOLLED SHEEP.

129. Mr. Charles Large, of Broadwell, near Burford, a 56 months old long-woolled ewe, bred by himself. 74.—A silver medal.

CLASS XIII.—Short-woolled fat wether Sheep, 1 year old, without restrictions as to feeding.

138. Mr. Grantham, of Stoneham, near Lewes, a pen of three 20 months old Southdown wethers, bred by himself. 65.—The first prize of £20, and a silver medal and a gold medal

142. Mr. S. Webb, of Babraham, near Cambridge, a pen of three 20 months old Southdown wethers, bred by himself. 61.—The second prize of £5.

CLASS XIV.—Short-woolled fat wether Sheep, 2 years old, under 8 stone weight, without restrictions as to feeding

149. Mr. Samuel Webb, of Babraham, near Cambridge, a pen of 20 months old Southdown wethers, bred by himself. 54.—The prize of £30, and a silver medal

CLASS XV.—Short-woolled fat wether Sheep, 2 years old, without restrictions as to feeding.

152. The Duke of Bedford, of Woburn Abbey, a pen of three 32 months old Southdown wethers, bred by his Grace. 51.

153. Mr. Grantham, of Stoneham, near Lewes, a pen of three 32 months old Southdown wethers, bred by himself. 50.—The first prize of £20 and a silver medal.

156. Mr. Samuel Webb, of Babraham, near Cambridge, a pen of three 32 months old Southdown wethers, bred by Mr. H. J. Adeane, of Babraham. 47.—The second prize of £5

EXTRA STOCK.—SHORT-WOOLLED SHEEP.

161. Mr. W. B. Harris, of Hinton-farm, Abingdon, a 7 years 9 months old Southdown ewe, bred by himself. 43.—A silver medal.

PIGS.

CLASS XVI.—Pigs of any breed above 13 and under 26 weeks old.

167. Mr. William Hobman, of Ewell-marsh Farm, near Epsom, a pen of three 24 weeks 5 days old Nonpareil pigs, bred by himself, and fed on peas, barleymeal, and middlings 58.—The first prize of £10 and a silver medal

CLASS XVII.—Pigs, of any breed, above 26 and under 52 weeks old.

168 Prince Albert, Windsor Castle, a pen of three 28 weeks old Suffolk and Berkshire pigs, bred by his Royal Highness, and fed on meal, milk, and peas. 1.—Highly commended.

171 Mr. W. F. Hobbs, of Marksheil, near Coggeshall, a pen of three 30 weeks 4 days old unproved Essex pigs, bred by himself, and fed on peas, barleymeal, and steamed potatoes, and pollard, and milk 35.

176 Lord Western, of Felix-hall, near Kelvedon, a pen of three 27 weeks 2 days old Essex pigs, bred by his lordship, and fed on barleymeal and beans. 20.—The second prize of £5.

EXTRA STOCK.—PIGS.

178 Mr. J. Crawther, of Isleworth, near Brentford, a 31 weeks old improved Middlesex pig, bred by himself, and fed on boiled potatoes, fine middlings, and skimmed milk. 26.—Commended.

182. Lord Western, of Felix-hall, near Kelvedon, a 27 weeks old improved Essex pig, bred by his lordship, and fed on barleymeal and beans. 24.—A silver medal.

HUNGARY GRASS, Hon. Secretary.

Among the unsuccessful competitors were the following :—

1. The Rev. C. A. F. Annesley, of Eydon-hall, Banbury, a 4 years 7 months old Durham ox, bred by himself, and fed on grass, hay, potatoes, turnips, cake and meal.

7. The Marquis of Exeter, of Burghley-park, near Stamford, a 4 years 3 months old Durham ox, bred by his Lordship, and fed on oilcake, barleymeal and turnips. 104.

10. The Rev. C. James, of Evenlode, near Moreton-in-Marsh, a 4 years 8 months old Durham ox, bred by himself, and fed on hay, grass, turnips, linseed, barley and beanmeal. 191.

15 The Earl of Radnor, of Coleshill, near Faringdon, a 4 years 9 months old Hereford ox, bred by Mr. Moore, of Homme, near Weobly, and fed on cake, meal, hay and roots. 186.

20. Earl Talbot, of Ingestre, near Stafford, a 4 years 10 months old Hereford ox, bred by his Lordship, and fed on turnips, hay, cake, barleymeal, and oats. 181.

22. Earl of Warwick, of Warwick Castle, near Warwick, a 4 years 9 months old Hereford ox, bred by Mr. Perry of Monkland, near Leominster, from a bull of Mr. John Perry, and fed on grass, hay, turnips, potatoes, barley and beanmeal and cake. 179.

47. Prince Albert, Windsor Castle, an under 5 years old Scotch steer, fed on grass, hay, turnips, carrots, potatoes, 1120lb. of cake, 980lb of beanmeal, 280lb of barleymeal, and 70lb. of oats. 3.

77. Duke of Bedford, of Woburn Abbey, a Scotch ox, fed on turnips, carrots, mangold wurzel, barley, and linseed-meal, grass, and hay. 145.

80. Prince Albert, of Windsor Castle, an under 5 years old Scotch ox, fed on grass, hay, turnips, carrots, potatoes, beanmeal, cake, barleymeal and oats. 2.

113. The Earl of Radnor, of Coleshill, near Faringdon, a pen of three 20 months old new Leicester wethers, bred by his lordship, from rams hired of Mr. John Beasley.

115. Lord Southampton of Whittlebury-lodge, near Towcester, a pen of three 20 months old Leicester wethers, bred by his lordship; stock from Mr. Hewit's flock. 98.

118. The Duke of Bedford, of Woburn Abbey, a pen of three 21 months old Leicester wethers, bred by his grace. 95.

124. The Duke of Bedford of Woburn Abbey, a 32 months old Leicester wether, bred by his grace. 79.

127. The Marquis of Exeter, of Burghley, a 21 months old long-woolled wether, bred by his lordship. 76.

135. Lord Braybrooke of Audley End, near Saffron Walden, a pen of three 21 months old short-woolled wethers, bred by his lordship. 66.

136 Lord Huntingfield of Heveningham, near Yarford, a pen of three 20 months old Southdown wethers, bred by his lordship. 67.

137. The Duke of Manchester, of Kimbolton Castle, a pen of three 21 months old Southdown wethers, bred by his grace. 66.

139. The Duke of Richmond, of Goodwood, a pen of three 20 months old Southdown wethers, bred by his grace. 63.

146. The Duke of Manchester, of Kimbolton Castle, a pen of three 21 months old Southdown wethers, bred by his grace. 57

147. The Duke of Richmond, of Goodwood, a pen of three 20 months old Southdown wethers, bred by his grace. 56.

150. Mr. Barnard, M.P., of Gosfield Hall, Halstead, a pen of three 32 months old Southdown wethers, bred by himself. 53.

154. The Duke of Richmond, of Goodwood, a pen of three 32 months old Southdown wethers, bred by his grace.

157. Mr. Barnard, M.P., of Gosfield Hall, Halstead, a 44 months old Southdown wether, bred by himself. 46.

158. The Duke of Bedford, of Woburn Abbey, a 32 months old short-woolled gross wether, bred by his grace. 45.

160. Lord Braybrooke, of Audley End, near Saffron Walden, a 20 months old short-woolled wether, bred by his lordship. 43.

162. The Duke of Richmond, of Goodwood, a 44 months old Southdown wether, bred by his grace. 41.

164. Lord Western, of Felix Hall, near Kelvedon, a 45 months old Angle Merino wether, bred by his lordship. 39.

173. The Earl of Radnor, of Coleshill, near Faringdon, a pen of three 39 weeks and 5 days old Coleshill pigs, bred by his lordship, and fed on meal, whey, and skimmed milk. 33.

ACCIDENTS AND OFFENCES.

SUDDEN DEATH IN DRURY-LANE THEATRE.—Mr. Jeyes, a solicitor, living in Harper street, Red Lion-square, accompanied by his daughter and two friends, a lady and gentleman, went about to enter Drury-lane theatre on Saturday night last, when Mr Jeyes, in the act of taking out his money to pay for his admission, was observed by his friend to stagger. Running forward he caught him in his arms, and with the assistance of Mr. Hooper, a retired naval surgeon, residing in Chandos-street, had him conveyed outside the theatre, where restoratives were applied, but without success.

ALARMING FIRE.—About ten o'clock on last Sunday forenoon, a fire broke out in the back part of the premises of Mr. J. Wmsor, victualler, Old King's Head, 15, Bear-street, Leicester-square. Five brigade engines, under the direction of Mr. Fegge, of the King-street station, having arrived shortly after the outbreak, and a powerful one from the County depôt, under the superintendence of Mr. Carter, the fury of the fire was soon subdued, but not before considerable damage was done. Mr. Winsor is insured in the County fire-offices.

On Monday morning, Mr. George Swan, a gentleman of respectability, who had long resided at Hoxton, committed suicide by shooting himself. He had for many years carried on an extensive business as a soap-boiler and tallow-chandler in Paul-street, Finsbury, but having accumulated a handsome fortune, had retired.

ACCIDENT AT GRIFFIN'S WHARF, TOOLEY-STREET.—On Wednesday, whilst a labourer, named Timothy Crowley, was employed at Griffin's Wharf, Tooley street, in hoisting up a load of timber to the third floor of one of the warehouses, by some means it became disengaged from the sling, and fell upon him. He was extricated as speedily as possible, and conveyed, in an insensible state, covered with blood, to Guy's Hospital, where it was found that his skull was fractured in a shocking manner, and that his left leg and several of his ribs were broken. The operation of trepanning was immediately performed, but, from the nature of the injuries, little hopes are entertained of his ultimate recovery.

ALARMING FIRE, AND MIRACULOUS ESCAPE.—On Thursday morning last, at a few minutes past one o clock, a fire was discovered to be raging on the premises of Mr. Chevalier, straw-bonnet manufacturer, at 186, High-street, Borough. An alarm was immediately raised, and in the course of a few seconds a female made her appearance at the first floor window, crying piteously for help, and, before a ladder could be procured, to render any assistance, she threw herself out. Fortunately, police constable, 137 M, caught her in his arms, otherwise it is probable she would have received some fatal injury. No sooner and this female been received by the officer than three other females presented themselves at the same part of the building. Ladders, in the interim, having been brought to the spot, they were all carried down, and without receiving any personal injury. On the arrival of the engines the fire was extinguished, but not before considerable damage was done.

THE THEATRES.

DRURY LANE.

This theatre is in "full swing" of prosperity. Balfe's opera of the "Bohemian Girl," is increasing nightly in public favour, and the ballet improves upon every repetition. The indefatigable manager has a most splendid Pantomime in preparation, in which all the artistic resources of his establishment will be brought into full play.

HAYMARKET.

Want of space this week prevents us from discharging that pleasant task of noticing this true home of the English drama as we would wish; but we cannot altogether pass it over. Several new pieces have been successfully produced recently, and, as we learn from an announcement, several more are in preparation. For the spirited lessee's sake, we hope that every one of them will prove

"A tenth wave stronger than its predecessors."

ADELPHI

On Monday last a new piece (from the French, of course), entitled "Dominique, or The Possessed," was produced at this house, for the sole purpose, seemingly, of introducing a Mr. Foreman (from the York Theatre) to a London audience—for, in itself, it possesses no attraction whatever. Mr. Foreman is an actor of considerable ability, and, in connection with Wright, will ably fill up the many gaps that have lately taken place at this favourite house of "amusement and anon amazement!" To this succeeded a new farce, from the pen of Mr. Redwell, called, "Husbands, Lovers, and Wives," which is little more than a farcical version of "The Merry Wives of Windsor." Its reception was rather equivocal, although Wright kept it afloat by his extraordinary buoyancy.

OLYMPIC.

The drollest incident which has taken place at this house of merriment is that of a new Piece of Illusion, in which the chief actors are the lessee and a bona fide cabman. The former hires a real horse and cab; but, owing to the stage dimensions, only drives it to imaginary distances—the latter being a matter-of-fact fellow, and not up to such deceptions, insists upon his "reg'lar fare" on hearing that his nag and vehicle were to proceed from Temple Bar to Blackwall. He accordingly cites the lessee before the magisterial bench, where an explanation takes place to the satisfaction of both parties. The Olympic continues to be highly attractive and well attended.

By the official returns published by the Customs the exports of the precious metals to foreign and colonial parts for the week ending Thursday last were as under, viz.:—

	Ounces.
Silver coin to Rotterdam	10,000
Silver coin to Hong Kong and Macao	12,000
Silver coin to New York	10,000
Silver bars to Hamburgh	4,000

THE QUEEN'S VISIT TO THE MIDLAND COUNTIES.

(Continued from page 377.)

year, remarkably warm. About eight o'clock the Duke of Wellington left Chatsworth-house, for Chesterfield station, in his britchska. The Royal party breakfasted about half-past eight o'clock. At a few minutes after nine o'clock, her Majesty was conducted to the entrance-hall, and, taking a final leave of the guests there assembled, entered the Royal carriage. Her Majesty shook hands with Viscount Melbourne, Lord Morpeth, and several other noblemen, before taking her departure. Precisely at a quarter-past nine o'clock, the carriage drove off, preceded by six outriders, and escorted by the three troops of yeomanry cavalry.

A little before nine o'clock the Duke of Wellington arrived in Chesterfield, being loudly cheered all along the line of route. The bells, which had ceased for a short time, rung out again to greet his grace.

At a quarter to ten, an open carriage and four, containing the Duke of Devonshire, and G. H. Cavendish, Esq., M.P., drove up to the station.

One of the Royal carriages and four next reached the station, containing the Duke and Duchess of Norfolk.

At ten minutes to ten o'clock, her Majesty and Prince Albert arrived at the station. The Queen was assisted from her carriage, and into the railway carriage, by the Duke of Devonshire.

One of the royal carriages received into it the statues immediately after that which contained the Queen and Prince, in which were the Earl of Jersey, Lady Portman, the Hon. Matilda Paget, Maid of Honour to the Queen; and Mr. G. E. Anson. Both the Queen and Prince seemed in high spirits. Her Majesty wore a straw bonnet with a blue feather, and a black lace veil. The bonnet was lined with blue velvet. Her Majesty was habited in a puce-coloured cashmere travelling pelisse, edged with grey fur. The Prince wore a blue military cloak.

At ten minutes past ten o'clock the train steamed off amid the prolonged cheers of the assemblage. His Grace the Duke of Devonshire accompanied the royal party to Derby, from whence he returned by special train.

The Duke has won golden opinions from all classes. His hospitality has been unbounded. Covers were laid for fifty-seven in the salle-à-manger on Friday. On the same day eighty-seven dined at the servants' table; one hundred and one servants in livery sat down, and about two hundred others dined at the mansion during the day. Six oxen and twenty sheep had been slaughtered for the occasion.

HER MAJESTY'S ARRIVAL AT DERBY.

Her Majesty arrived at the Derby station precisely at fifteen minutes to eleven. The approaches to the Railway were literally choked up by dense masses of people. All along the line, too, the crowds were immense—there must at least have been 30,000 to 40,000 persons present. Addresses to her Majesty and Prince Albert were presented from the Mayor and Corporation of Derby, and from the clergy, headed by the Archdeacon.

Her Majesty did not alight, but she rose, as did the Prince, from her seat and acknowledged in the most condescending manner the repeated hearty cheers with which she was greeted. The stay of the royal party was about ten minutes. A new train was then backed in order to pass on the Nottingham line, and her Majesty departed for that town.

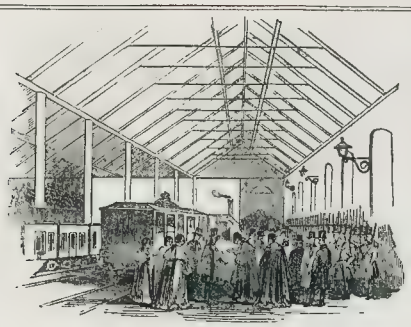
The Duke of Wellington followed her Majesty soon after. His Grace had a special carriage to the Derby station.

In the evening, about seventy gentlemen dined together at the Royal Hotel; one of the dishes provided for the occasion being a baron of beef, weighing upwards of 140lb.

HER MAJESTY'S ARRIVAL AT NOTTINGHAM.

The reception given to the Royal party at Nottingham was brilliant in the extreme; not only by the inhabitants, but by the directors of the Midland Counties Railway Company. The whole of the spacious station was enclosed, and magnificently decorated with evergreens and flowers. The platform on which her Majesty was expected to alight was covered with crimson cloth. For a few weeks previous fifty men had been employed in preparing festoons of evergreens, and these were suspended in perfect order, so as literally to form a grove from one end of the station to the other. The arrival terminus had been boarded over for the accommodation of spectators, and, along with the adjoining promenade, held, it was computed, about 3000 persons, each of whom was admitted by ticket only. The vestibule of the station-house, and the adjoining room, underwent enrichment; the former was lined with paintings, and the latter handsomely furnished. In front of the station-house, and communicating with the vestibule, an elegant portico was erected, lined with fluted rose and white-coloured furniture. The roof was an ornamented canopy, surmounted with a crown. On each side of the carriage-way a guard of honour was stationed. Galleries were erected at various places on the line of road, for the accommodation of the thousands anxious to catch a glimpse of Royalty. Eight triumphal arches were also erected: three on the new road in the Meadows, two together at the communication of the new road with the London road, and three others on the latter road, the last being at the end of the Trent-bridge. There was a number of large flags and banners displayed, on which were appropriate inscriptions, such as "Welcome, Victoria and Albert—Welcome to Nottingham—Prosperity to the House of Brunswick," &c. &c.

In addition to the Inniskilling Dragoons at the barracks, a detachment of the 64th foot, from Weedon, (where the regiment is stationed, under the command of Colonel Stretton), was in attendance; and the South Nottinghamshire Regiment of Yeomanry, under the command of Colonel Moore, and the Sherwood Rangers (who arrived in the town on the previous day), under Colonel Sir Thomas White, with their respective bands, added considerably to the animation of the scene.



DERBY STATION.

CHESTERFIELD RAILWAY STATION AND TRIUMPHAL ARCH.

Precisely at twenty minutes past eleven, the discharge of cannon from the Castle announced the arrival of her Majesty. Immediately as the splendid carriage came up to the platform, the Dragoons presented arms, and the fine band played "God Save the Queen." Her Majesty was met at the carriage-door by the Earl of Scarborough (Lord-Lieutenant of the county), Lord Ranclifte, the Mayor, (who wore a white rosette), and by the Directors of the Railway Company; and was conducted to the waiting-room to which we have referred, where a collation was provided for the Royal visitors by Mrs. Ward, of the George the Fourth Inn.

The engine which drew the train, was the Basilisk, and was driven by Mr. Kearsley.

Her Majesty, after alighting from the carriage, leaned on Prince Albert's arm, and, as well as his Royal Highness, repeatedly bowed in acknowledgment of the applause of those assembled.

In about ten minutes after, the royal party appeared in front of the station, where the Duke of Rutland's carriage was in waiting. They immediately entered it, and proceeded, amidst the cheering of the assembled thousands, the ringing of bells, and the firing of cannon. We should say that there were at least 100,000 persons on the ground.

The military escorts which conducted the Queen to Belvoir, consisted of part of the 6th Inniskilling Dragoons.

At Ratcliffe, which is six miles from Nottingham, there were three triumphal arches, besides the ornamental decorations of the houses in the road. The road was lined with people.

At Bingham there were three arches. Here her Majesty changed horses.

The Duke of Rutland met her Majesty three miles from Belvoir, near a village called Red Mile. His tenantry had previously formed, to the number of 200, in line, on each side of the road, and escorted her Majesty up to the Castle.

At about four miles from Belvoir, Mr. Norton Norton, of Elton Hall, and his tenantry, waited on either side of the road, and followed her Majesty to her destination, which her Majesty reached at twenty-five minutes past one o'clock.

At Nottingham, the day was a general holiday, and every shop was closed; and a public dinner took place in the Exchange Rooms, over which the Mayor presided. The inmates of the Poor-house were treated with roast beef and plum-pudding, in honour of the occasion.

Of the festal preparations at Nottingham, our engravings present the most striking scenes—as the interior of the railway station, with the arrival of her Majesty; the exterior of the station, with the elegant portico; and a sketch of the vast multitude of spectators, from one of the most commanding points. Lastly, is the triumphal arch, erected across the road, at the entrance of the Trent Bridge. This novel arch was raised by the "Nautilus Crew:" it consisted of their splendid eight-oared cutter, fifty-six feet long, and of Searle's best build, suspended across the road, at an elevation of forty feet. it was profusely decorated with evergreens, flowers, ribbons, and rosettes, and gold and silver ornaments: the eight oars were fixed in the rowlocks, and from each hung a silk banner; from the middle of the boat was hoisted a large union jack and streamer, and strings of national flags reached from its summit to the stem and stern of the boat; and the latter was adorned with its rich emblematic flag. The crew, in their full-dress uniform, with their friends, occupied a gallery to the left of the arch. This novel commemoration evidently attracted the attention of the Queen and Prince Albert, who graciously acknowledged the hearty salute of the loyal and gallant clubs of "good old Nottingham."

HER MAJESTY AT BELVOIR.

Belvoir is one of the most magnificent castellated structures in the kingdom, and is second only to "majestic Windsor." Camden derives its name from the fine prospect which it commands; standing as it does on the termination of a peninsular hill, "on the edge of Leicestershire," although "the Vale of Bever" lies in three shires—Leicester, Lincoln, and Nottingham. It has been the seat of the noble family of Manners for nearly three centuries and a half, previous to which the castle and lordship had been chiefly possessed by persons of considerable eminence, from the Norman Conquest. The adjoining village of Belvoir is eleven miles north of Melton Mowbray, seven miles west of Grantham. Very great alterations were made, and an entirely new arrangement was projected in the interior of the castle by the present Duke of Rutland, under the direction of the late James Wyatt, although it is to the taste of the late Duchess of Rutland that the castle is indebted for its present appearance. It is quadrangular in plan, and is ascended by superb stone steps. The view from the terraces and towers comprehends the whole vale of Belvoir and the adjoining country, as far as Lincoln, including twenty-two of the Duke of Rutland's manors. On the southern slope of the hill are gardens and shrubberies in terraces; and the park beneath contains some magnificent forest trees. Belvoir has one of the most superb interiors, and contains one of the most valuable collections of paintings in the kingdom. The last general repairs are stated to have cost the noble owner upwards of £60,000.

Upon her Majesty's arrival at Belvoir, on Monday, she was received by the Duke of Rutland and Lord John Manners, and proceeded, accompanied by the Prince, to her own private apartments.

Dinner was ordered for eight o'clock, precisely, and shortly before dinner the Rev. Dr. Staunton presented to her Majesty, on a velvet cushion, the key of Staunton Tower, the stronghold of the castle, according to custom, when any of the Royal Family have honoured Belvoir Castle with their presence. The Staunton Tower is an outwork of defence, and the family of that name have long held the manor of Staunton by tenure of castle-guard, by which they were required to appear with guards, for the defence of this strong part, when called upon by the Lord of the Castle.

The dinner party on Monday consisted of her Majesty, Prince Albert, the Queen Dowager, the Duke of Rutland, the Duke and Duchess of Bedford, Lord and Lady Hardwicke, Lord and Lady Brownlow, Sir Robert and Lady Peel, the Duke of Wellington, Earl Howe, Lady Portman, Miss Paget, Miss Drummond, the Earl of Jersey, General Wemyss, Colonel Bouverie, Lord Forester, Mr. Anson, the Earl of Wilton, Sir W. M. Dixie, the Rev. Dr. Staunton, the Rev. Mr. Thornton, Sir Frederick Trench, Earl Jermyn and Lady Catherine Jermyn, Mr. and Lady Emily Drummond, Mr. Wortley and Lady Emmeline Stuart Wortley, the Marquis of Granby, Lord Charles Manners, Lord John Manners, Lord George Manners, Lady Adeliza Manners, and the Rev. Mr. Thornton, the Duke's chaplain who said grace.

Nearly the whole of the guests were attired in the Belvoir uniform, viz.—scarlet dress coats with white facings.

Her Majesty retired to rest at a quarter past eleven.

On Tuesday morning the Queen breakfasted at the usual hour, and at a quarter past nine, accompanied by most of the guests in the Castle, attended morning prayer in the chapel.

At eleven o'clock, two carriages arrived at the door; they were each drawn by four black horses, with outriders in the noble duke's livery, mounted on thorough-bred horses of the same colour.

The first carriage contained her Majesty the Queen, the Queen Dowager, the Prince Consort, and the Duke of Rutland.

In the second were Lord Hardwicke, Lady Portman, Lady Brownlow, and Lady Adeliza Manners.

The Duke of Wellington, with Lord George Manners, entered a chariot belonging to the Duke of Rutland.

The bulk of the company left Belvoir Castle by the duke's private road, but the carriages were driven by a different and more public route. As the cavalcade passed along the road numerous horsemen joined it, and by the time Croxton Park was within sight, there could not have been less than 300 persons present. Arriving there, the procession was joined by about 500 more, among whom were nearly all the gentlemen of the Melton Hunt, and many ladies, foremost among whom was Miss Manners, of Goadley-hall, a distant relative of the Rutland family. Miss Charlesworth and Miss Doyle, both well known in the Hunt, were also present.

THE ROYAL PROGRESS THROUGH CHESTERFIELD.

At this point, Prince Albert left the carriage and mounted his hunter, (six of his horses have arrived here.) The crowd of horsemen here gave three cheers for the two Queens of England, and the Duke of Wellington having alighted from his carriage and mounted his hunter, the royal party moved on towards the village of Waltham, and the hounds proceeded to Melton Spinney, before they were laid on. After a short delay a fox was found, and went away in good style, but was soon run to ground, and killed. From Melton Spinney the party proceeded to Freeby-wood, where, however, they did not find: but at Waltham-pasture they did, and the fox was run to ground in three fields. They found again at Newman's-gorse, and from here there was a very hard run; the Prince in particular, by the remarkable speed of his horse Emancipation, attracted the attention of the multitudes who were at different points collected. The scene at the throwing off at Croxton, was extremely inspiring, owing to the numbers of horsemen, and lady equestrians, who thronged the place.

Her Majesty returned to lunch soon after two o'clock.

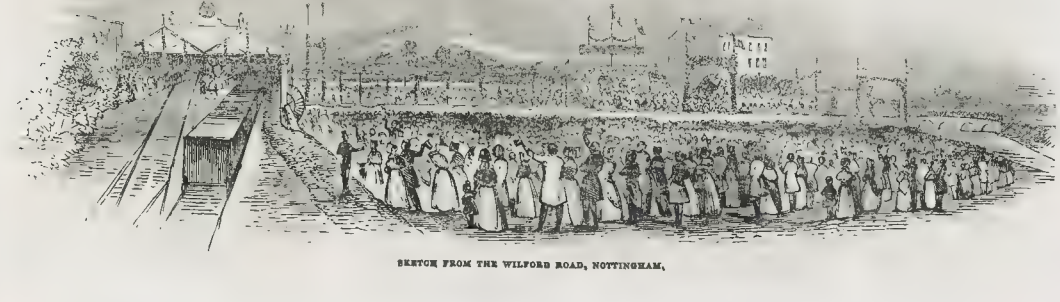
The whole of her Majesty's movements at Belvoir, partook more of the nature of a private visit than they did even at Chatsworth.

The hunting party returned to the Castle, at about five o'clock.

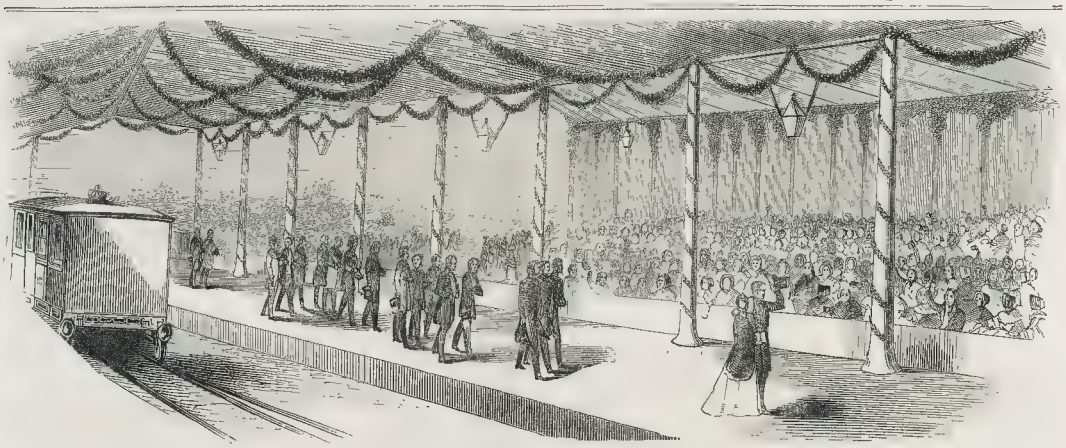
In the evening, before dinner, the Mayor of Grantham (Mr. Kewney), and the Mayor of Leicester (Mr. Harris), presented the addresses of the corporations of the respective towns. In addition there were also presental addresses from the freemen of Leicester, and from the "Odd-fellows" of Leicester.

Dinner took place at eight o'clock precisely. The Queen sat oppos te Prince Albert. The Duke of Rutland sat on her Majesty's left, and the Duke of Bedford on her right. Prince Albert had on his left the Queen Dowager, and on his right Lady Adeliza Manners. The Duke of Wellington sat on the left of the Queen Dowager. The rest of the guests were placed as on the previous day, with the addition of the presence of the two Mayors, and the Earl and Countess of Wilton.

After her Majesty and the guests had retired from the dining-room, they proceeded to the suite of drawing-rooms. In the "Regent's Gallery" there is some tapestry of a curious kind, representing a series of scenes from "Don Quixote." Belvoir Castle contains many very remarkable and valuable objects, the greater number of which were also seen by the Queen at different periods during her stay. Among them is the massive silver cistern, which is filled with punch



SKETCH FROM THE WILFORD ROAD, NOTTINGHAM.



HER MAJESTY'S ARRIVAL AT THE RAILWAY STATION, NOTTINGHAM

whenever family christenings take place. It was made by Child.

Her Majesty retired to rest at a quarter past eleven.

On Wednesday morning her Majesty heard prayers at a quarter past nine o'clock. Her Majesty and the Prince very shortly after went out to walk together in the grounds. Prince Albert was in shooting dress, and her Majesty wore a pelisse of blue velvet trimmed with white fur.

At a few minutes before eleven the Prince went out to shoot, accompanied by the Duke of Bedford and the Duke of Wellington. The other gentlemen, with a few exceptions, went out hunting.

Her majesty, attended by the ladies of the party, and the Duke of Rutland, drove to see the hounds throw off. They were attended by a complete cavalcade of equestrians, and there were crowds of people waiting to welcome her. The effect of this procession (if it may be so called), as seen at different points of the road, and particularly opposite the inn at Belvoir, was very striking.

The Queen returned at five minutes past two o'clock to the Castle. Prince Albert returned at a quarter-past two from shooting. The Duke of Wellington returned just before her Majesty.

Annexed are a few additional particulars of the meet on Tuesday.

Prince Albert looked remarkably well, and even among the followers of the Duke of Rutland's hounds, acknowledged on all hands to be one of the first fields in the kingdom, his fine manly figure as he rode along in the front rank, was the admiration of every beholder. He was dressed in a scarlet hunting-coat, with white leather breeches, and top-boots, and looked from head to foot a sportsman.

THE "NAUTILUS" ARCH—THE QUEEN'S DEPARTURE FROM NOTTINGHAM.

The number of horsemen who joined the cavalcade rendered the due observance of etiquette a matter of some difficulty; but her Majesty the Queen and the Queen Dowager, who were seated with the Duke of Rutland in the first carriage, did not appear at all disconcerted by the near approach of horsemen to the carriage window. On the contrary, her Majesty seemed to enjoy the scene very much, and laughed heartily at those little incidents of flood and field which are the necessary accompaniments of a mountainous career.

The Duke of Wellington, when going to the meet, rode a horse of the Earl of Wilton's, but the cheering and excitement with which the Duke was received made the horse restiff, and he was obliged to dismount and resume his own horse, which, as may be supposed, is more accustomed to the noise occasioned by these demonstrations of respect. The noble Duke was attired in a scarlet coat and white leather smalls. Every eye was turned towards the hero as he rode up to Lord Jersey, with whom he remained in conversation some minutes, and the interest excited by his appearance in the field seemed scarcely second to that occasioned by royalty. His Grace rode among the thickest of the horsemen, and entered into conversation with several gentlemen belonging to the hunt.

The Court left Belvoir Castle at eight o'clock on Thursday morning, en route for Windsor. The Duke of Wellington returned to town by railway on Thursday; on reaching the Rugby station his Grace was vociferously cheered, and very kindly removed the window glasses of his carriage to acknowledge their applause.

EXTERIOR OF THE RAILWAY STATION NOTTINGHAM.

PRINCE ALBERT'S VISIT TO BIRMINGHAM.

Although in our journal of last week, we chronicled the visit of his Royal Highness Prince Albert to this "Midland Metropolis," we are induced to return to the interesting event, for the sake of illustrating some of the most attractive scenes of our national ingenuity.

Taking the establishments in the order in which they were visited by the Prince, first are in Dartmouth-street, which were inspected twelve years since, by Her Majesty, when Princess Victoria. His Royal Highness having alighted in the principal area, where he was met by Mr. J. O. Bacchus and some of his managers, was immediately escorted into the glass-house. A platform had been erected for his Royal Highness to walk upon, on one side of which about 150 or 200 of the work men and their wives were accommodated, and on the other side was an elevated gallery for the use of the immediate friends of the proprietors of the establishment. In the glass-house, his Royal Highness witnessed the process of blowing and pressing glass; the latter, being a new operation, appeared to attract his attention—not less from the rapidity with which the articles are made with devices apparently ready cut, than from the beauty of the specimens thus produced under his eye. Indeed, the Prince was decidedly the most attentive spectator, and made numerous enquiries as the work was going on. The articles of which the Prince witnessed the manufacture were a cup, some glasses, and one of the pillars to a French pedestal lamp. Messrs. Bacchus and Son had also made arrangements for executing a splendid cup, from the heated metal, to the finishing touch in the cutting-room while his Royal Highness was present, so that the whole process only occupied about twelve or fifteen minutes. Mr. Bacchus presented this cup to his Royal Highness, after which it was delivered to the annealers, to be made ready for use.

THE GLASS-WORKS OF MESSRS. BACCHUS AND SON,

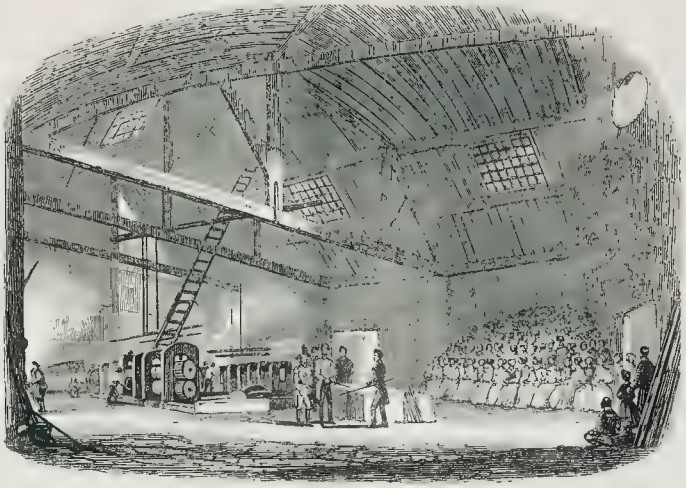
From the glass house, his Royal Highness proceeded to the mixing room. The Prince inspected the process of making the raw material previous to fusing and forming what is termed the metal. His Royal Highness was then escorted across the area into the cutting room; here were a number of lathes at work upon articles exactly similar, so that his Royal Highness might see almost at one time the whole process of cutting, from its commencement to its close. From the cutting-room his Royal Highness proceeded into the show-room where the cup above named was delivered to him for inspection. We annex an engraving of this beautiful memorial of the royal visit. The Prince having expressed his admiration of the splendid display, then departed amidst the hearty cheers of the workmen. There are nearly 200 hands employed in these large works; and about 12,000lbs. of glass of every description are produced weekly.

His Royal Highness then proceeded to the



SARGANT'S SWORD-GRINDING WORKS, BIRMINGHAM.

MESSRS. MUNTZ'S ROLLING MILLS,

in Water-street, where he was received by Mr. Muntz, who conducted the Prince through the different departments of the mill, where the various operations of manufacturing the patent yellow metal were being carried on. He was first shown the metal in its liquid state, taken from the furnace, and cast in bars or pigs; next the process of heating the solid mass, which, while in this state, was subjected to the operation of powerful rollers, turned by not less powerful steam machinery; the latter operation being shown in our illustration. The flattened bar, after being taken from the rollers, was again subjected to the heat of the furnace, and once more passed under the rollers, and in this way, by four operations, the shapeless mass was converted into a fine sheet of metal, cut by circular shears into the required length, and prepared for coating the "wooden walls" of old England, for which it is found peculiarly fitted, and is fast superseding in the British navy and our mercantile marine, the more expensive process of copper sheathing.

Of the more ponderous apparatus to be seen in Birmingham, that of the Rolling Mills is the most interesting. In these, a vast force is necessary, in order, by simple compression, to dilate into a long and thin sheet, the bar or ingot of metal. The action of the steam-engine, the source of motion, the rapid revolution of the large and heavy fly, almost baffling the eye in its efforts to follow its course, and the perpetual whirl of the rollers elongating the hard material presented to them, altogether give to the stranger a striking example of the wonderful power and almost endless application of the force of steam.

MUNTZ'S ROLLING MILLS, BIRMINGHAM.

BACCHUS'S GLASS WORKS, BIRMINGHAM.

From Mr. Muntz's mills his Royal Highness proceeded to Messrs. Jennens and Betridge's Papier-maché Manufactory; and thence to in Charlotte-street, where the new process of rolling gun barrels, and turning and boring them, by steam machinery, is very extensively carried on. The highly finished and perfect style with which the barrel was turned out excited the admiration of his Royal Highness, who very carefully examined a variety of guns which have just been completed by Messrs. Sargant for the Ordnance department, by order of Government. By the aid of their very extensive and complete machinery, the proprietors are enabled to manufacture about a thousand guns of various descriptions per week, and, if a necessity arose for the sudden arming of a large military force, this number could be doubled or quadrupled. Our engraving shows the machinery for grinding the sword blades. On his Royal Highness entering and leaving the yard of the manufactory, the workmen, amongst whom there are many old Waterloo heroes, fired a royal salute in honour of the occasion.

MESSRS. SARGANT'S GUN AND SWORD-BLADE MANUFACTORY,

The Prince then proceeded to inspect the Electro-plating Establishment of Messrs. Elkington and Co.; and thence to the gilt and silver plated button manufactory of Mr. Armfield. His Royal Highness having gone his round of visits to the manufactories, passed Queen's College, engraved in No. 59 of our journal. The Prince next visited the splendid Town-hall, see No. 39 of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS. His Royal Highness, on leaving the hall, proceeded down New-street to where he was received by the governors and the head master, the Rev. J. P. Lee, by whom his Royal Highness was escorted over the splendid edifice.—In the large school-room, the pupils, nearly 500 in number, vociferously and heartily received the Prince, who then crossed the court-yard to a large room, where upwards of 700 other boys were assembled, who also rapturously greeted him. His Royal Highness then paid a visit to the house of the head master, where he partook of a cold collation. The members of the corporation were also received with great courtesy by the governors of the school, for whom a cold collation was also provided. Two addresses were presented to his Royal Highness previous to his leaving King Edward's Grammar School; as were also two beautiful silver-gilt medals, struck at Mr. Collis's works. The medals were three-and-a half inches diameter. On the obverse of one medal is the likeness of his Royal Highness and the Queen, and on the reverse an inscription in commemoration of the first visit of his Royal Highness Prince Albert to Birmingham, November 30th, 1843. The other medal was the one struck to commemorate the coronation of her most gracious Majesty.

KING EDWARD'S FREE GRAMMAR SCHOOL,

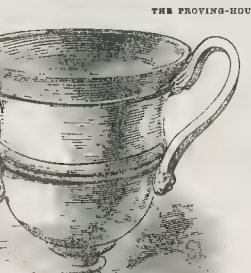
THE FREE GRAMMAR-SCHOOL, BIRMINGHAM.

The Free Grammar School, of which we subjoin a view, is one of the finest buildings of the kind in England. It occupies the site of the old Grammar School, enlarged considerably by purchasing some adjoining premises. The building was commenced about ten years since, from the design of Mr. Barry, the architect of the new Houses of Parliament. It embodies an adaptation of the collegiate, and civil, and ecclesiastical pointed architecture of the third period of Gothic architecture, or more particularly of the time of the Tudor line of English sovereigns. Externally, it presents a regular quadrangular figure, 174 feet in front, and 125 feet in flank; and internally, two courts, or cloisters, of the same figure, are formed, around and between which the several parts of the building are arranged. It contains a very large school room, with cloisters under it; a large room for a library, and spacious accommodation for the head-master and ushers. The front elevation is shown in our engraving, and presents a harmonious composition; the rich tracery of its windows, its characteristic entrance-porch, its machicolated parapet, its turrets crowned with crockets and finials, and its ornamented gables—all present the best features of the style, and prove that novel and beautiful combinations may be made of classical materials, without either servile copying, or tame imitation. The structure is faced with a small stone, from a quarry at Warton, near Polesworth. The cost of this truly beautiful pile exceeded £30,000.

THE PROVING-HOUSE, BIRMINGHAM.



GOBLET PRESENTED TO PRINCE ALBERT.

On leaving the Free Grammar School, Prince Albert proceeded to where, on his arrival, the Prince was received by the wardens, and witnessed the mode of proving and stamping the gun-barrels, a process of the utmost importance to the trade of the town, and the character of this important branch of manufactures. While his Royal Highness was present, 136 gun-barrels were discharged at the same time; and the manner of testing the barrels was explained to the Prince. This Proof-house is under the control of a master, wardens, and trustees; it has been established by Act of Parliament; and here the fabric of all gun and pistol barrels is tried by a heavy charge: all those which sustain the explosion, receive a stamp, to counterfeit which is felony; and to sell such barrels without the stamp, is punishable by heavy fines. Such has been the extent of the manufacture of guns at Birmingham, that from its manufactories were supplied, between the years 1804 and 1818, inclusive, nearly 6,000,000 of fire-arms.

THE PROOF-HOUSE,

Prince Albert, on quitting the Proof-house, took his departure for the railway terminus, having completed the round of visits which he had proposed to himself, when he first notified his intention of seeing the "workshops and "workmen" of Birmingham. His Royal Highness was evidently much gratified with his morning visit; and could not fail to be impressed with the vastness of the processes he witnessed. The decommission of "the toy shop of Europe," given to Birmingham by Burke, was correct at the time; but the extensive application of powerful mechanical forces has now raised the character of the staple productions of the place. Altogether, the royal visit was an event, which the people of Birmingham will long cherish in grateful memory.

SIX Pounds of good sound TEA for Eighteen Shillings.—The EAST INDIA TEA COMPANY announce a further reduction of from 4d. to 6d. per lb., and are resolved, while the Merchants continue to supply the market so liberally that the public shall reap the benefit.

No. 9, Great St. Helen's Churchyard, Bishopsgate.

GENTLEMEN'S GREAT COATS, CLOAKS, &c., in the greatest variety of style than any other House in London at J. ALBERT and Co.'s Tailors, 52, King William-street, City. Every description of Gentlemen's and Youth's outer Garments for the present season, of the best description, at prices—cut, quality, and make considered—much cheaper than any pushing shopsitter or boaster in the Kingdom.

Established 26 years.—52 King William-street, City.

EMPLOYMENT.—Persons having a little time to spare, are requested that Agents continue to be appointed in London and Country Towns by the EAST INDIA TEA COMPANY, for the sale of their celebrated TEA (Offices, 9, Great St Helen's Churchyard, Bishopsgate street). They are packed in snowy leaden canisters from an ounce to a pound, with the prices and weight marked on each packet, and but little trouble is occasioned by the sale, the income is only 11s. per annum, and many during the last seventeen years have realized considerable incomes by the Agency, without 1s. 6d. or loss. Application to be made (if by letter, post-paid) as above.

BERDOE'S REALLY WATERPROOF WINTER CLOTHING, of first-rate character, at equitable charges, and guaranteed to exclude any description or degree of rain whatever. Also his well-known Waterproof Frock, in lieu of the Mountosh, for all seasons, the adoption of which (those who wish to avoid disappointment and vexation will not regret), as the result of five years' extensive trial fully proves. Made to order, in the best manner, on the premises, but for the convenience of selection, &c., a very large stock of superior outside garments of all kinds always kept ready, of which an inspection is confidently invited. Made only by W. BERDOE, tailor, waterproofer, &c., 69 Cornhill, (north side)

AIR GUNS AND AIR CANES, recently improved and devised of complication, by REILLY, jun., for shooting with ball, shot, and harpoons, in numerous sports. They are now the most portable and silently destructive weapons ever introduced. They discharge upwards of 30 times without re-condensing the Air. They require no cleaning, and very little care. Specimens may inspect and have trial, on the premises, of our great variety of highly improved Air Canes, rifled and plain barrels, large calibres, &c. &c. Letters need only state what sports they are required for to ensure receiving suitable sizes

REILLY, Gun maker, 315, Holborn, near Chancery-lane.

MANTLES AND DRESSES

BAILEY and CO. beg to announce that on MONDAY, they will offer to the Public for Sale 750 TWILLED CASIMERE DRESSES, the full length, 18s. 6d., the best quality; and a lot of rich Watered Damasks, at 21s., handsomely trimmed, French Cloth Cardinals, elegantly made, 11s 6d each, Satin and Velvet Mantles in great variety; Travelling Cloaks, very cheap; also 3,000 yards of rich Stripped and Cross Silks, at 1s. 6d. per yard, and 1850 yards of rich Chêne Silks, at 2s. 4½d., a splendid bargain; with a large lot of Silk Gordies, at 1s. each. Orders attended to on the receipt of a Post-office order.—Observe, BAILEY and CO., Albion House, 77, St. Paul's Church yard, near Ludgate hill

LAMP SHADES AND GAS GLASSES of every description, at R. COGAN'S, 48, Leicester-square, London

GAS CONTRACTORS, FITTERS, GLASS MERCHANTS, and Dealers, supplied cheaper than at any other house. All the Patent Cannons and Glasses kept in Stock, among which may be named a NEW GLASS for DOCKREE'S FISH-TAIL BURNERS at the same price, but far superior to the Screen Dishes. The only house where may be had COGAN'S PATENT ECONOMIC ELONGATOR, a chimney that destroys smoke, increases light, and effects a greater saving in the consumption than any other chimney Lists of 100 Patterns of Gas Glasses with prices affixed, will be sent (gratis), on receipt of the address

FRENCH SHADES, for covering Clocks, Models, &c., &c., of every shape and size.

THE BEST ENGLISH AND FOREIGN WATCHES.

A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Watchmakers, 9, Cornhill, London, opposite the Bank, request the attention of purchasers to their stock of GOLD and SILVER WATCHES, embracing both English and Foreign The English Watches are manufactured by themselves, in their own house. The Foreign are selected with great care from makers of long-established merit. The primary consideration in the purchase of a Watch is its quality; and, by this system, no Watches are offered for sale, but such as can be warranted for accurate performance.—London made Patent LEVER WATCHES, with the Detached Escapement, Jewelled, mounted in Silver, at Four, Six, and Eight Guineas each; or, in Gold, at Ten, Twelve, Fourteen, and Sixteen Guineas each.—Swiss HORIZONTAL WATCHES, Jewelled in four holes, mounted in Silver, Three Guineas each; in Gold, from Five to Fourteen Guineas each. All the above continue going during winding.—The very large Stock offered for selection is of more importance than the mere choice of pattern, inasmuch as a customer can purchase that description which is more particularly adapted for his own wear.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Watchmakers, 9, Cornhill, London, opposite the Bank

EXTRAORDINARY SALE OF PELISSES AND CARDINALS.

IN consequence of the extensive Patronage already bestowed on the Establishment, the Proprietor has been induced to purchase, in one lot, upwards of 40,000 worth of Pelisses, Cardinals, &c., at a reduction of 66 per cent. from the actual cost price.

The following list will clearly show the bona fide advantages to be derived by purchasing at the present time—

		s.	d.		s.
50	Cases of French Merino Cardinals	11	6	cost	21
28	ditto Superior Cashmere	16	3	"	25
10	ditto Rich Striped Silk	16	6	"	30
76	ditto Plain Decape cotto	22	6	"	42
29	ditto Rich Watered ditto	25	0	"	50
12	ditto Undressed Satin	24	0	"	45
25	ditto Rich Genoa ditto	42	0	"	85
16	ditto Saxony Wool (all new styles	18	0	"	35
20	ditto Rich Genoa Velvet	30	0	"	60

A splendid assortment of Pelisses in all the new designs, including the beautiful Pelisse à la Nemours, from Two and Half to Five Guineas.

N.B. Travelling Cloaks in every material, adapted for the present season, from 9s 6d to 21s.

Observe! the NEW CARDINAL DEPOT, 79, Oxford-street, six doors west of Hanbury place,

No connexion with any other House. H. WINDER, Proprietor.

ELEGANT CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.—MECHI'S ENVELOPE CASES, No. 4, Leadenhall street, London. An entirely new stock in wood, leather, and papier maché, quite unique, and different from any yet produced. They form an appropriate accompaniment to his splendid new varieties of portfolios, writing boxes, ladies' companions, work boxes, writing desks, card cases and boxes, pole screens, hand screens, card racks, tea caddies, cabinets, jewel cases, tables, vases, note and cake baskets, inkstands, and an infinite variety of other articles, presenting a tout ensemble of elegance in papier maché, unrivalled in this kingdom. The largest assortment of tea trays, painted after Landseer, and with birds, flowers, figures, and landscapes. A show-room expressly for papier maché articles and bagatelle tables. Catalogues gratis.

MOURNING—Court, Family, and Complimentary.—The Proprietors of the London General Mourning Warehouse, Nos. 247 and 248, Regent-street, beg respectfully to remind families whose bereavements compel them to adopt mourning attire, that every article of the very best description is made for a moderate outfit of mourning may be had at their establishment at a moment's notice. Widows' and Family Mourning is always kept ready made up; and the necessary alterations of the mourning required, will ensure every thing necessary for the occasion, being sent (to town or country) immediately. Ladies not in mourning requiring new and fashionable Black Mantles, Cardinals, Cloaks, &c., either in velvet, satin, or moreens, for carriage, promenade, or travelling, will find some of the choicest patterns of the season at this establishment, as well as black velvets, satins, and shapes for dresses, of a superior nature. The Show Rooms are replete with every novelty that modern taste has introduced, in mourning, millinery, flowers, collars, headdresses, bugle bandeaux, trimmings, &c. &c.—The London General Mourning Warehouse, Nos. 247 and 248, Regent street (near Oxford-street).

W. C. JAY & Co.

THE CATTLE SHOW.—Visitors are respectfully solicited to call at the HUDSON'S BAY FUR ESTABLISHMENT, Argyle Rooms, 246, Regent street, to view the Company's fashionable and choice FURS, warranted perfect, at very moderate prices.

LIST OF PRICES FOR THE SEASON, 1843—1844:

ROUND BOAS.

	s.	d.
Hudson's Bay sable	31	6
German sable	24	0
French sable	16	0
Siberian squirrel	13	6
Real ermine	20	0
Canadella	21	0

FLAT BOAS.

Hudson's Bay sable	45	0
French sable	30	0
German sable	80	0
Siberian squirrel	18	0
Real ermine	80	0
Chinchilla	35	0

CARDINAL BOAS.

Hudson's Bay sable	21	0
French sable	15	0
German sable	12	6
Siberian squirrel	9	0
Real ermine	15	0
Canadella	12	6

SPANISH CARDINALS.

	s.	d.
Hudson's Bay sable	63	0
German sable	42	0
French sable	31	6
Siberian squirrel	24	0
Real ermine	80	0
German ermine	50	0
Coloured sable	33	0

MUFFS.

Hudson's Bay sable	21	6
German sable	21	0
French sable	16	0
Siberian squirrel	12	0
Real ermine	36	0
Chinchilla	26	0
Ditto for travelling cloaks	21	0
Muffs, enamelled	8	0
Boas	3	6
Capes and cardinals	2	6

Every article purchased of the Company is warranted, and may be returned if not approved of. Furs sent for approval to all parts of the country.—Hudson's Bay Fur Warehouse, Argyle Rooms, 246, Regent-street.

HENDERSON'S PATENT ÆROTHERMIC STOVE.

Possessing all the cheerfulness of an open fire-place, with the economy and safety of the common stove, is recommended for entrance halls, warerooms, churches, bathhouses, &c.; and is peculiarly adapted for parlours and bed rooms, from its perfect and pure ventilation—making it invaluable to the invalid, in contradistinction to the close stoves in general use, which are highly injurious to the lungs.

To be had in plain wrought, or ornamented cast iron, of all respectable Ironmongers in town and country.

BENJAMIN WALTON, and CO. Sole Manufacturers, WOLVERHAMPTON.

INVALIDS AND CHILDREN.

INVALID WHEEL CHAIRS, on every plan, studious of comfort to Invalids, from the cheapest to the most expensive builds, new and second-hand, may now be had on sale or hire, at greatly reduced prices. Children's Carriages, light, strong, easy, and safe; so perfectly secure that children may be entrusted to the most careless with impunity, now in use from the palace to the cottage. A great collection of all kinds of Children's Airing Carriages, at very low prices.

INVALID'S Manufactory, 76, City-road, Finsbury-square.

Just published, price 2s.; proof impression, 3s.; and on India paper, 4s. each, A SPLENDID LITHOGRAPHIC DRAWING (from a sketch made on the spot) of the DESTRUCTIVE FIRE of the Old English Mansion of LUTON HOO, the seat of the Marquis of Bute.

Published by W. BRITTAIN, 11, Paternoster-row, London; FARRINGDON, Dunstable, and may be had of all book and print sellers

ANOTHER EXTRAORDINARY NUMBER OF

THE LADIES' GAZETTE of FASHION, containing an Additional Plate of EVENING and BALL DRESSES, and nearly double the number of beautifully coloured Figures given in any former work. Four large Plates, Seventy Figures, and nearly One Hundred NEW PATTERNS of MORNING, EVENING, WALKING, and BALL DRESSES, Cloaks, Bonnets, Turbans, &c., for 1s., with ample descriptions. Post-free, 1s. 6d.

G. BERGER, Holywell street, Strand, &c.

THE MEDICAL TIMES ALMANACK will be ready in the last week in December. The enormous sale of Last Year's Almanack justifying the most lumitless expenditure in doing justice to the Almanack for 1844, the conductors of the Medical Times will present it to the public, with numerous novel attractions, and more than one-third larger than the last—viz., 96 4to columns for 6d. It will contain, in addition to the usual Almanack matter, a collection of Medical and Surgical Recipes, ingredients of the principal Patent Medicines, an abstract of the Pharmacopœia, &c. Price 6d.; Stamped, 6d. Advertisements to be sent in immediately.—Office, 49, Essex-street, Strand.

Just published, 8vo., 3s 6d; or 1s. 6d. per part, 1s. 6d.,

MATRIMONY.—PHRENOLOGY, and PHYSIOLOGY, applied to selecting Companions for Life. By O. S. FOWLER. The PHRENOLOGICAL LIBRARY.—Dr. Gall on the Functions of the Brain. Weekly Numbers price 3d. Monthly Parts, 1s. The PEOPLE'S PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL. Every Saturday, price 2d. Monthly Parts, in wrapper, 8d. The ILLUSTRATED PHRENOLOGICAL CHART (40 woodcuts), price 8d., on super drawing paper, 1s.

G. BERGER, 19, Holywell-street, W. STRAND, 21, Paternoster-row.

SPRING BLOSSOMS, or Familiar Dialogues on Subjects instructive and entertaining to Children. 4th Edition. 19 Illustrations; elegantly bound. Price 2s. 6d.

An entirely new and original set of Drawings has been made and engraved in the first style of the art, at considerable expense, to illustrate this favourite little work, without any addition to the price at which it was first published, making it one of the prettiest Christmas presents yet produced.

London: Published by JOSEPH GRAHAM, 2, Jewry-street, Aldgate; and sold by all Booksellers

THE ARTIZAN for DECEMBER, price 1s., contains:—Harbours of Refuge—Wooden Railways—Health of Towns—Manufactures of St. Etienne—Oblique Arches—Earthworks—Liebig's Chemistry of Agriculture—Management of Engine Factories—the "Artizan" Musket Steam-boat Engineers—the Chemistry of Nutrition—Notes on Architecture and Building—Notes on Steam Machinery—Facts from the Census—&c., with accounts of all new projects and inventions. The large Plate of Dover Actions Marine Engines is still distributing. The back numbers have been reprinted and may be had of SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, and Co.

MR VAN BUTCHELL'S NEW WORK. The Seventh Edition.

Just published, in 8vo., cloth boards, price 7s. 6d.,

ON the CURE of DISEASES of the RECTUM, without Cutting or Confinement. Illustrated with numerous Cases.—"This is a useful work — the complaint being the one frequently attendant upon sedentary pursuits and habits. The public reception of the work, which has reached seven editions, is a sufficient stamp of its value and ability. We can recommend it to that large class who are unfortunately suffering under the complaints of which it practically treats. Its statements are confirmed by a collection of letters and cases."—Bell's Weekly Messenger, Nov. 25, 1843.—Published by H. RENSHAW, Medical Bookseller, 356, Strand; and also by the Author, 27, Baker-street Portman square.

NEW WORKS FOR YOUNG PERSONS.

GLIMPSES of NATURE, and OBJECTS of INTEREST DESCRIBED, during a VISIT to the ISLE of WIGHT. Designed to assist and encourage young persons in forming habits of observation. By Mrs. LOUDON, with thirty-two Engravings on wood. Price 5s., cloth.

RHODA, or the EXCELLENCE of CHARITY. By the author of "The Cottage on the Common." Three Illustrations, by Williams. Price 3s., cloth

ANECDOTES of PETER the GREAT. By the author of "A Visit to my Birthplace." 18mo., price 2s. 6d., cloth.

London: GRANT and GRIFFITH, successors to J. HARRIS, corner of St. Paul's Churchyard.

Just published.

LIEBIG'S ANIMAL CHEMISTRY. 2nd Edition. 1 vol. 12s.

LIEBIG'S CHEMISTRY of AGRICULTURE. 3rd Edition, with large Additions, and part 2 re-written. 8vo. 10s. 6d.

LIEBIG'S CHEMICAL LETTERS. Fcap. 8vo. 4s. 6d.

FRESENIUS and WILL'S NEW METHODS of ALKALIMETRY, &c. 12mo. 4s.

TURNER'S CHEMISTRY. 7th Edition. By Professors LIEBIG and GREGORY. 1 vol. 8vo. 21s.

PARNELL'S APPLIED CHEMISTRY. 8vo. Monthly Parts, each 2s. 6d., with Illustrations.

Part 1. Gas Illumination.
2. Gas Illumination, and Preservation of Wood.
— 3 (Dec. 1. Preservation of Wood, and Calico Printing.

PARNELL'S CHEMICAL ANALYSIS. 8vo., with Cuts. 10s. 6d.

Printed for TAYLOR and WALTON, 28, Upper Gower-street: and sold by all booksellers.

CHRISTMAS HOLIDAYS.

PUNCH'S HOLIDAY LETTER.—Punch, Punch, Punch.—It is with the most unfeigned satisfaction I now write to inform you that the completion of my FIFTH VOLUME is fixed for Saturday, the 23rd instant. I am happy to inform you, that I have again obtained this year the PRIZE for WRITING, and that I am actually writing between the PRIZE for ARITHMETIC. The weekly specimens I have sent you of my Drawing will, I hope, satisfy you of my proficiency in this branch of my studies. Encouraged by the success which has crowned my labours on me, I feel myself bound (in five volumes) to cultivate assiduously these parts (monthly parts) which you have encouraged me to put forth; and I am preparing to make exertions out of number, which will enable me to present you with numberless humorous and pathetic essays. Messrs. BRADBURY and EVANS, in whose Establishment I am pleased, beg leave to present their compliments (of the season) to you, and request me to tell you (entre nous) that the whole of my valuable remains are to be learned for the weekly sum of Threepence, which includes Writing, Drawing, Mental Philosophy, Algebra, Euclid, the Abuses of the World, and the usual Branches—that is to say, Six entire Leaves—of the Tree of Knowledge

On the 16th instant it is my intention to present you with a CHRISTMAS PIECE, which, I trust, will meet with your approbation; and, during the ensuing holidays we shall have much enjoyment in each other's society, I remain, dear and honoured Public,

PUNCH. Punch's Office, 16, Strand, December 9. Your devoted SERVANT, PUNCH.

P S I forgot to tell you that my ALMANACK will be ready on the 30th instant, and will be the admiration of the whole world.

SCHOOLBOOKS, BY THE REV. J. M. M'CULLOCH, D.D., FORMERLY HEAD MASTER OF THE CIRCUS-PLACE SCHOOL, EDINBURGH

M'CULLOCH'S FIRST READING-BOOK. 7th Edit. 18mo. 1s. sewed

M'CULLOCH'S SECOND READING-BOOK. 7th Edit. 18mo. 2s. sewed

M'CULLOCH'S THIRD READING-BOOK. 7th Edit. 18mo. 10d., bound.

M'CULLOCH'S SERIES OF LESSONS in Prose and Verse. 18th Edit. 12mo. 2s. bound.

M'CULLOCH'S COURSE OF ELEMENTARY READING. Illustrated by 60 Woodcuts. 11th Edit. 12mo. 2s. 6d. bound.

M'CULLOCH'S MANUAL OF ENGLISH GRAMMAR. 7th Edit. 18mo. 1s. 6d. bound.

KEY TO M'CULLOCH'S ENGLISH GRAMMAR. In Preparation.

M'CULLOCH'S PREFIXES AND AFFIXES. New Edit. 18mo. 2d sewed.

Critical Notices of the Series:—"We think that the character of the little books before us, which form in themselves a complete library for teaching to read The series commences with the alphabet, and ends with a whole volume of prose and verse. The progressive principle is in action, though not obtruded. The series is completed by A Course of Elementary Reading in Science and Literature, selected not only with a view to exercise the pupil in the sounds and meaning of words, but for the purpose of storing his mind with as much knowledge as desultory lessons of this kind can convey. In recommending these books, it must not be concerned that we recommend them as likely to save trouble to teacher, or to operate by witchcraft on the pupil. At their first introduction they will require some care on the part of the master, as well as of the learner; but, with some patience, they will be found to profit by the lessons. But this once done, their foundation is sound, and their progress sure. And let both parents and teachers bear in mind that these are the only means to acquire real knowledge. Many enquiries are abroad recommending various easy roads to languages and the other sciences. In mere superficial accomplishments, where failure is of small importance, their schemes may be tried; But in matters of duty we must submit to laborious practice if we aim at ready skill"—Spectator.

 Opinions equally favourable have been expressed by numerous other periodicals throughout the empire.

OLIVER and BOYD, Edinburgh; SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, and Co., London.

FISH and BARRELLED OYSTERS for CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.—JOHN S. SPARROW informs his Friends the Public he has a regular supply of the SMALL NATIVE OYSTERS—"not Scotch, Welch, or French"—from the Beds, per railway, Every Morning, by which arrangement his NATIVES will travel any distance in good condition.—He also has a large supply of the best FISH in season, at the lowest prices of the day's market. Orders per post, &c. have the same attention as personal purchases.—J. S. Sparrow's Oyster Rooms, Fish and Oyster Establishment, 159, Cheapside.

EDWARD PRICE and Co. beg respectfully to inform the Public, that their Composite Candles are sold in packets of 6 lbs. each, having a blue label with the inscription, "Price's patent Composite Candles." This notice becomes necessary, in consequence of the numerous imitations lately introduced, and often substituted for their Candles. E. P. and Co. use no arsenic in any of their processes. The prices generally charged throughout the country are for PRICE'S Patent Composite Candles, 1s. per lb.—requiring no snuffing. The sizes recommended are sixes and long fours, and for bedroom use tens. Price's patent Cocoa Nut Candles, 10d. per lb.—giving a beautifully white pure light, but requiring snuffing. Price's Night Mottars, 1s. 6d. per lb., an excellent substitute for rushlights, Nos. 18, 24, and 28 to the pound, to burn 10, 8, and 6 hours. Price's Stearine, Margarine, and Ceylon Wax Candles supplied as usual. Almost every grandee throughout the country is able to supply these candles to their customers, but in places where they cannot be so had, on receiving a post-office order for 5s., E. Price and Co. will immediately forward an equivalent quantity of candles at the above rates, charging for the box. The Trade supplied with Crude Cocoa Nut Oil.—Manufactory, Belmont, Vauxhall, Surrey.

Just published,

SIR RICHARD PHILLIPS'S MILLION OF FACTS. A New Edition, with Portrait of the Author.
DARTON and CLARK, Holborn-hill.

Just published, 8vo., sewed, price 4s.,

THE ROBBER'S CAVE, or Four Horned Moon. A Drama, in Five Acts. In imitation, and after the manner of Shakspeare.
G. W. NICKISSON, 210, Regent street, London.

HOOD'S MAGAZINE AND COMIC MISCELLANY.—"ORDER, ORDER, ORDER"—THE SPEAKER.
N.B.—Order of any bookseller, or of the Proprietors, at the Office, 1, Adam-street, Adelphi, where all communications for the Editor are requested to be addressed.

NEW CHRISTMAS BOOK, BY MR. DICKENS.
Shortly will be published, in small 8vo., with four coloured Etchings, and Woodcuts, by Leech,
A CHRISTMAS CAROL; in Prose. Being a Ghost Story of Christmas. By CHARLES DICKENS. With Five Shillings.
CHAPMAN and HALL, 186, Strand.

Just published, in One Handsome Volume, fcap. 8vo., price 9s. cloth,
A COMPANION TO THE SICK CHAMBER; being a Collection of ORIGINAL POETRY &c. By the Author of "Hymns for the Cottage," &c. &c. Dedicated, by permission, to the Rev. W. MARSH, D.D.
LONDON: SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, and Co.

GARDEN SHEET ALMANACK, to be presented with the GARDENER'S GAZETTE, will be the most perfect and useful that has ever been got up. The GAZETTE will commence a new volume, Edited by G. GLENNY, F.H.S., Saturday, January 6th, 6s. 6d. per quarter; if paid in advance to any Newsman in the Kingdom. All who subscribe before JANUARY 1st, will have the ALMANACK.

UNDER THE SUPERINTENDENCE OF THE SOCIETY FOR THE DIFFUSION OF USEFUL KNOWLEDGE.

Complete, in cloth, price 10s.; or in Nine Numbers, price One Shilling each,
THE HORSE: its History, Races, Structure, Diseases, and Management. By W. YOUATT. With a Treatise on Draught. A New and Enlarged Edition, Re-written, and brought down to the present state of Veterinary Science. With an entirely New Set of Cuts, Drawn by HARVEY. CHAPMAN and HALL, 186, Strand.

Just published, 65 engravings, price 2s., by post 2s.
THE BLADDER, WEB, AND SECOND RECTUM; Their Diseases and Treatment.
By R. J. GULVERWELL, M.D.
Member of the Royal College of Surgeons of England, &c.
SHERWOOD, 23, PATERNOSTER-ROW, and the AUTHOR, 21, Arundel-street, Strand.
At 4 one operation, 2 at 2. Evenings 7 till 9.

VALUABLE GIFT BOOKS.
Now ready, price 1s. 6d., neatly bound, the Fourth Annual Volume of
THE LITTLE MAGAZINE of USEFUL and ENTERTAINING KNOWLEDGE. The three former volumes may be had, price 4s. each.
The new volumes will commence January 1, 1844.
London: S. GILMORE, 51 and 52, Paternoster-row. Edinburgh: J. JOHNSTON, 2, Hunter-square.

OCCUPATION FOR CHILDREN IN LONG EVENINGS.
A Permanent Fund of Amusement and Instruction.
BUTTER'S TANGIBLE ARITHMETIC and GEOMETRY, an easy and effectual Method of Teaching the simple Rules of Arithmetic and Fractions; also the Formation of Squares, Cubes, Prisms, Pyramids, and an endless variety of Buildings; with Cuts. Price, 1s., or with a Box of 96 Cedar Cubes, 5s.; with 144 ditto, 8s. 6d.; with 144 and Box, Mahogany Cubes, 10s. 6d. Sold by all Booksellers, Stationers, and Toymen.
J. TAIMES, Agent, 11, Portugal-street, Lincoln's Inn-fields

This day is published,
FINDEN'S ROYAL GALLERY of BRITISH ART. Part XI., containing "The Deliverance of St. Peter from Prison," painted by W. Hilton, R.A.; "The Death of the Red Deer," painted by Sir D. Wilkie, R.A.; and "The Harvest Waggon," painted by C. Calcott Lewis.
London: Published for the Proprietors, by T. G. MARCH, 4, Hanover-street, Hanover-square. P. G. HAMERTON, 20, Threadneedle-street; and R. ACKERMANN and Co., Strand

IMPERIAL HOTEL, Opposite the New Assize Courts and Railway Station, corner of St. John's-lane and Rosemead-place, Liverpool. JAMES MORGAN, Proprietor of the above new and commodious Establishment, respectfully informs his Friends and the Public, that it is now open for the reception of Private Families and Gentlemen.
While this Hotel is combined an elegant and extensive Coffee Room, News Room, and several Private Sitting Rooms, fitted up in a style suitable for the reception of Noblemen and Visitors, or for the accommodation of Parties requiring early Breakfasts, Luncheons, Dinners, &c.
The Sleeping department will be under the personal superintendence of Mrs. Morgan, and Visitors may rely with confidence, that in this essential particular, comfort, neatness, and convenience, have been carefully studied.
The Culinary and Cellar departments will embrace the choicest Viands, Wines, &c., which can be obtained in the Market; and J. M. respectfully solicits a share of the assistance of experienced Waiters, may secure the approbation of Travellers generally, at the same time the scale of charges will be strictly moderate.
Private Rooms for large or small Dinner Parties. Hot, Cold, and Shower Baths, always ready.
Every information respecting the departure and arrival of the various Railway Trains, Steam, and Sailing Packets, &c. &c.
To Commercial Visiting Lawyers, it may be necessary to observe that THE IMPERIAL is centrally situated, within view of, and one minute's walk from the Liverpool and Manchester, and Grand Junction Railway Stations, and immediately opposite the New Assize Courts, it is also contiguous to the principal Theatres, and other places of public resort.
N.B. Travellers are frequently misled, please desire the Driver to proceed direct to the IMPERIAL.

IMPORTANT TOPOGRAPHICAL WORK.
Now publishing, in parts, price 1s. each,
A TOPOGRAPHICAL HISTORY of NOTTINGHAMSHIRE, from ACTUAL SURVEY. By the Rev. J. CURTIS.
The "Topographical History of Nottinghamshire" will embrace, in one unvaried form, the local particulars of every Town, Village, and Hamlet in the County, forming Alphabetical Lists, and divided into Two Parts. The First Part will consist of the number of Inhabitants and Houses—the Acres of the Parishes—the date of Enclosure, &c., taken from Parliamentary Returns. The Hundred in which it is situated—its distance and bearing from the nearest Town, Market, and Railway Station—number of Acres—quality of the Soil—names of the principal Proprietors, and the Lord of the Manor—name of the Patron of the Living—number of Acres of Glebe attached to each Living—particulars of Noblemen and Gentlemen's Seats, and Charitable Institutions, with the Income, &c., with everything which could afford a useful, or historical or descriptive notice. THE WORK COLLECTED ON THE SPOT, by competent persons, who have visited every Town, Village, and Hamlet, in the County, for that purpose. The manner of the Domesday in Pope Nicholas's TAXATIO, in 1291, as well as the statement of its value in the Inquisitiones Nonarum, and Valor Ecclesiasticus, will also be found, together with an account of such augmentation as any Livings have since received, whether arising from Parliamentary Grant, from Queen Anne's Bounty, or from individual munificence. The Second Part will consist of Extracts from all the Parliamentary Records (published under the direction of the Record Commissioners) relating to each place; thus forming a moment History of the various Fashions through which the Property has passed from the Conquest to the present time. And, as a connecting link between the ancient and modern History of each respective place, other authorities will be incorporated, and References in all cases expected, to point out the source from whence the information is derived. In addition to what is contained in the body of the work, it will be preceded by an Introduction, in which will be comprised much information respecting the Antiquities and Agriculture, the General, Commercial, Botanical, Geological, and Mineralogical History of the County; and numerous other subjects, which, from their connection with the work, could not be noticed in individual parishes. Lists of the Clergy and Magistracy, as also an elaborate Index, will be given.
"It is compiled with extraordinary research, and comprises the most accurate information upon almost every subject."—Nottingham Mercury.—" Having perused several of the articles, we have much confidence in their general correctness."—Nottingham Journal.—"After a careful examination of the first part of this publication, we are prepared to vouch for its general correctness in statistical and historical detail."—Nottingham Review.
London: W. STRANG, 21, Paternoster-row; R. ACKERMANN, Strand; and J. ADLARD, Leicester

NEW WORKS PUBLISHED BY A. H. BAILY AND CO., CORNHILL, LONDON.
NOUVEAU MELANGE, Narratif, Descriptif, Historique, et Litteraire. Recueil Classique, de belles actions, de beaux faits, de bons exemples, et de bonnes maximes, entremêlés d'anecdotes, d'aventures, singularités, de proverbes, et de bons mots. Par MARIN DE LA VOYE, Memb. de l'Institute Hist. fl., auteur du Nouveau Lexique Francais et Anglais, &c. &c. The work contains, in one volume 12mo., 400 pages, or in six small separate volumes, the following subjects:—

1. Le Narrateur.	4. Atala.
2. Choix de Morceaux Francoise.	5. Les Aventures de Télémaque.
3. La Chaumiere Indienne.	6. Paul et Virginie.

Every subject is preceded and followed by Questions and Explanations of various kinds.
In Parts, One Shilling each.

MAXWELL'S IRISH REBELLION in 1798, with Plates by George Cruikshank, and numerous Portraits on Steel by the first artists. Part I. appeared on the 1st of December.
This work will illustrate the most important and interesting era in Irish History—that extending from the Revolutionary outbreak in France to the enactment of the Legislative Union; with ample details, Military and Political, of the Rise, Progress, and Suppression of the Insurrection in '98.
Now ready, 2 vols. 8vo., cloth boards,
WANDERINGS in the HIGHLANDS and ISLANDS, with Sketches taken on the Scottish Borders; being a Sequel to "Wild Sports of the West." By W. H. MAXWELL, Esq.
MAXWELL'S LIFE of the DUKE of WELLINGTON, K.G. In 2 vols. demy 8vo. boards. Splendidly illustrated with Portraits, Battle Scenes, Plans of Battles, and Maps, price £3 7s., or with proof plates, royal 8vo. price £5 bound. In 2 vols. 12mo. bound, 1000 pages, price £1 1s. Illustrated by 24 Steel Engravings from the most authentic Portraits of the British Admirals, and numerous Diagrams of Naval Actions.
The BATTLES of the BRITISH NAVY, from A. D. 1000 to 1840. By JOSEPH ALLEN, Esq., of Greenwich Hospital.
"The best and most complete repository of the triumphs of the British Navy that has issued from the press."—United Service Gazette.
Also, in uniform size and type, and may be bound up with the above, 40 pp. 12mo., with Portrait, price 1s.
A VINDICATION of ADMIRAL LORD NELSON'S PROCEEDINGS in THE BAY OF NAPLES, faithfully related.
BAILY'S SERIES of WINNERS. This Series comprises Portraits of the Winners of the Derby, Oaks, and St. Leger for 1843, to be continued, before Portraits of BERSWING, CHARLES THE TWELFTH, and CONFIDENCE, the celebrated American trotters, price £1 1s. each. Also in course of Publication, a splendid Portrait of ALICE HAWTHORN.
BAILY'S SPORTING ALMANACK for 1844. Price 7s. 6d., embellished by 12 highly-finished Illustrations, amongst which are Portraits of the following celebrated Horses, painted by J. F. HERRING, sen.: BERSWING, CONFIDENCE, and CONFIDENCE. All the Performances of Two-year-olds in 1843. Entries for the Derby, Oaks, and St. Leger for 1844, List of Trainers, &c. And a variety of useful information on Hunting, Fishing, Shooting, &c.

FEATHER BEDS.—HEAL and SON beg to notify that the present rate of the Feather Market, enables them to offer good well-seasoned white goose feathers, at 2s. per lb., and grey goose ditto, at 1s. 6d. HEAL and SON Feather Dressers and Bedding Manufacturers, 196 (opposite the chapel), Tottenham-court-road.

BACON.—J. CRAFT, Philpot-lane, City, offers to the public BACON of excellent quality, which he receives weekly from a Farmer in Wiltshire, who attends to the feeding and rearing of the pigs on his own farm, so as to make the bacon of a most delicious flavour, and which will be sure to suit the most delicate stomach. Sold by the side or half side, at 6d. per lb. Hams to any part of town carriage free

ALE of very superior quality, brewed entirely from the very best Malt and Hops, and in such proportions as persons of nice palates will be sure to appreciate. Sold in casks of 18 and 9 gs. ions each, at 1l. per gallon. Sent to any part of town carriage free. Orders by post punctually attended to. Address to the JOHN BULL BREWERY OFFICE, No. 30, Philpot-lane, City.

DANCING TAUGHT in the most fashionable style, by Mr. WINGATE, 3, Brewer-street, Golden-square. Private Lessons at all hours to ladies and gentlemen of any age, wishing privacy and expedition. An evening academy on Mondays and Fridays. A juvenile academy on Wednesdays and Saturdays. Lessons in the Valse à Deux Temps every day.—Terms and references may be had on application as above.
The ROOMS may be ENGAGED by PRIVATE PARTIES.

THE PATENT ROYAL ALBERT ELASTIC CRAVAT continues to increase in public demand. An article of great utility it is exhibited at the Royal Adelaide Gallery and Polytechnic Institution, and received most favourably in many leading journals, as likely to supersede every other covering for the neck. Sold at the Manufactory for Patent Surgeon's Trusses, &c. &c., Belts, and every kind of anatomical support. F. HUGHES and Co., 247, High Holborn. Established 1794.

BRETT'S SAMPLE HAMPERS, only 20s. each.—These favourite little packages contain three bottles of pure British Geneva, one of Jamaica Rum, and two of BRETT'S Imperial Cognac, with two pure bottles of the Supreme Ginger Brandy; the right bottles and hamper inclusive, for a Sovereign. A hamper, containing half a dozen of either kind of Brandy (or any portion of each), on similar terms; or, at 18s. the imperial gallon. HENRY BRETT and CO., Old Farm-yard, Inn, Holborn-bar.

IMPROVED ELASTIC WINTER GAITERS for Ladies, which afford conveniences by drawing on without lacing or buttoning, and comfort and neatness, without pressure. They are made in black and coloured Kidds, cashmere, and worsted, of various textures, suitable for home, the carriage, promenade, or equestrian wear. Can be forwarded in all kinds of sizes, of a plain and economical description. A large stock of Lamps, Chandeliers, and Hall Lanterns, Papier Maché Trays, Fancy Ornaments in China, Alabaster, Ormolu, Bronze, &c. &c.—315 and 320, HIGH HOLBORN, opposite Gray's Inn-gate.

"On est ordonné de la rhubarbe et du sené
Mais non, j'ai la peau saine.
Moyen plus doux."—SERIEN.

IT is pleasant to eat a light delicate SPONGE CAKE: but by no means to swallow the doctor and his nauseous stuff is better. All you that cannot take physic! all mothers with weak children, who will not be reconciled to it, take what is to them good: look to this, and send for a packet (1s. 1½d.) of DRABBLE'S AERIENNE MAGNESIA, which is a vegetable purgative without taste, and in the pleasant disguise of a sweetmeat. Sold by W. DRABBLE, Chemist, 25, Bedford-row, and all Vendors

EUROPEAN LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY
No. 10, Chatham-place, Blackfriars, London.—Established January, 1819.
PRESIDENT—SIR JAMES RIVETT CARNAC, Bart., Rock Cliff, Lymington.
VICE-PRESIDENT—GEO. FORBES, Esq., 3, Finsbury-square.—With Twelve Directors
FACILITIES are offered by this long-established Society to suit the views and the means of every class of insurers. Premiums are received yearly, half-yearly, or quarterly, or upon an increasing or decreasing scale. The insured for life participate triennially in the profits realised. A liberal commission is allowed to Solicitors and Agents
DAVID FOGGO, Secretary.
N.B.—Agents are wanted in towns where none have been yet appointed

PATENT ST. JAMES'S CHEST EXPANDER.—Ce support perfectionné complétement l'action COURBATURE des REGLES, route CONTRACTION ou RESSERREMENT de la POITRINE, soit dans l'ENFANCE ou dans l'age ADULTE, de personnes des deux sexes. On n'en sent sans éprouver le moindre inconvénient la sage qu'il fait le moindre interruption des mouvements du corps. La pose gracieuse et aisée donnée à la figure humaine, des qu'elle reçoit l'influence de ce support en recommande l'usage aux Dames et aux CHEFS de FAMILLE, aux Ministres, aux Militaires, aux Marins, enfin, au public en général. Facilité dans l'application sur le corps, simplicité de confection, tout annonce des titres qui distinguent cette utile invention.—S addresser a M. A. BINYON, 40, Tavistock-street, Strand, à Londres, ou chez les principaux dépositaires d'articles. Toute lettre devra être affranchie

SUPERIOR LOOKING-GLASSES, AND SPLENDID GILT PICTURE FRAMES.
CHARLES M'CLEAN, 78, Fleet-street, respectfully informs the Trade, Artists, Upholsterers, and the Public, that they can be supplied with LOOKING GLASSES and PICTURE FRAMES of the very best manufacture, at prices never hitherto attempted. May be had gratis, and sent free to any part of the kingdom, large Sheets of Drawings, representing the exact pattern and prices of one hundred different sorts of Picture Frames, and one hundred and twenty Looking-Glasses, elegantly ornamented with designs made expressly for this manufactory. The Trade supplied with Frames in the Country—Ready-moulded Frames in any required length. Room Paperhangings and Friezes repaired and re-gilt—Glasses re-silvered. Thirty Thousand Frames kept seasoned for immediate delivery. All goods not approved of in three months taken back, and money returned

TOOTHACHES.—ROWLAND'S KALYDOR, Patronised and sanctioned by her Majesty the QUEEN, the Royal Family, and the several Courts of Europe.—This elegant and fragrant preparation effectually eradicates all Pimples, Spots, Blotches, Redness, Eruptions, Tan, Sallowness, and Discolorations of the Skin. The radiant bloom it imparts to the Cheek, and the softness and delicacy it induces on the hands, arms, and neck, render it indispensable to every toilet. As a safeguard against Chilblains and Chapped Skin in the winter season, it is unequalled. Price 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle. Duty included.
CAUTION.—The genuine article has the words ROWLAND'S KALYDOR printed on the wrapper, and A. ROWLAND and SON, 20, HATTON GARDEN, engraved on the Government Stamp affixed on each bottle. Sold by them, and by Chemists and Perfumers.
. All others are SPURIOUS IMITATIONS!

FOR STOPPING DECAYED TEETH.—Price 4s. 6d.—Patronised by her Majesty, his Royal Highness Prince Albert, and her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent.—Mr. HOWARD'S (of 17, Bedford-street, Bedford-square) Decayed Teeth, however large the cavity. It is far superior to anything ever before used, as it is placed in the tooth in a soft state, without any pressure or pain, and in a short time becomes as hard as the enamel, and will remain firm in the tooth for life, rendering extraction unnecessary. It arrests all further progress of decay, and renders them again useful in mastication. All sufferers can be PERFECTLY SUCCESSFUL in STOPPING THEMSELVES, with ease, without the aid of a dentist, as full directions are enclosed.—Prepared and sold by the proprietor, Mr. HOWARD, 17, Bedford-street, Bedford-square, London. Sold by his appointment, by most respectable medicine vendors. Price 4s. 6d.

NELSON'S PATENT OPAQUE GELATINE, Half the Price of Isinglass.—CAUTION: From the increasing demands for NELSON'S OPAQUE GELATINE, many spurious articles are manufactured in the Public Papers, and Packet which, and for a protection to purchasers, it is sold in packets only, by most respectable Grocers, Oilmen, Tea Dealers, and Druggists, in town and country, at 1s., 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., 5s., 10s., and 20s. each packet, bearing the Patentee's signature. EXTRACT from Dr. Ure's testimonial, June 6, 1840:—"I find Mr. G. Nelson's Patent Opaque Gelatine to be at least equal in strength and purity, if not superior, to the best isinglass, for every culinary purpose; it is entirely free from any impregnation of acid, such as I have found to exist in other kinds of gelatine in the London market." The Patentee's Gelatine as now prepared for blanc mange, tarts, &c., is one and ship stores, and a safe and profitable commodity for exportation.—Ernestus Mills, Warwick; and 14, Buckleraury

DALE'S ENAMEL ODONTO, for FILLING DECAYED TEETH, in packets, at 2s. 6d. each.—This preparation, the result of long and wide investigation, is confidently offered to the public as the best material ever discovered for filling or stopping Decayed Teeth, which it effects without giving the least pain or unconvenience of any kind, becoming, in a short time, as hard as bone, and rendering the Tooth itself, and, by perfectly excluding the access of air, it arrests all further possible progress of decay. The preparations, before use, are to be mixed to the consistence of cream for a short time; and it may, therefore, be used by any person with perfect facility, and is warranted to succeed in every case, however large the cavity.
Prepared by JOHN DALE, Analytical and Consulting Chemist, Market-place, Altrincham. Sold in packets, at 2s. 6d. each, by most respectable Druggists and Medicine-venders in the Kingdom. Directions for use are enclosed with each packet. Sold wholesale by Newbery and Co., Manchester; Barclay and Sons, and Edwards, Sutton, and Co., London; also retail, by Sanger, Oxford-street.

THE TOURIST'S COMPANION.

BELLAMY SAVORY'S TOURIST'S COMPANION comprises a complete Dressing Case, with a Travelling Writing Desk. It is in russia or morocco leather; only 10 inches wide and 3 deep; and with Bramah's lock. The fittings include Berry's patent inkstand, stationery, common-sized letter paper, ivory-handle razors, strop, comb, shaving dish and brushes, and cutlery—price £5; or in imitation russia leather, with second quality fittings, £3 10s. The Tourist's Companion will be forwarded carriage free. The Show Rooms contain the largest variety of Ladies' and Gentlemen's improved Dressing Cases, Work Boxes, Writing Desks, &c. Travelling Desks, from 12s. 6d.; Ladies' Rosewood Dressing Case, fitted complete with brushes and cutlery, 27s.; ditto, ditto, with inkstand drawer, 30s.; ditto, ditto, full size, with silver fittings, 5l. 5s. guineas; elegant Rosewood Writing Desks, 11s. 6d.—Bellamy Savory, Stationer and Dressing Case Maker, British Paper Warehouse, 46, Cornhill, London.

TABLE CUTLERY at the Manufacturing Prices.—Be not deceived by parties so long Cast in your way, but go direct to GEORGE'S (LATE) MANUFACTORY, 76, 1 several street, Easton's square, or 1, Park terrace, Camden town (four Handle Tab Knives, 12s. per doz.; Dessert, 9s.; Carvers, per pair, 4s. 6d.; warranted best steel.—N.B. Several thousand Second Hand Knives for sale or hire on very low terms.

PLUMBERS, PAINTERS, BUILDERS, AND OTHERS.
R. COGAN continues to supply CROWN and SHEET WINDOW GLASS, SHEET PLATE for Pictures, Glazing, &c., in any quantity at manufactory prices:—

Turpentine	2s. 6d. per gal.	Mill'd Lead, in sheet	18s. per cwt.
Linseed Oil	2s. 9d. per gal.	White Lead	24s. per cwt.

Colors, Pipe Brushes, &c., equally low, quality warranted. Complete lists, priced, may be had on application to R. COGAN, 5, Prince's-street, Leicester-square, London

TO PARENTS and GUARDIANS.—Wanted immediately, a respectable and active Youth as APPRENTICE to the Stationery Business, with whom he will have the unusual opportunity of acquiring a thoroughly practical knowledge of the Auctioneering, &c.; he treated, in all respects, as one of the family, and experience every domestic comfort. Premium moderate. Apply to Mr. EDWARD WADE, Wholesale and Retail Stationer, Auctioneer, &c., Cambridge.
N.B.—The ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS and all the other London and Country Newspapers regularly supplied at the published prices!

WILL OPEN ON the 1st JANUARY, 1844,
GEORGE'S COFFEE-HOUSE and HOTEL, 213, Chancery-lane, in connection with their Show Rooms and Warehouses constantly receive a succession of New Patterns in Dinner, Dessert, Tea, and Breakfast Services, Chamber Sets, in Porcelain, Iron-stone China, and Stone Ware. Dessert Ware, equal in appearance to China, at a fourth the cost. The Cut Glass department presents every variation and elegant design in trifle and dessert dishes, decanters, claret jugs, tumblers, wines, &c., together with all kinds of glass, of a plain and economical description. A large stock of Lamps, Chandeliers, and Hall Lanterns, Papier Maché Trays, Fancy Ornaments in China, Alabaster, Ormolu, Bronze, &c. &c.—315 and 320, HIGH HOLBORN, opposite Gray's Inn-gate.

CUT GLASS, CHINA, EARTHENWARE, &c.—SANDER and Co. beg to announce that their Show Rooms and Warehouses constantly receive a succession of New Patterns in Dinner, Dessert, Tea, and Breakfast Services, Chamber Sets, in Porcelain, Iron-stone China, and Stone Ware. Dessert Ware, equal in appearance to China, at a fourth the cost. The Cut Glass department presents every variation and elegant design in trifle and dessert dishes, decanters, claret jugs, tumblers, wines, &c., together with all kinds of glass, of a plain and economical description. A large stock of Lamps, Chandeliers, and Hall Lanterns, Papier Maché Trays, Fancy Ornaments in China, Alabaster, Ormolu, Bronze, &c. &c.—315 and 320, HIGH HOLBORN, opposite Gray's Inn-gate.

"On est ordonné de la rhubarbe et du sené
Mais non, j'ai la peau saine.
Moyen plus doux."—SERIEN.

IT is pleasant to eat a light delicate SPONGE CAKE: but by no means to swallow the doctor and his nauseous stuff is better. All you that cannot take physic! all mothers with weak children, who will not be reconciled to it, take what is to them good: look to this, and send for a packet (1s. 1½d.) of DRABBLE'S AERIENNE MAGNESIA, which is a vegetable purgative without taste, and in the pleasant disguise of a sweetmeat. Sold by W. DRABBLE, Chemist, 25, Bedford-row, and all Vendors

EUROPEAN LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY
No. 10, Chatham-place, Blackfriars, London.—Established January, 1819.
PRESIDENT—SIR JAMES RIVETT CARNAC, Bart., Rock Cliff, Lymington.
VICE-PRESIDENT—GEO. FORBES, Esq., 3, Finsbury-square.—With Twelve Directors
FACILITIES are offered by this long-established Society to suit the views and the means of every class of insurers. Premiums are received yearly, half-yearly, or quarterly, or upon an increasing or decreasing scale. The insured for life participate triennially in the profits realised. A liberal commission is allowed to Solicitors and Agents
DAVID FOGGO, Secretary.
N.B.—Agents are wanted in towns where none have been yet appointed

PATENT ST. JAMES'S CHEST EXPANDER.—Ce support perfectionné complétement l'action COURBATURE des REGLES, route CONTRACTION ou RESSERREMENT de la POITRINE, soit dans l'ENFANCE ou dans l'age ADULTE, de personnes des deux sexes. On n'en sent sans éprouver le moindre inconvénient la sage qu'il fait le moindre interruption des mouvements du corps. La pose gracieuse et aisée donnée à la figure humaine, des qu'elle reçoit l'influence de ce support en recommande l'usage aux Dames et aux CHEFS de FAMILLE, aux Ministres, aux Militaires, aux Marins, enfin, au public en général. Facilité dans l'application sur le corps, simplicité de confection, tout annonce des titres qui distinguent cette utile invention.—S addresser a M. A. BINYON, 40, Tavistock-street, Strand, à Londres, ou chez les principaux dépositaires d'articles. Toute lettre devra être affranchie

SUPERIOR LOOKING-GLASSES, AND SPLENDID GILT PICTURE FRAMES.
CHARLES M'CLEAN, 78, Fleet-street, respectfully informs the Trade, Artists, Upholsterers, and the Public, that they can be supplied with LOOKING GLASSES and PICTURE FRAMES of the very best manufacture, at prices never hitherto attempted. May be had gratis, and sent free to any part of the kingdom, large Sheets of Drawings, representing the exact pattern and prices of one hundred different sorts of Picture Frames, and one hundred and twenty Looking-Glasses, elegantly ornamented with designs made expressly for this manufactory. The Trade supplied with Frames in the Country—Ready-moulded Frames in any required length. Room Paperhangings and Friezes repaired and re-gilt—Glasses re-silvered. Thirty Thousand Frames kept seasoned for immediate delivery. All goods not approved of in three months taken back, and money returned

TOOTHACHES.—ROWLAND'S KALYDOR, Patronised and sanctioned by her Majesty the QUEEN, the Royal Family, and the several Courts of Europe.—This elegant and fragrant preparation effectually eradicates all Pimples, Spots, Blotches, Redness, Eruptions, Tan, Sallowness, and Discolorations of the Skin. The radiant bloom it imparts to the Cheek, and the softness and delicacy it induces on the hands, arms, and neck, render it indispensable to every toilet. As a safeguard against Chilblains and Chapped Skin in the winter season, it is unequalled. Price 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle. Duty included.
CAUTION.—The genuine article has the words ROWLAND'S KALYDOR printed on the wrapper, and A. ROWLAND and SON, 20, HATTON GARDEN, engraved on the Government Stamp affixed on each bottle. Sold by them, and by Chemists and Perfumers.
. All others are SPURIOUS IMITATIONS!

FOR STOPPING DECAYED TEETH.—Price 4s. 6d.—Patronised by her Majesty, his Royal Highness Prince Albert, and her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent.—Mr. HOWARD'S (of 17, Bedford-street, Bedford-square) Decayed Teeth, however large the cavity. It is far superior to anything ever before used, as it is placed in the tooth in a soft state, without any pressure or pain, and in a short time becomes as hard as the enamel, and will remain firm in the tooth for life, rendering extraction unnecessary. It arrests all further progress of decay, and renders them again useful in mastication. All persons can be PERFECTLY SUCCESSFUL in STOPPING THEMSELVES, with ease, without the aid of a dentist, as full directions are enclosed.—Prepared and sold by the proprietor, Mr. HOWARD, 17, Bedford-street, Bedford-square, London. Sold by his appointment, by most respectable medicine vendors. Price 4s. 6d.

NELSON'S PATENT OPAQUE GELATINE, Half the Price of Isinglass.—CAUTION: From the increasing demands for NELSON'S OPAQUE GELATINE, many spurious articles are manufactured in the Public Papers, and Packet which, and for a protection to purchasers, it is sold in packets only, by most respectable Grocers, Oilmen, Tea Dealers, and Druggists, in town and country, at 1s., 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., 5s., 10s., and 20s. each packet, bearing the Patentee's signature. EXTRACT from Dr. Ure's testimonial, June 6, 1840:—"I find Mr. G. Nelson's Patent Opaque Gelatine to be at least equal in strength and purity, if not superior, to the best isinglass, for every culinary purpose; it is entirely free from any impregnation of acid, such as I have found to exist in other kinds of gelatine in the London market." The Patentee's Gelatine as now prepared for blanc mange, tarts, &c., is one and ship stores, and a safe and profitable commodity for exportation.—Ernestus Mills, Warwick; and 14, Buckleraury

DALE'S ENAMEL ODONTO, for FILLING DECAYED TEETH, in packets, at 2s. 6d. each.—This preparation, the result of long and wide investigation, is confidently offered to the public as the best material ever discovered for filling or stopping Decayed Teeth, which it effects without giving the least pain or inconvenience of any kind, becoming, in a short time, as hard as bone, and rendering the Tooth itself, and, by perfectly excluding the access of air, it arrests all further possible progress of decay. The preparations, before use, are to be mixed to the consistence of cream for a short time; and it may, therefore, be used by any person with perfect facility, and is warranted to succeed in every case, however large the cavity.
Prepared by JOHN DALE, Analytical and Consulting Chemist, Market-place, Altrincham. Sold in packets, at 2s. 6d. each, by most respectable Druggists and Medicine-venders in the Kingdom. Directions for use are enclosed with each packet. Sold wholesale by Newbery and Co., Manchester; Barclay and Sons, and Edwards, Sutton, and Co., London; also retail, by Sanger, Oxford-street.

THE TOURIST'S COMPANION.

BELLAMY SAVORY'S TOURIST'S COMPANION comprises a complete Dressing Case, with a Travelling Writing Desk. It is in russia or morocco leather; only 10 inches wide and 3 deep; and with Bramah's lock. The fittings include Berry's patent inkstand, stationery, common-sized letter paper, ivory-handle razors, strop, comb, shaving dish and brushes, and cutlery—price £5; or in imitation russia leather, with second quality fittings, £3 10s. The Tourist's Companion will be forwarded carriage free. The Show Rooms contain the largest variety of Ladies' and Gentlemen's improved Dressing Cases, Work Boxes, Writing Desks, &c. Travelling Desks, from 12s. 6d.; Ladies' Rosewood Dressing Case, fitted complete with brushes and cutlery, 27s.; ditto, ditto, with inkstand drawer, 30s.; ditto, ditto, full size, with silver fittings, 5l. 5s. guineas; elegant Rosewood Writing Desks, 11s. 6d.—Bellamy Savory, Stationer and Dressing Case Maker, British Paper Warehouse, 46, Cornhill, London.

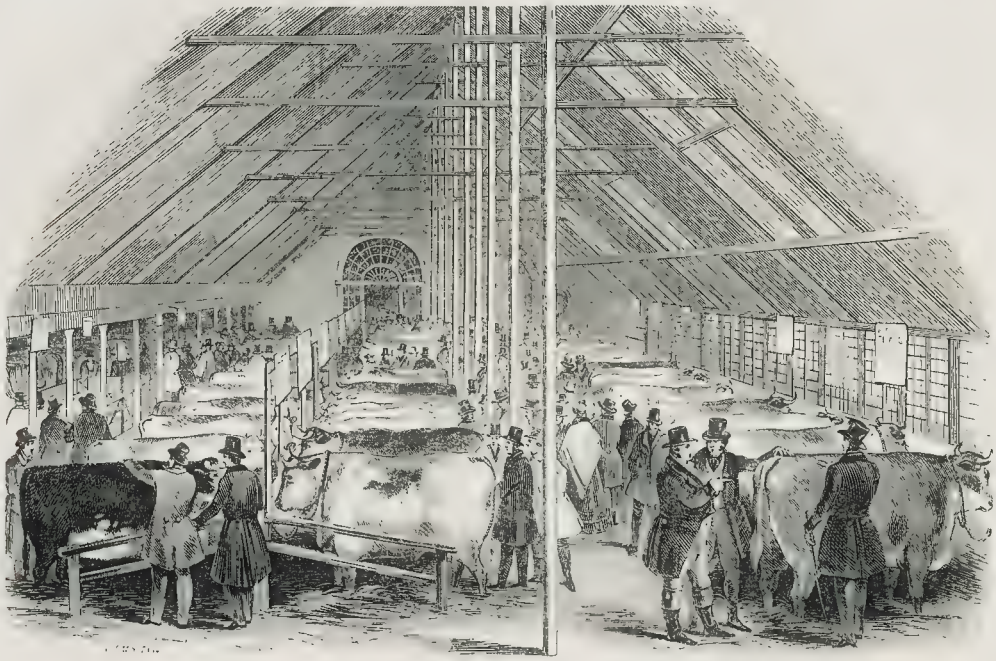
THE CATTLE SHOW.

'Twas a high day at Smithfield—the "show of prize meat,"
And thousands had come for an oxular treat;
And the fav'rit exhibition had not long been open
When who should appear but E MOSES & SON.
And this was the signal (Oxford, Regent, and law)
For the prize ones commencing a general "row."
The market was full with the low of the ox,
The squeaking of pigs, and the bleating of flocks;
Tall as trees in a fat bull made the following speech:—
"Attend (said the corpulent one, I beseech),
And I'll tell you good ladies and gentlemen all,
Why each beast in my safety should feel small.
Said he (as he look'd towards MOSES & SON)
We wish to resent many injuries done;
Those tradesmen by whom we are most of you clad,
Are the worst of all foes that we ever have had.
It appears there are leaders more quarrelsome bleating,
In the present and year than in any preceding;
They each year in safety more sadly annoy us,
Said he (as he look'd towards MOSES & SON)
We wish to resent many injuries done;
Those tradesmen by whom we are most of you clad,
Are the worst of all foes that we ever have had.
It appears there are leaders more quarrelsome bleating,
In the present and year than in any preceding;
They each year in safety more sadly annoy us,
Said he (as he look'd towards MOSES & SON)
We wish to resent many injuries done;
Those tradesmen by whom we are most of you clad,
And the i put down as the plain simple reason,
That so many more cattle must suffer the season;
And now (as d the eloquent prize in conclusion),
I cease—and beg pardon for such an attempt."
Then the sheepish ones bleated, and stamp'd on the ground,
While the pigs with their grunts made the market resound!
And the cars, whose vocal attempts were more shrill,
Made Smithfield's confusion a rival for Babel
But the shouts of the crowd, when the cattle had done,
Plainly told how it was with E. MOSES & SON.

READY MADE.	MADE TO MEASURE.
Tagliona, velvet collar and cuffs, lined throughout, from £0 9 0	Winter Coats, of the most approved make and material, trimmed in the most fashionable style £1 5 0
Beaver Chesterfield, velvet collar, lined, from 0 14 0	Double-milled Tweed Wrappers, from 0 15 0
and cuffs, lined throughout, from 0 10 6	Trousers of the newest fabric 0 10 6
Coolringtons, Petisses, Tonk Wrappers, from 0 14 0	Or Three Pairs for 1 10 6
Any pattern Doeskins, do. from 0 9 0	Winter Waistcoats in endless variety of pattern and material, from 0 8 6
Double breasted Winter Vests, from 0 3 6	Dress Coats, from 1 12 0
Dress Coats, edged, &c., from 1 0 0	Frock do. 1 4 0
Frock do. 1 4 0	The best manufactured. 2 0 0
Mourning to any extent can be had at five minutes' notice, at the following prices.
Men's Mats, Dress Coat, Vest, and Trousers, from £1 16 0
Boy's do., Jacket, Vest, and Trousers, from 0 18 0

Any article purchased, or ordered, if not approved of, exchanged, or the money returned.
CAUTION.—E. MOSES and SON regret being obliged to guard the Public against imposition, as they learn that the unprincipled are taking the falsehood of being connected with them, or, it's the same concern, has been resorted to in many instances, and for obvious reasons. They have no connexion whatever with any other Establishment, and those who desire genuine Cheap Clothing, should call or send to 154, Minories, to guard against disappointment, &c.
Observe.—E. MOSES and SON, Tailors, Wholesale Woollen Drapers and Outfitters, 154, Minories, and 86, Aldgate, City.

THE SMITHFIELD CLUB CHRISTMAS CATTLE SHOW.

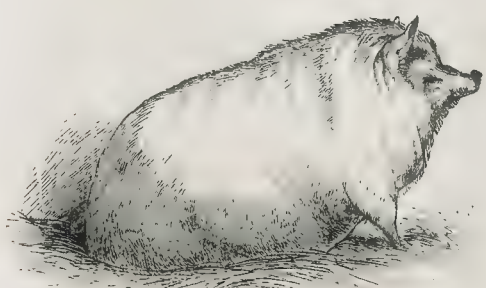


THE SMITHFIELD CLUB PRIZE CATTLE SHOW.—GENERAL VIEW.

On Tuesday, the judges awarded to the successful candidates the prizes offered for competition by this society; and on Wednesday, the show was opened at the Bazaar, King-street, Baker-street, Portman-square, as represented in the annexed engraving. The exhibition of the stock—oxen, sheep, and pigs—is this year better than we remember it to have been on most, if not on all, former occasions. The oxen are, for the most part, perfect as to breed, shape, and make. They are not, perhaps, so fat as some of the specimens exhibited on former occasions, but they are better bred animals, displaying better points, and proving that a great progress has been made in that branch of agricultural science in which the breeding, rearing, and feeding of farm stock is connected. In some of the classes, so nearly are the merits of the competing specimens produced by the breeders, that the judges have had great difficulty in coming to the decision as to which was most deserving. This has more particularly been the case in the classes of the oxen, amongst which are some of the most splendid animals ever bred in this country, many of them superior to what a few years ago was considered the very limit of excellence. Amongst the sheep, and particularly amongst the short wools, are many superior specimens, and many of them are so nearly matched in merit, that nothing but correct judgment, long practical experience, and a critical knowledge of their business, could enable those who gave the award to pronounce definitively on conflicting claims. The pigs this year are in fine condition. His Royal Highness Prince Albert has some first-rate specimens of these animals, and he has also two polled oxen, which are good. On the first day of opening the show to the public, the bazaar was well attended; almost all the noblemen and gentlemen now in town connected with agricultural pursuits were present, and there was a host of farmers and cattle-breeders. The arrangements, under the inspection of Mr. Bidmos, were very complete. The place is well lit and ventilated; all is cleanliness and comfort both for the animals and the visitors. In the evening the whole is lit with gas, and facility of examining and seeing the cattle and sheep afforded to all who choose to pay them a visit.

We have prefixed the list of prizes (see page 378), with portraits of three of them; and next week we shall present to our readers a few more specimens of the Society's awards.

MR. BEASLEY'S EIGHT MONTHS' OLD SHORT-HORNED OX—PRIZE £20, AND SILVER MEDAL.



MR. HOBMAN'S TWENTY-FOUR WEEKS AND FIVE DAYS' OLD NEAPOLITAN PIG—PRIZE £10, AND SILVER MEDAL.

MR. GRANTHAM'S TWENTY MONTHS' OLD SOUTH-DOWN WETHER—PRIZE £20, AND SILVER AND GOLD MEDALS.

NOTICE.—All communications respecting the transmission or non-arrival of the paper, must be addressed to the person who supplies the paper, or who receives the subscription.

London: Printed and published by WILLIAM LITTLE, at 198, Strand, where all communications for the Editor are requested to be addressed.—SATURDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1843.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 55 —Vol. III.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, DECEMBER 16, 1843. [SIXPENCE.

OFFICE, 198, STRAND.

FOREIGN POLITICS AND HOME POVERTY.

Political questions do not just now force themselves upon the consideration of the public, in the forms in which to take strong cognizance of them becomes either a pleasure or a duty in a journal conducted upon the high tone of principle and impartiality adopted, and we humbly trust sustained, before the community, in the whole conduct of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS. Indeed, all the broad questions at issue, either foreign or domestic, have taken aspects the most unattractive, and perhaps repulsive, to the general mind—to that mental philosophy which, irrespective of party, fixes its eyes upon the progress of virtue and the advance of civilisation, and refuses to partake of the delusions engendered by particular strifes. Alas! abroad and at home, our political wars are wars of faction. Who does not turn his eye with disgust from the brutal conflict between various orders of self-interest—not of struggle after any public good—in too degraded Spain. Who does not pity the demoralised wretchedness of a country which, in the administration of its affairs, assumes either that its Queen is a liar, or its Prime Minister a mere brute traitor by the throne; either that Signor Olozaga committed violence against his sovereign to force the signing of a decree, or that that sovereign, scarcely past the bounds of weak and irresolute childhood, has meanly imagined a flagitious charge to wreak a pitiable revenge upon an obnoxious minister. Who does not feel a certain scorn in reading that the country of the Cid is just now discussing in its Chamber the question of "who is the liar?" the Minister or the Queen. French politics, too, if not so humiliated, at least display no large amount of scope or purpose. They discuss the fortification of Paris with an almost worn-out jealousy—or ever ready for some new chimera, they seize their telescopes, and stretch their gaze across the Channel to find a theme of new earnestness and indignation in the white flag that is floating over one of the mansions in Belgrave-square. The impossible topic of the overthrow of the Orleans dynasty, and the accession of "Henry V." to the throne of France, is gravely agitated amid the foolish flutter of Parisian goose-quills;—and the ridiculous mummery of an ancien regime sally into the realms of Pimlico (by nobles in their dotage lending imaginary dignity to a mimic court), has made a bug-bear of the Duke of Bourbon, and is elevated into a question for grave discussion in the French Chambers, as though the peace of Europe were on the hazard, and Louis Philippe had no anchorage for his throne!—Bah!

At home there is something more of seriousness in impending questions—but, for the moment, even our storms are lulled. Ireland, indeed, is watched by the public eye, as being a theatre for the rehearsal of a rebellion—which men, however, have almost ceased to fear will be acted—and excitement pauses for the results of state trials which may yet, perhaps, be protracted until it shall have worn away. In the meanwhile, sensible politicians direct their attention to the true state of the poor in that unhappy country; and as to the condition of the Welsh malcontent population, look to see an early-assembled Parliament—under the vigorous direction of paternal government—exerting its energies on their behalf.

Thus, then—while the time for fresh and imperatively demanded legislation on the whole state of the country is earnestly awaited—we have only to take the events which are immediately passing around us as the pabulum of editorial remark, and to see that cases of domestic injustice, in the daily progress of affairs, do not escape the vigilance of our readers, who, we are persuaded, will never desert or refuse us sympathy while—without neglecting the rich—continuing our advocacy of the interests of the poor.

The journals of the week contain a few appropriate applications to this absorbing theme. One of these is found in a case of starvation to death at Sidcup, in which a coroner's jury have found a verdict of manslaughter against the husband of the miserable victim, although it has not included a parish functionary, whose conduct will at least admit of the strongest construction of neglect and inhumanity, though only a type of the heartlessness which, under the operation of the New Poor-Law, is too often evinced towards sufferers in the last climax of destitution and disease. The evidence of the inquest is pregnant with dreadful circumstances. That the woman was starved with cold and hunger is past doubt. That starvation brought disease, and that in such condition she was a houseless wanderer, is proved also. That she was taken in by one compassionating sister of prosperity is true—but the fear that in her dreadful condition she would die in the hovel that sheltered her killed the spark of charity in the bosom of her hostess, and she was cast out into her shelterless desolation again. That a humane medical practitioner gave her a letter to the relieving officer, and that she saw that relieving officer (who makes the unaccountable statement that the letter which she sought him expressly to present was not presented) is equally certain, with the fact that the officer did not relieve her, but only "went about her to the husband" who had deserted her and left her to starve. And so starve she did—and die under circumstances of horror; and when the inquest was held upon the dead emaciation of her corpse, nothing but the absence of the one ominous letter, and of proof in respect of its delivery, excluded the parish functionary from a share in the verdict of manslaughter under which the husband is now awaiting in prison the hour of his trial. But surely the proper authorities will punish the obvious delinquency of their unrelieving officer; and, although he has escaped a criminal, at least punish him with the severity of a just moral retribution.

In connexion with this subject, and with the protection of poor wretches from this sort of casual destitution, at least in London, we are glad to perceive that the Society for the Establishment of Metropolitan Asylums—which we so strongly advocated in a former paper—has united with an old practical association of long standing, and that the combined efforts of the two institutions will be consolidated to effect the stretching of the arm of charity "from the east unto the west:" and to the extension in London of appropriate sheltering places for the wandering poor. This fact is announced in the journals of Thursday.

We are sorry to have a second instance of sad disclosures made on another melancholy occasion of a pauper inquest, in a single week. We feel it a duty, however, to give the facts as they were elicited in evidence.

The first witness called to prove the death of the deceased, was a woman named Ann Benson, a respectable-looking elderly person, whom a juryman obanced to ask "How are you used in the workhouse?"—The witness replied, "Very well;" adding, after a pause, "but I work very hard for a farthing!"—"What," asked the Deputy-Coroner, "do you mean by that?"—Witness: I make a shirt for it.—Deputy-Coroner: What sort of a shirt?—Witness: Generally, striped shirts, but we pus good enough work in them for any gentleman to wear. They are obliged to be done with goodness and exactness, or we should not be allowed to earn the farthing.—Deputy-Coroner: Where does the material come from?—Witness: It is warehouse work, sir. They come to the workhouse by hundreds to be made.—Ann Voyce, another witness, being at the time in the room, said, "It is a farthing a piece, if we make only one, or two farthings, if we make two but if we make three of the same batch, then we get a penny."—Deputy-Coroner: How many can you make in a day?—Witness: Perhaps one, by working all day. Deputy-Coroner:—And what do you do with the money?—Witness: Buy tea and sugar with it.—Deputy-Coroner: But perhaps you have additional comforts in the workhouse, instead of more money?—Witness. We have a quarter of a pound of sugar a week, whether we make shirts or not; but no tea, nor any milk, unless we buy it, or friends bring it.—Deputy-Coroner. And do you get breakfast and tea out of six farthings?—Witness. We are obliged to make it do; for, if we don't earn it, however, we go without, and have water-gruel, which is very good.—Deputy-Coroner: Did the woman who is dead have tea?—Witness: Yes, because a friend brought it to her. We manage to make the money do, by only giving one another tea leaves some days. I had the woman's tea leaves when she had done with them, till she died; and, as she could not wait on herself, I attended on her for it.—Deputy Coroner: How long was she in the workhouse?—Witness: Three weeks.—Deputy Coroner: Why could she not attend to herself?—Witness. Because she was very bad in her breath, and had palpitations.—Deputy-Coroner: Did she see the doctor on that account?—Witness: No; but the assistant came to see her when she was dying. She did not wish to see the doctor before. All she wished for was a quiet place to be in.—Deputy-Coroner: Did she have it?—Witness: She could not, because the infirm ward was so full.—Deputy-Coroner. Did she have a room to herself? No, we lie four in a bed.—First witness: No, only three, because the fourth lies on the floor.—Deputy Coroner: Is that because the house is so full?—Witness: I suppose so.—Deputy Coroner: Are the beds of a good size?—Witness: Yes, there is every comfort for a poor woman, and every care is taken of invalids.—Deputy Coroner: Are you tasked in doing the shirts?—Witness: No; but I could not have tea if I did not make them.—Deputy Coroner: Would you miss that?—Witness. I am pretty hearty, and it would not signify to my health; but some are only fit for tea, and would be glad to earn it.—A juryman wished to know whether the farthing was paid by the dealers who sent in the cloth, or a higher sum, and if so, what sum; because, if it was lower in the workhouses than out of them, it was a wonder that so many poor women out of them were paid even three half-pence a shirt. One of the witnesses said she thought that two-pence out of every shilling received by the parish was paid to the women in the workhouse for the work of the kind that was done there.

Can anything be more heartrending than this evidence? First, that the labour of making a shirt—and making it well—should be rewarded with one farthing! Next, that aged, weak, decaying woman should be forced either to fulfil the wicked task, or to forego the "farthing comfort," the little luxury of tea, which seems so necessary to them that they undergo a frightful labour that it may not be denied. Next—and this is most horrible—the infamous workhouse profit the payment of twopence only out of the shilling to the old pauper female who has earned it by the miserable instalments of a farthing for a shirt! All this is cruelty that makes the blood boil, and it must be abandoned or this land will be cursed from on High. Nations have ever been levelled by their vices, and there is no prosperity or greatness so enduring but that crime may pull it down. Of all national crimes there is not one more detestable, unholy which turns the eye of pride away from destitution and burns the brand of cruelty upon the bosoms of the poor. These Poor Laws must be cancelled, or their hardy despotism drawn out—the press must no longer rink from day to day with these oppressions, which cry to Heaven for redress—the Parliament must bold out its mercy to the wretched—or, as they groan, and starve, and die in the dark corners of the land, the retribution of Providence will avenge them in high places—and the beauty of civilization and the lustre of christianity will die away from a degenerate country, and leave the grandeur of England a lesson of ruin to the world!

TELESCOPIC VIEW OF THE ECLIPSE OF THE MOON, DRAWN AT THE ROYAL OBSERVATORY, GREENWICH —(See next page

ECLIPSE OF THE MOON, DECEMBER 6th.

(From a drawing made at the Royal Observatory.)

Oh! thou dread instance of Almighty Pow'r,
There's terror in the darkness of thy path—
The sunniest orb in his most golden hour
Must shrink away before thy gloomy wrath,
And be to Light—a nothing! Say, art thou
The shadow of that awful Angel's wing
Who hath Death written on his fearful brow?
Or art thou one of those mysterious things
By which the Parent Mercy tells mankind
In symbols, that his sometime destiny.
Like worlds eclipsed, will be one day to find
The dimness of the body, and next to be
In realms of sunshine and eternal day.
When earth's gross thickness hath all pass'd away.

W.

The eclipse of the moon, on the night of the 6th, presenting a favourable opportunity for watching the progress of the Earth's shadow over a very rugged portion of the lunar surface, we attended the Greenwich Observatory, and, by the help of the Astronomer Royal, were enabled to complete the drawing from which the subjoined very accurate engraving of the phenomenon was taken.

The night, though not in an observer's sense of the term, "a clean one," being, in its darkened azures, of a milky tone, was, nevertheless, sufficiently clear for a perfect view of the eclipse and its circumstances. At nine o'clock the wind was southerly and still, and the sky cloudless—a state of affairs which lasted through the night. At thirty-seven minutes past nine, the eclipse commenced, but it was not till about fifteen minutes after ten that any trace of shadow became discernible. A faint tint—a fancied warmth, rather than an ascertained shadow—was then observed to be spreading itself over the right side of the upper edge, or "limb" of the moon. This was the penumbra—the greater or light shadow projected by the earth from the earth. At eighteen minutes past eleven, the outline of the moon was struck by the true shadow—the smaller or darker one of the earth; and then, it was, the eclipse, in popular estimation, really commenced; the previous interval of one hundred and one minutes having been set down by many tired gazers to the discredit of their almanacks—a sore doubt, it may be remarked, and a grievous puzzle to those who, rightly enough, regard the predictions of an eclipse with the same unresisting confidence with which they regard declarations. However, at eighteen minutes past eleven they were gratified; and at the same instant, the eclipse, unlike one of the sun, was simultaneously visible to all within the compass of the moon's light. Marvellous accuracy! proclaiming the "handy work" of Him who "meted out heaven with the span, and comprehended the dust of the earth in a measure, and weighed the mountains in scales, and the hills in a balance." The shadow, after its contact, proceeded in a somewhat oblique direction to cover the face of the moon. At first it appeared to be perfectly black, and to obscure totally the objects over which it passed: this, however, was found to be an illusion, occasioned by the sudden darkness of the moon, and the consequent deadening of the retina to delicate impressions; for, after a few minutes read, during which a spectrum of the eclipse which had been found in the eye dispersed itself, the shadow was discovered to be of a dark neutral tint, perfectly uniform, and slightly differs in its intensity, by a large amount of refracted light. The advancing edge of the shadow, and the successive changes of its shape, now became a subject of paramount interest. The region over which it was passing is the already intimated, an extremely mountainous character. In its centre stood a stupendous conical and crater-like mountain, from which immense chains of hills, separated by vast valleys, radiated in every direction. In the transit of the shadow over this varied surface, it was distinctly seen to fill the valleys first, and then, climbing the sides of the hills, gradually to shut them from sight. Here and there a bright mountain top was visible, like a burning speck, raising its head for a few minutes against the advancing darkness; and then, by gradual diminution, fading to a point, and expiring. These appearances were varied in a thousand ways, according to the nature of the surface; but none struck us more forcibly than the effect produced by the shadow suddenly sheeting, as it were, a plain with its sable hues, and then running along a ridge at right angles with it, simply obscuring it, with a less amount of shadow than the totally eclipsed plain. The effect of these spectacles on the mind is confirmatory of those very obvious conclusions which point out the moon as the servant, not only of the human race, but as the residence of an intelligent, though it may be, a very different order of beings from ourselves.

At fifteen minutes past twelve the eclipse was at its height; at four minutes past one, the true shadow left the surface, and, at forty-two minutes past two the penumbra in like manner vanished. The effects following the retreat of the shadow were similar to those which characterized its advance, and need not be described.

The drawing, it should be observed, being a telescopic view, is reversed from the natural appearance; and for the purpose of making the proportions of the penumbra intelligible, the tint which represents it, has been a little deepened in colour.

S. S.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, DECEMBER 12.

SPAIN

The important events which have taken place in Spain since my last merit the most serious attention. It will be seen that that unfortunate country is on the verge of a serious commotion, perhaps a desperate and sanguinary civil war; for do not for a moment believe that the Congress will be able to control the feelings of parties, or Ministers stop the strong current of a dissatisfied and justly indignant people. Olozaga, the idol of the mob, the chief of what the Liberals are pleased to call the Parliamentary party, is accused by those whom he assisted in regaining power with using violence towards his Queen, and forcing her to sign, I think, the dissolution of the Chambers. For this offence, by a majority in the Lower House of 91 votes against 60, he is to be impeached and sent to trial before the Senate. The statement given by the Queen is this: that on the evening of the 28th November M. Olozaga presented to her a decree for dissolving the Cortes: that she refused, declaring that she had confidence in the Chamber which proclaimed her majority, that Olozaga insisting, she attempted to retire, but this Saga drew the bolt of the door; that she then endeavoured to get away by another door, which he also bolted, and that ultimately he caught hold of her gown, sat her down, and, taking her forcibly by the hand, compelled her to sign the decree. To this grand accusation Olozaga gives a most positive denial, and to his speech in the Lower House he says, "that the Queen is surrounded in her palace by Carnarilla of intriguers, whose object it is to prevent the formation of a Ministry to remain long in power; that on entering office he found that an intrigue was being carried on for marrying the Queen to the eldest son of Don Carlos; and he, in a great measure, attributes his downfall to his determination to oppose it by every means in his power." M. Olozaga complained, and with justice, that many hours had passed away before the Queen made any complaint against him. He says—"Several hours of the night passed over, and the Ministers, who had been supposed guilty, was tranquilly in his office, in conference with foreign agents, without having any trace of the scandal and of the agitation which might be supposed to reign at the Palace." M. Olozaga clearly hinted that Narvaez was his persecuter, and not the Queen; and attributes to him the declaration made by her to the Chambers. "The words were not such," he observed, "as generally used by her Majesty, and he therefore concluded that the expressions were not her own, but had been suggested to her." He finished his speech by denouncing the audacious courtiers who compromised the throne and assuming themselves to be privileged classes, wished to dominate over and humiliate the other classes." This then is the state at the present moment of this most serious affair, which, in my opinion, never can be satisfactorily cleared up. The only evidence against Olozaga is that of the Queen. Olozaga durst not, in direct terms, accuse her of falsehood, and yet his defence rests on his simple declaration. She must be found guilty by the Senate, or the Queen be dishonoured for ever in the eyes of Europe. My firm belief is, and I know something of Spanish Palace Camarillas, that Olozaga is innocent. I have no doubt that he used strong terms, and insisted on the decree being signed, but I do not believe that he used violence. Sometimes the truth can be arrived at from the fear of the parties. Let us see what was the conduct of the Queen. She allows a certain term to elapse without making any complaint, she then has an interview with Narvaez and Madame Santa Cruz, the result of which was, that she sent for the principal officers of the two houses, and several grandees, and then, for the first time, the accusation was made. There must have been some hesitation on the part of the persons present, for the Queen observed, with great emotion, "Brave! now will become my Minister and receive my declaration. If thou dost not accept the appointment this evening, my declaration cannot be signed. Olozaga will declare me to-morrow to be a liar, without my having any person to rescue my word and take up my defence." Bravo's reply was, "Your Majesty has ... to my life and honour I owe them both to you; I willingly ... for you alone reach the person of your Majesty without passing over my body." The same evening Bravo, by Royal Ordonnance, was appointed Foreign Minister and Notary Royal, and the next morning the Queen's declaration was presented to the Congress. I cannot do better before drawing this subject than give you an extract from one of our papers, formerly the bitterest enemy to Espartero. It says, "If M. Olozaga be really guilty, still we cannot understand on what grounds the counsellors of the Queen can have been guilty of the imprudence of lowering her to the position of a complaisant in a court of law. To have this character is to challenge defence, to abide judgment, and to undergo personally, a terrible trial. If M. Olozaga clears himself, the Queen is then guilty! If he be condemned, will the Queen escape from the suspicion of having calumniated him? Whatever may be the issue of the case the innocence of Isabella has perished. The idol of the people has become their instrument and laughing-stock. Poor child of thirteen, martyr of royalty, in the midst of a reunion which hitherto struggled, at least, with a remnant of respect for the throne, and which has just cast on that throne the slime of its misery! What strikes us in the Madrid news is, the obligation which M. Olozaga's adversaries impose on him, of bowing his head in silence under the royal accusation! Is it not declaring too plainly the impudence of the accusation, to force the accused to be victim, and calling on him to immolate himself? Undoubtedly, appearances are against M. Olozaga—are they more favourable to his opponents? M. Olozaga has, perhaps, deceived the Queen, and the young Queen; the Moderates have, perhaps, put a lie in her mouth! All is probable. Behold, then, the Queen of Spain, alternately second to M. Olozaga, and M. Narvaez made the victim of the one! If England were to land from the Pyrenees, he would have a fine time."

The French Telegraphic despatches continue to announce that Madrid is tranquil. My private letters state differently. On the 3rd, several armed mobs presented themselves in the streets, crying out, "Death to the Queen." They fired on the soldiers, and several persons were killed and wounded

The new Ministry is formed; it is composed of M. Gonzalez Bravo, chief of the party known as "Young Spain, and formerly a violent Ultra Liberal—President of the Council and Minister for Foreign Affairs, General Mazzarredo the creature of Narvaez—War Department, Marques de Pena Florida, a decided Ultra Liberal—Home Department, M. Mayans, a Moderate—Minister of Justice, and M. Portillo, Minister of Marine. The Minister of Finance is not yet announced.

Letters from Catalonia of the 5th state that General Sanz, on his arrival at Figueras, sent a flag of truce to Amette, and on the 3rd received for answer that there was no objection on his part to receive honourable propositions. The same day Sanz sent to the Insurgents the draft of a convention, of some honourable and advantageous to them. On the 4th, a conference took place between General Sanz and General Amette.

ITALY.

The last accounts from Italy state that the Sardinian Government had succeeded in dispersing the different bands of Insurgents, and compelled the greatest part of them to seek refuge in the mountainous districts of Genoa, but, however, been arrested, not only in Sardinia but in Modena. Symptoms of great discontent were manifest throughout Sicily. The Chevalier Kludber, Spanish Agent in Spiritual Relations at the Court of Rome, died in that capital on the 24th ult.

GERMANY.

Letters from Rastadt, of the 1st mention that the fortifications of that city were to be set constructions upon a new system. There are to be three detached forts connected by ramparts and ditches. Rastadt is to be fortified at the expense of South- and North-East

This morning I had placed in my hands a private letter from Darmstadt, dated the 10th. It gives a true account of the entry into that city, the previous day, of the Crown Prince of Prussia, accompanied by his wife, the Princess Marie, and about 50 noblemen. It is the intention of the Crown Prince to pass part of the winter in Darmstadt, and the object of the visit to that place is to introduce of the late Princess Elizabeth, is likely to become the fashionable resort of the invalids on the Rhine. Homburg has this great advantage—its Casino is the only establishment on the banks of the Rhine, which is not under the ban of the Pope. I lately saw an Italian nobleman, of high rank, who has just left Homberg, his account is most flaming. He says, he quitted Homberg with regret—the city being filled with visitors from all parts of Europe. The distance from Homberg to Frankfort is about seven miles.

SPAIN.

The Duke de Bordeaux and the Legitimist emigrations continue to occupy the attention of the Court and Ministers. I am, however, confidently informed, that it is not the intention of the Government to take any notice of the—to say the least—extraordinary proceedings of that party.

His Excellency H. L. Bulwer, Esq., British Ambassador to the Court of Madrid, is now in Paris. He has had several conferences for M. Guizot. Baron Brunnow has returned to our capital. Prince Polignac has left ... Mr. Ealegh, whom a recent decree from the Emperor Nicholas banished from Russia, is now in Paris. The two youngest sons of Sherif Pasha, President of the Privy Council of the Viceroy of Egypt, arrived at Marseilles on the 9th, in the Eurotas steamer. They were to proceed to Paris to continue their education. They are accompanied by M. Granet, a physician in the viceroy's service.

The Prince de Joinville intends shortly to hoist his flag on board the Diadème of 74 guns, which is now in the basin of the Louvre (called "La Salle de Retour"). A large basin covered with handsome chasings, and stamped with "Reine de Ile." It is the first which was in the Salute Chappelle de Vincennes, and which was used at the baptisms of the Princes and the funerals of the Princesses.

Several trees have been cut down and planted in the Champs Elysees; amongst the former were several planted in 1756 and 1770.

Amongst the candidates for the vacant seat in the Royal Academy of Fines are Messrs. Alfred de Vigny, Edouard d'Anglement-Saint-Beuve, Emile Deschamps and Vatout.

Last week the bronze statue of Moliere was cast in the foundry of M. Soyez, and that of Duquesnes, intended for the town of Dunkirk, was cast a few days before. Marochetti has just finished the model of the equestrian statue of Napoleon. M. de Triquati is making several mosaic ornaments for the tomb of Napoleon

The Council General have decided that the Paris and Lyons railroad shall pass through the valley of Bievre, and not through that of Gif.

The following are the number of passengers and the amount of the receipts by the Paris railroad during the month of November:—

	Passengers.		Receipts.
Saint Germain	57,894	.....	60,711	francs
Versailles (right bank)	64,263	.....	73,060	ditto.
——— (left bank)	41,243	.....	49,231	ditto
Corbeil	48,868	.....	79,693	ditto.
Orleans	43,604	.....	407,587	ditto.
Rouen	43,100	.....	380,500	ditto.

The passenger train, which left St. Etienne for Lyons, met with an accident on the 5th. The engine ran off the rails, and struck on the bank; the shock overturned it, and it fell across the road which M. Calre, the engineer, was killed on the spot. Several of the passengers were wounded

Our musical world has been thrown into a state of consternation by the death of M. and Mad. Janin, the former the directing manager of the Italian Theatre. It would appear that one of the persons employed in the Comptroller's Office was arrested on Sunday, the 26, on a charge of fraud, in issuing tickets. The alarm was given by the late cashier of the theatre, who still retains an interest in the new administration. He employed emissaries to purchase several tickets for him, and with this irrefragable proof he convicted the unfaithful clerk before the commissary of police. Search was then made in the house of M. and Mad. Janin, and a prey to the most terrible consternation. His features were distorted, his temper sombre and irritable; his absence of mind so apparent, that several of the persons engaged at the theatre, fearing they had done something to offend him, applied to him for an explanation. On Friday morning the house occupied by M. Janin was thrown into the utmost confusion, being filled with police officers. M. Janin and his wife were both severely affected by the event, fainting each when it came. The situation held by M. Janin was worth 12,000 francs a year. It is said that he committed the act with so much deliberation, that, in order to prevent the possibility of setting the room on fire, he removed the candle, and placed it on the floor, to bear the brazier.

Dr. Sebastiani, and "Marie de Rohan," monopolize the Grand and Italian Opera; the latter is the greatest favourite. We have had a rather successful début at the Opera Comique, in the person of M. Giraud, a young tenor of much promise.

The committee for erecting the statue of Rossini in marble, on the perpetyle of the Opera, is composed of Meyerbeer, Vavin, Vieti, Demercy, Pillet, Auber, Donizetti, Delapeleure, Sheffer and Dupres.

An English gentleman, Mr. H. Field, a pianist of great merit, has been much applauded in some of our most fashionable saloons

Estabo, a Spanish Composer, well known in the musical world, has returned to Madrid, to preside at the rehearsals of his two Operas. Lestwerk was performed in Alexandrie, the Italian opera, "Elvira de San Musicale."

PORTUGAL.

Accounts from Lisbon of the 6th, Cadiz of the 4th, and Gibraltar of the 3rd, have reached us. The people of Lisbon were much mortified at the failure of the tariff negociations in London. The wine districts of Portugal were in a state of great excitement. The Duke de Palmella had retired, it was said, into private life. The Governor of Gibraltar, accompanied by Captain Sir George Sarterius, of her Majesty's ship Malabar, had visited the Pasha Governor of Tetuan, this being the second visit which Sir Robert has paid him this autumn.

GREECE.

KING OTHO'S SPEECH.—"Gentlemen, Plenipotentiaries of the Nation,—I present myself in the midst of you, with the conviction that this Assembly will cause the happiness of our beloved Greece. From the first foundation of the monarchy, I have desired liberal institutions established, for the purpose of preparing the introduction of a definitive Constitution. A municipal organisation, based on liberal principles, provincial councils, and trial by jury, have been the first consolidations of a representative form of Government in Greece. The present object is to crown this edifice by the introduction and consecration of a Constitution. Let us, then, unite our efforts, under the protection of the Almighty, to the establishment of a fundamental law, which will put an end to the real wants and the state of our country, and calculated to assist and protect the legitimate interests of all. Yes, let wisdom and justice reign predominant, and let us all be united by the bonds of mutual affection. In drawing up the Constitution of our common country, let us not be sparing of mutual concessions, but let the desire to strengthen and consolidate the prosperity of the state animate us, and guide us, in our labours. Let us show, gentlemen, that we love the nation. This love has never contradicted itself, and it causes me to desire neither more nor less authority than is necessary for the safety and happiness of Greece. Let us make a mutual contract, gentlemen, tending to give full vigour and security and stability. The civilised world has its eyes fixed upon us, and history will judge of our work by its results. Convinced of your exalted patriotism, I open the present Assembly May God grant that it may be useful and salutary to Greece! The happiness of Greece is my only desire—is my only glory."

A correspondent at Athens informs us, under date of the 20th ult., that the opening of the Chamber of Representatives on that day, was attended with the strongest possible demonstrations of national pleasure. The King and Queen went in great state to the Chamber, and so great was the anxiety to see and cheer them, that the streets through which they had to pass were lined with the eager crowd, and the balconies were filled with elegantly dressed females. Sir E. Lyons and M. Pisatory, who are said to be very popular, were warmly greeted when they appeared in public on the 20th ult. M. de Katakazy, the Russian Ambassador, who, with his lady, were walking near the Chamber of Representatives just before the arrival of the King, met with no such manifestations of popular satisfaction. Our correspondent adds, that M. de Katakazy was preparing to quit Athens.

TURKEY.

CONSTANTINOPLE, NOV. 22.—The last by Dr. Wolff sets out on his mission to Bokhara, by the Trebizond steamer, the day after to-morrow. He has been provided with two autograph letters from the Sultan, addressed to the Khans of Khiva and Bokhara, one from the Grand Vizier, and three from the Sheikul Islam. The tenor of the Sultan's letter is, that the British Government, being the friend and ally of the Porte, its subjects were entitled to the protection and favour of his Majesty, wherever they might extend. The chiefs of Bokhara and Khiva are exhorted, therefore, to release any British officers that be detained there in captivity, and to receive with kindness and distinction the venerable person who should come to see them. These letters of the Sultan, the descendant of the Caliphs, who is held in great respect by all the followers of the Sunnee sect, will naturally create a very favourable impression for Dr. Wolff at Bokhara, and the evidence which he has succeeded in obtaining on the subject of his investigation at Constantinople is of the most encouraging nature, and tends to confirm the belief that Messrs. Stoddart and Conolly are still alive.

Our private advices of the same date announce the receipt of intelligence from Massoul of another slaughter by the Turks of the Nestorian Christians. Upwards of two hundred of the latter were behaved to have fallen under the Ottoman cimeter. Reschid Pasha, the newly appointed Ambassador of the Porte, in France, was to leave Constantinople for Paris, on the 7th inst. Count de Flahault was expected from Vienna, and would, it was said, replace Baronde Bourqueney, as Minister of France at the Porte.

THE BRAZILS.

On Monday morning the Swift packet arrived from Rio de Janeiro, with the Brazilian mails, from which she sailed on the 30th of October, and has brought on freight 240,000. Passengers: Mr. Meagher (Belgian charge d'affaires), Captain Tilly, and Mr. Plowes. British ships of war at Rio de Janeiro:—Frolic, Dolphin, Curlew, Viper, and Crescent (receiving ship). American corvette, John Adams, Commodore Morris. French frigate, La Charte. The Princess of Januaria had been dangerously ill, but was slowly recovering. Exchange, 29d.

The dates from Monte Video are to the 1st of October, when the contending armies remained in the same position. The blockade was acknowledged by the British Government, and it was stated that Commodore Purvis had received an intimation from England, that he must not interfere with the care of the rights of the British subjects—a broad hint not to act in opposition to the measures pursued by Mr. Mandeville. The Brazilian Government had also sent despatches to the Minister, by the steamer Imperatriz, consequently that the blockade might be considered at an end. Which measure appears to have been decided upon the moment intelligence was announced that the British had done so.

La Rie Grande the Government troops were increasing their successes against the insurgents, who were consequently retiring.

AMERICA.

The packet ship Roscius, under the command of Captain Collins, arrived at Liverpool on Tuesday, from New York after a very successful passage; and by her we have received advices from that city to the date of the 25th ultimo, being five days later than those received by the last arrival. The Royal Mail steam ship Caledonia arrived at Boston on the 19th ult.

The news from the United States, by the Roscius, is entirely devoid of interest, but that from Canada is highly important, inasmuch as we are informed that the new Governor-General, Sir Charles Metcalfe, was so very unfavourable as to induce him to relinquish the office of Governor, which he has so successfully filled. There had been so much excitement in Canada about the removal of the Executive Government, and so much discord and discussion in the Legislature in consequence, that it had been brought to a premature close. The Kingston papers now before us state that it would be proroqued on the 1st, and that Sir Charles Metcalfe would resign immediately after the 20th inst.

Advices from Hayti state that another conspiracy against the Government had been discovered amongst the blacks. This was on the 26th ult. On that day three of the conspirators were ordered to be executed to be shot. One of them only knew enough to make an unsuccessful attempt on his own life while in prison. The others appealed to a higher tribunal for trial. This was granted.

From Rio Janeiro, news to the 30th October has been received at New York. A friendly treaty, which had been entered into by the Brazilian Minister with the Monte Videans, had been negatived by the Emperor. The British Commodore had received orders from his Government to respect the blockade of Monte Video. The Brazilian Princess, Donna Januaria, was dangerously ill with putrid fever, and great excitement existed in consequence.

The commercial accounts by the Roscius are very favourable. Business was very brisk, and the value of the various kinds of stocks had a tendency to advance.

The following extract from the last Madisonian goes to confirm the rumours of a contemplated movement in favour of the admission of Texas into the Union —"A few months delay might render the peaceable annexation of Texas impossible, and for the same time prevent the possibility of it. It will be enough for the representatives of the people to be convinced of the intention of the British Government to interfere, through Texas, in our domestic concerns—of the favourable manner in which its overtures have been received by the government of Texas—and of the artful means employed, with great likelihood of success, to prejudice the people of that country against us, and in favour of England, a strong appeal to their best interests, as well as pride. Once satisfied on these points, as Congress will soon be, it will at once perceive that delay could serve only to strengthen the necessity while it added to the difficulties of the proposed measure to suppress the evil in a few months it could perhaps be accomplished only through a war with Great Britain."

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

SOCIETY OF ARTS.—On Wednesday evening there was a numerous meeting of the members, Mr. B. B. Cabbell, F.R.S., in the chair, when a new fixed breakwater, supported by strong caissons, and furnished with light houses for coasting vessels, was described. The Daguerreotype process by M. Claudet was also explained to the audience, and experiments were performed, exemplifying the accuracy and ease with which likenesses may be produced by it at almost a moment's notice.

MR. ALDERMAN GIBBS AND THE PARISH OF ST. GEORGE THE MARTYR.—some correspondence has lately taken place between Mr. Day, the vestry clerk of this parish, and Mr. Alderman Gibbs, relative to the funds alleged to be owing to the parish, under Dickenson's Charity, and calling for the immediate application of its benefit. Mr. Alderman Gibbs has replied that there is at present no money owing to the parish under the will in question, but that owing to pending legal proceedings, the parish cannot benefit under the charity, until Midsummer, 1845. The vestry have resolved further to examine the churchwarden's books with reference to the matter

CITY ANTIQUITIES.—During the operations of the workmen employed in making excavations for new sewers in the parish of St. Ann's, Blackfriars, several relics of the Roman occupation of ancient London have been found, as well as a great quantity of human bones. On Wednesday last a skeleton, apparently perfect prior to its removal, was discovered under the foot pavement in the front of the Times newspaper office, Printing-house square, at the depth of seven feet from the surface. No vestige of coffin, or any description of covering, could be traced. There is but little doubt that these remains of mortality were deposited where they were found at a period when Christianity was first introduced into the country, and under the consent and church of the order of Black Friars, of which this neighbourhood was the site.

ROMANCE OF REAL LIFE.—On Monday last Mr. Baker held an inquest at the London Hospital, Whitechapel, on the body of Thomas Smith, aged 75 years. It appeared by the evidence that many years ago the deceased carried on an extensive business as a general merchant, in the city of Hamburg. Having realised a fortune of upwards of £ 20,000 sterling, he determined to return to his native land and spend his days in ease and comfort. He accordingly embarked the whole of his property on board one ship, whilst he came to England in another, but without taking the necessary precaution to insure. On his arrival he learned that the vessel in which he had intrusted the entire of his fortune, had been wrecked and totally lost; thus, in one short week, he found himself nearly penniless. During the last twelve years of his life he had derived a subsistence by acting as an occasional conductor, and otherwise, to the different omnibuses which ply on the Mile-end road, and from his boasted knowledge of the law, and his frequent attendance at the various Police Courts on behalf of his brethren who had got into trouble, he had obtained for himself the sobriquet of the "Attorney-General." On Thursday night last he accompanied a man named Hart, a conductor to one of Hendrick's omnibuses, as far as Oxford street, and on their return at one o'clock in the morning, went into several public-houses, where they partook of gin, ale, &c., until, deemed became quite stupified, and was obliged to be taken to his lodgings, at No. 109, Mile-end road, in a cab. Soon after his arrival at home he became quite insensible, which alarmed his wife, and a surgeon was sent for, but before he could arrive he had expired. Mr. Annington, surgeon, attributed his death to a rupture of a blood-vessel near the heart. Verdict accordingly

THE ESCAPE OF CONVICTS IN PENTONVILLE PRISON.—For some time past a good deal of excitement and alarm have pervaded the public mind with regard to the apparently mysterious manner in which convict prisoners are treated in what is called the Model System at Pentonville, and the rigid system of exclusion observed towards the general public in the gratification of those parties who are desirous of the discipline adopted amongst the inmates. We are exceedingly gratified at this general watchfulness, for it denotes a healthy tone as regards the liberty of the subject; and notwithstanding the high character which may be given of the system up to time of the public officers in every department of the state for humanity and benevolence, yet it is proper that the public should reserve to itself the right of making inquiry into the management of all penal establishments, and obtain from an account of every fellow creature surrendered to incarceration within their walls. We observe that a very interesting inquiry took place a few days since at the prison above-mentioned, before Mr. Wakley, the coroner of the district, touching the death of a prisoner named Brenner, who was under sentence of transportation on a charge of embezzlement. Mr. Russell, one of the commissioners of the prison, was in attendance, and explained the regulations of the prison, the nature of which were rather startling, and elicited a good deal of observation from the Coroner. Amongst other things, he said that the prisoners never came in contact, that they were unknown by name to either the warders or officers of the prison, and were distinguished only by numbers; and that no prisoner could ever give the slightest evidence with respect to the treatment of another. He could not, by any possibility, be aware of the other's death, and could know nothing of what was done in any other cell than his own.—The coroner said he thought, under these circumstances, that a prisoner's relatives should have free access to him. He then requested that the prisoners on either side of the deceased should be produced. Commissioner Russell: But they do not know even that they had a prisoner on either side.—Coroner: Never mind. Out of doors there is a strong feeling against this place, and some persons can hardly find terms vehement enough to use in speaking of it. In a case of this kind it is but right any person should have the fullest opportunity of seeing to the death for want of testimony; therefore, if anything is wrong, let us ascertain it at once. I shall ask the prisoners questions in their own cases, such as whether they are told to do cells, whether they have sufficient exercise, &c. They shall not be depressed by hearing of the death, as I shall vary the oath, and not refer to the cause of any person.—The prisoners from the cells next to that of the deceased were then brought in separately, the officers and warders being first requested to withdraw. Their account of the dietary was exceedingly complimentary to the establishment, but one man said he thought the allowance of the quantity of bread in proportion to the quantity of beef they had, and, on the whole, were comparatively contented with their situation. One man had learned to make shoes in the short space of three months, and another had obtained the art of apprenticeship), and another had learned to weave showy hearth rugs since he had become an inmate, although he had never seen a loom in all his life before. A day's food was then brought in, for inspection, by the coroner. The breakfast a pint of cocoa and a five-ounce loaf; the dinner, half a pint of soup, containing fragments of meat, a six-ounce loaf, a quarter of a pound of beef, and two potatoes and a half; supper, half a pint of gruel, and a five-ounce loaf of bread.—Mr. Russell (to Mr. Gallot, the steward of the prison): You were governor of the workhouse of St. Marylebone for three years: did the inmates there live as well as the prisoners do here?—Mr. Gallot: I should say not. Certainly not. The paupers had twelve ounces of bread a day, and meat twice a week, when at work. Here the prisoners have sixteen ounces a day, and only, and meat five times a week.—Commissioner Russell: Whatever the public may now think of the system, it is much more afraid that by and by they will say that the inmates are too well treated here, rather than not well enough.—Mr. Russell is not far from the mark. Humanity, in this country, is the worst species of misnomer we have. The inquiry finally. A post mortem examination of the body having been made, the medical witnesses were examined, after which the jury returned a verdict of "Natural death.

COUNTRY NEWS.

ASHTON.—THE TURN OUT.—The above extensive turn-out has most unexpectedly terminated much sooner than most parties could possibly have anticipated. All the hands resumed their employment on Thursday morning, in lieu of the old rate of wages. Thus is most happy and timely cessation of hostilities to may be innocent individuals and families.

BISHOP STORTFORD.—The following incendiary fires have occurred in this neighbourhood within the last week:—On Monday morning about six o'clock, the farmyard of Mr. Rogers, of Shorley Hall, was discovered to be in flames. Express was immediately sent to this town for engines, and assistance being speedily procured, a plentiful supply of water was obtained, when the cow-shed filled with agricultural implements, a haulm stack, and other small, buildings. Sunday evening another large fire was observed to break out north of the town. Two barns were speedily in flames, and the whole of the corn they contained was found to be the Parsonage Farm, Maunden, in the occupation of Mr. Smith. Water being short, the dwelling house was with difficulty saved; but the remainder of the premises were speedily in flames. On Tuesday night two more were the only live stock destroyed; the rest were saved. Letters have been picked up in the town in which other property is threatened. The greatest alarms prevails, this fourth fire having taken place in the morning.

DOVER, DEC. 13.—The second experimental trial of the Princess Alice, steamspacket, came off as successfully as the first, and every one here is even more astonished with her great speed. To-day the four hours and a half were taken to the first previous performance. The mail was landed at one o'clock, P.M., fully an hour and a half earlier than ever was remembered. The passengers that came by the Princess alone were in time for the train, which would enable them to be in London from Ostend (and Dover and the South Eastern Railway) in nine hours! Captain Smithett takes the Princess Alice to Woolwich early to-morrow morning for the purpose of having her compasses adjusted.

HARWICH.—There is a rumour that the Board of Ordnance have it in contemplation to remove their establishment at this place to the opposite shore of Landguard Fort; and that the magazine is also to be removed further, as from its proximity to the town, in the event of a railway coming it will not be considered any longer eligible; and considering the great increase of the point of Landguard beach, to which has lately grown, up to the extent of several acres, it is highly probable that this removal will eventually take place. The land on the Harwich side, belonging to the Board of Ordnance, has been, for many years, totally abandoned to the ravages of the sea, by which many acres of very valuable land have been lost to the Crown; and more particularly of late years, since the quarrying up and carrying away of the foundation has been let for an insignificant sum by the Board of Ordnance.

HASTINGS.—SUDDEN DEATH.—We regret to say that the Rev. Mr. Richards, the rector of Icklesham, dropped down in George-street, Hastings, on Wednesday afternoon. He was carried into the Albion Hotel, and a surgeon instantly being held, they brought in a verdict that he "Died by the visitation of God." The body was conveyed to Icklesham, at night, where it arrived at 10 o'clock; the bell tolling at that late hour, half a solemn effect. The deceased, who is much respected, was ab. 52 years of age, and had only within a few weeks lost his sister-in-law, Miss Hollingsbery, who also died very suddenly at Hastings.

LEICESTER.—A meeting was held at Leicester last week, to consider the propriety of establishing a Dissenting College in the Midland Counties, and also for the institution of young men destined for secular purposes, against whom the universities of this country are closed. Another feature in the foundation is to be especially designed for the service of Christian missions, to the members of which it is proposed to afford an economic aid from a knowledge of medicine and simple surgery as may qualify them to subserve the physical interests of those among whom they may labour, and at the same time to afford such a knowledge of science in general as may serve to promote the use and commercial as well as the spiritual interests of the people whom they may visit. Leicester has been named as the seat of the projected college

LIVERPOOL—SCANDALOUS FRAUD.—On Thursday last a very unusual fraud took place in the District Court of Bankruptcy, Liverpool. A few days ago Mr. Skirrow, the commissioner, related, from his place on the bench, that he never saw anything come the court with an insolvent estate so much surrounded of the story of the fox and the goose. The Talleyrand of the manumalia family had once entered into a compact with the least discreet of the ornithological tribe, the fox pledging to prefer children's scallops, on condition that the goose undertook to supply him with food. One day, however, the goose failed in her commissariat department, upon which reynard dined sumptuously on the contractor for the day. Reynard, the following morning, Mr. Skirrow continued, from an attorney of the court, accompanied by a client, entered; and, believing that the fable was intended for him, he quietly observed, "I understand the allusion, sir." —"I did not allude to you, sir," said Mr. Commissioner Skirrow—"I am not beneath my dignity to allude to you."—"I understand you, sir," observed the solicitor." "Silence, sir," exclaimed the functionary—"I will commit you. Mr. Gaskill, are you ready?"—"Ready, your honour," said Mr. Gaskill—"but there is no hurry," observed Mr. Green, "I will wait till the commitment is made out"—The matter dropped here, but it is necessary to state these preliminaries, in order to a right understanding of what followed.—On Thursday Mr. Green, attended again, and required the registrar to make out a certificate of allotment, pursuant to the first of Sections and orders. The Registrar consulted for some time with the Commissioner, and blank certificate was then filled up, and the usual signature was annexed? Mr. Green said the case was not properly before him hence until the allotment was made, on which latter another proceeding was had with Registrar Mr. Thomson, he directed him to make out the certificate, but not to sign it.—Mr. Gaskill—"That Registrar was bound to sign it, and he required him to do so.—The Commissioner asked if the Registrar was bound to sign on any nonsensical document being brought to him?—Mr. Green said he put it to the good sense and practical knowledge of the Registrar whether his papers were nonsensical. He said there was a petition and schedule, &c., and newspapers, and an affidavit of the service of the notice, and the signature of the petitioner and the schedule, which were in the required form.—During this time the Registrar was preparing the certificate, and completed it with his signature.—Mr. Green then said, "Now I am regularly before your honour," and he tendered the bargain order for the Commissioner's signature.—The Commissioner appeared annoyed at the Registrar having completed the a lotment paper, and, said his honour, "Give me the paper—I'll tear it in pieces."—"Surely not, sir," said Mr. Green. "It's a legal document of the court.—"Silence, sir, or I'll commit——" "Good God!" ejaculated Mr. Green, "Surely we do not live in the reign of James II., when judges made law."—"Mr. Gaskill, do your duty," cried his honour. "Remove him."—Mr Gaskill, the messenger, and his officers obeyed.—Mr. Green remonstrated; the officers pulled away; the Court looked astonished; and, as Mr. Green's commotion, when it ceased, is not very distinct, the noise and the commotion were rather inflorous for a court of justice in the presence of a judge.

NORWICH.—INCENDIARISM.—It is most deplorable to mark the progress of incendiarism throughout every part of the country, and the great immunity whist the daring depredators maintain in the execution of their diabolical outrages. On Sunday night, last, a fire of so ordinary character took place at the village of Stockton, Norfolk, on a farm in the occupation of Mr. Robert Grimmer; and in a short space of time a large barn, filled with the produce of twenty acres of barley, was entirely consumed. The unusual circumstance of no one sleeping on the property, but entirely without effect. Mr. Grimmer, we understand, is insured.

ST. MARY'S CRAY, KENT.—A fire was discovered shortly after nine o'clock on Tuesday night, raging with fearful violence in the out-premises of the extensive premises in the occupation of Mr. J. Snelling, miller and farmer, of St. Mary's Cray, Kent, about twelve miles from town. The premises consisted of a large barn, in which were stored upwards of a thousand sheaves of wheat and a considerable quantity of straw, a stable excellently fitted up, and several sheds for the stowage of carts and implements of agriculture. The cattle and some of the articles were rescued in the early part of the fire; but before the arrival of the police and the fire-engine had obtained great hold, extending with frightful rapidity, burning successively the building after another until the whole were consumed and their valuable contents destroyed, causing a loss of property to the amount of several hundred pounds. Shortly after midnight the fire was got under.

POLITICAL MURDER.—A most atrocious murder has been perpetrated in this neighbourhood, which has occasioned much excitement and alarm here. About five or six miles from Taunton, approached from a lane diverging from the Bridgewater road, is situate a small and quiet village, known as Pitminy, in the parish of Kingston. In one of the few houses which constitute the village resided an old woman named Hugh Sare, who was the reputed owner of a small property consisting of two cottages. Hough Sare appeared to have always been of a quiet and inoffensive disposition, and had never given offence to any one, as far as was known, but was generally respected. It appears that for some years past she has been in the habit of letting one of her cottages to a single man named Hugh Sare, who was also reputed to be a relation

SCENE IN SMITHFIELD MARKET, LAST MONDAY.

SMITHFIELD.—THE GREAT CHRISTMAS MARKET

Monday being appointed for the great Christmas show of cattle, Smithfield presented a bustling and animated scene. The attendance of graziers and agricultural visitors was much larger than on any former occasion, and the competition amongst the London and country butchers was carried on with more than usual spirit and decision, although the prices were not considered sufficiently remunerative. The exhibition was said, by those who may be considered qualified judges, to be the best ever seen. Mr Senior, of Broughton, near Aylesbury, exhibited twenty-five pure Hereford and Sussex beasts, that were the objects of general admiration. These wonderful creatures, five years old, were estimated to weigh on the average 230 stones each. For weight of fat and symmetry those, it was said, were never before excelled by any grazier in the world. dom. The primest Scots, Devons, and Herefords were disposed of at 4s 6d. per 8lb.; the highest general figure for beef did not exceed 4s. 4d. per 8lb. In comparing the rates of beef obtained on Monday with those of the same market in 1842, a decline in value must be observed of nearly 6d per 8lbs.; some of the Scots and Herefords last year producing as much as 5s. per 8lbs, and that, too, at a period when the supply was not taken as a whole, so good. The arrivals of beasts from Lincolnshire, Leicestershire, Northamptonshire, &c., consisted of bout 1000 short horns, &c.; from the Western and Midland districts, 600 Herefords, Devons, Durhams, &c. were received; while from other parts of England the numbers were rather over 800—those from Scotland amounting to 250. Scots arrived by steamers. There was a slight falling off in the quality of the Pigs, and Porkers, being scarce, were taken off somewhat freely at currencies fully equal to those obtained on this day se'nnight, or from 4s to 4s. 4d. per 8lbs.; but with polled and other breeds the trade was in a very depressed state, at barely stationary prices. The numbers of calves were seasonably good, yet the sale for them was tolerably steady, and the late improvement in their quotations was well supported. The show of pigs was good, but not quite equal to that of some former years. Neat small porkers sold firmly; other kinds of pigs slowly at late rates.

MR. HIBBERT'S GIANT HORSE.

THE GIANT HORSE.

In a yard adjoining the Bazaar, in King street, Baker street, is now exhibited the celebrated cart-horse, bred by Mr. J. Bacon, of Draughton, in Northamptonshire, and now the property of Mr. T. Hibbert, of Hillingdon. This horse is five years old, 19 hands high, and is admitted to combine in his colossal figure the pure English breed with perfect symmetry.

On Saturday, Prince Albert, after his visit to the cattle show, examined this gigantic animal with great attention, and expressed his admiration of his extraordinary size and beauty.

THE WEATHER.—THICK FOG.—The weather for some time past has been soft and unseasonable mild, the temperature during the night having seldom fallen below 37 degrees and during the day the thermometer has frequently stood at 45. Early on Tuesday morning, the metropolis was enveloped in a dense fog, which gave the day the appearance of night, all the shops and warehouses, and numerous dwelling houses being lighted. All the law courts and police offices were also lighted for the transaction of business. Navigation on the river was almost wholly suspended, and several vessels in the docks and at the wharfs, laden and ready for sea, were prevented taking their departure. On Wednesday the fog was considerable, but not equal in density to that of the previous day.

FOUNDER'S DAY AT THE CHARTER HOUSE.—Tuesday last being the 250th anniversary since the foundation of this ancient school and charity, by its munificent founder, Thomas Sutton, in the reign of King James the First, the brethren, clergy, and scholars, together with a large number of old Carthusians and their friends, assembled to commemorate the occasion. The ceremony commenced at four P.M., in the ancient chapel of the Charter House, which has been lately enlarged and beautified, at considerable expense. The services and lessons appointed for the day were read by the Rev. C. R. Dickens, and towards the conclusion an impressive prayer was introduced, "for the memorable founder of the institution, by whose great bounty the inmates were maintained, for the promotion of piety and of good literature." The sermon was preached by the Hon. and Rev. Robert Liddell. After the preacher had closed his address, the audience, preceded by the brethren and principal, left the chapel and ascended the grand staircase to the governor's house, where the annual oration, couched in very elegant Latin, and addressed Ad Carthusianos, was delivered by Mr. Herbert William Fisher, referring principally to the prosperity of the institution, and to the manner in which two of the scholars, Messrs. Palmer and Walford, had signalised themselves at Oxford—the former in having gained the Ireland scholarship; and the latter the Chancellor's prize for Latin verse. During the day a dinner was given to the pensioners, who now amount to eighty, and likewise to the scholars. There was a dinner of the governors and visitors in the evening, at which the Rev. Archdeacon Hale presided.

THE SMITHFIELD CLUB PRIZES.

The Cattle Show, in King-street, Baker-street, has been honoured with visits from Prince Albert and the Duke of Cambridge, and has altogether proved the most popular sight of the season. We annex portraits of the principal prizes.

CLASS X. 117. MR. TWOGHILL'S TWENTY MONTHS' OLD LEICESTER WETHER.—PRIZE £30, AND GOLD AND SILVER MEDALS.

CLASS I.

19. Earl Spencer, of Althorp, near Northampton, a 4 years and 6 months old Durham ox, bred by his Lordship and fed on swedes, mangold-wurtzel, cabbages, hay, oil-cake, and bean-meal.—Prize £20, and silver medal as the breeder.

CLASS III.

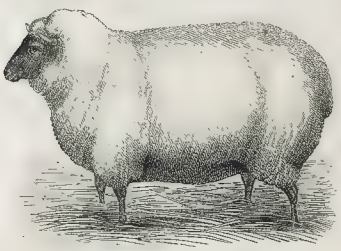
46. Mr. T. Umbers, of Wappenbury, near Royal Leamington Spa, a 3 years and 7 months old North Devon steer, breed by himself, and fed on grass, hay, turnips

CLASS XVIII. 168.—PRINCE ALBERT'S TWENTY-EIGHT WEEKS OLD SUFFOLK AND BEDFORDSHIRE PIG.—HIGHLY COMMENDED.

...lb of cake, and 900lb. of ba ley and bean-meal .Prize £15, and silver medal as the breeder.

CLASS VI.

73. Sir Charles Tempest, Bart., o Broughton Hall, near Skipton, a 4 years and 9 months old short horned heifer, bred by himself, and fed on hay, cake, and ...nips .Prize £20, or a silver medal as the breeder and gold medal as the best ... ...ed on hay, c... ...nips.



CLASS XV. 153.—MR. GRANTHAM'S THIRTY-TWO MONTHS' OLD SOUTHDOWN WETHER. PRIZE £20, AND SILVER MEDAL.

CLASS X.

101. Mr. J. S. Burgess, of [illegible] near Nottingham, ... pen of three 21 months old long-woolled wethers, bred by himself.—Prize £10, and silver medal as the breeder.

EXTRA STOCK. 182.—LORD WESTERN'S TWENTY-SEVEN WEEKS' OLD ESSEX PIG.—SILVER MEDAL.

CLASS XI.

117. Mr. Thos. Twitchell, of Willington, near Bedford, a pen of three 20 months old Leicester wethers, bred by himself, from rams hired of Mr. S. Bennett.—Prize £20, and silver medal as the breeder, and gold medal as the best pen of long-woolled sheep in Classes IX., X., and XI.

CLASS XX.

153. Mr. Grantham, of Stoneham, near Lewes, a pen of three 32 months old South-down wethers, bred by himself.—Prize £20, and silver medal as the breeder.

CLASS XVIII.

168. His Royal Highness Prince Albert, Windsor Castle, a pen of three 28 weeks old Suffolk and Bedfordshire pigs, bred by his Royal Highness, and fed on meal, milk, and peas.—Highly commended.

EXTRA STOCK.

180. Lord Western, of Felix Hall, near Kelvedon, a 27 weeks old improved Essex pig, bred by his lordship, and fed on barley-meal and beans.—Silver medal.

CLASS X. NO. 101.—MR. J. S. BURGESS' TWENTY MONTHS' OLD LONG-WOOLLED WETHER.—PRIZE £10, AND SILVER MEDAL.

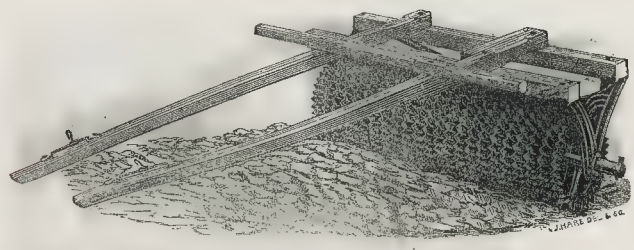
PRIZE IMPLEMENTS

Among the improved apparatus exhibited at the Show, the following

CLASS. I NO. 19.—EARL SPENCER'S FOUR YEARS AND SIX MONTHS' OLD DURHAM OX.—FIRST PRIZE, £20, AND SILVER MEDAL

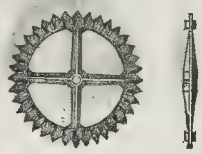
CLASS II. NO. 46.—MR. T. TURNER'S THREE YEARS AND SEVEN MONTHS' OLD NORTH DEVON STEER.—FIRST PRIZE, £15, AND SILVER MEDAL.

CLASS VI. NO. 73.—SIR C. TEMPEST'S FOUR YEARS AND NINE MONTHS' OLD SHORT-HORNED HEIFER.—FIRST PRIZE £20, AND GOLD AND SILVER MEDALS.



PATENT CLOD-CRUSHER ROLLER.

are entitled to special notice. They are the inventions of Mr. W. Crosskill, Beverley Iron-works, Hull.



PATENT CLOD-CRUSHER ROLLER.

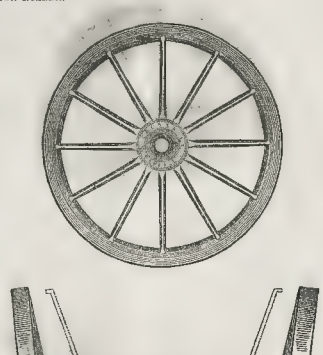
This was the Prize Implement of the Great Yorkshire Agricultural Society 1843. Its efficacy has been ascertained from practical experience; it is now in general use in the best cultivated districts of Yorkshire and Lincolnshire. The Clod-crushing Roller consists of 20 roller parts, placed upon a round axle, six feet wide, and two and a half feet diameter. The rolls parts act independently of each other: thus producing a self-cleaning motion in rolling the land. It is much used for rolling strong fallow lands, and for crushing the hardest clods it is indispensable; by its peculiar mechanical action and weight, it pulverises the clods into a fine mould, for the reception of the finest seeds. Upon light land it is invaluable for rolling wheats, &c., soon as sown; and in the spring, after frost. It gives a peculiar closeness to the soil, which enables it to retain moisture, in the same time it leaves a fine uneven surface, far surpassing anything produced by other implements.

PATENT WHEELS.

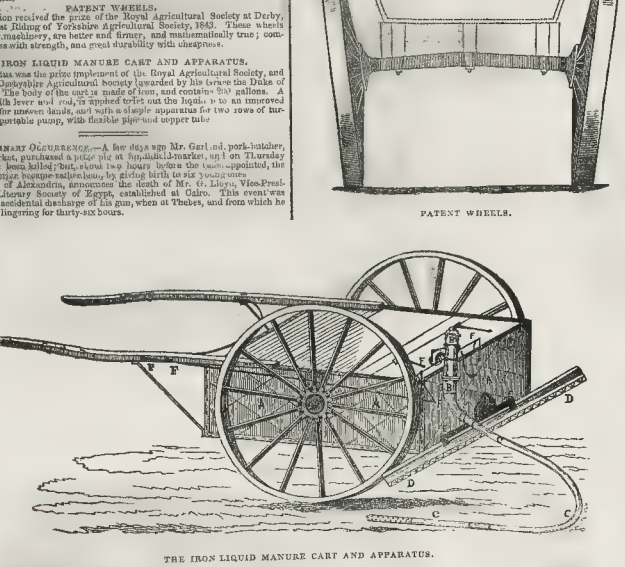
This invention received the prize of the Royal Agricultural Society at Derby, and of the East Riding of Yorkshire Agricultural Society, 1843. These wheels being made by machinery, are better and firmer, and mathematically true; combining lightness with strength, and great durability with cheapness.

THE IRON LIQUID MANURE CART AND APPARATUS.

This apparatus was the prize implement of the Royal Agricultural Society, and of the North Derbyshire Agricultural Society (awarded by his Grace the Duke of Devonshire). The body of the cart is made of iron, and contains 250 gallons. A brass valve, with lever and rod, is applied to it, and the liquid is to an improved spreadboard, for uneven lands, and with a simple apparatus for two rows of turnips. Also a portable pump, with flexible pipe and copper tube.



PATENT WHEELS.



THE IRON LIQUID MANURE CART AND APPARATUS.

EXTRAORDINARY OCCURRENCE.—A few days ago Mr. Garland, pork-butcher, of Oxford-market, purchased a pig at Smithfield-market, and on Thursday it was to have been killed; but, about two hours before the time appointed, the supposed fat pig became rather lean, by giving birth to six young ones.

The Pharos, of Alexandria, announces the death of Mr. G. Lloyd, Vice-President of the Literary Society of Egypt, established at Cairo. This event was caused by the accidental discharge of his gun, when at Thebes, and from which he expired, after lingering for thirty-six hours.

When her Majesty appeared in the Regent's gallery and took leave of her noble host's family at Belvoir Castle, the Queen presented Lady Adelina Manners with a gorgeous bracelet set in pearls and diamonds, as a mark of her Majesty's esteem and friendship, and to Miss Victoria Worthy (her Majesty's god-daughter, the lovely child of Lady Emmeline Worthy) a splendid ruby brooch. Her Majesty and the Prince Consort expressing personally expressed to his Grace the Duke of Rutland, their high satisfaction at the princely manner in which they had been entertained.

Viscount Combermere's birthday was celebrated by a public dinner of the gentry and principal tenants on the noble and gallant Viscount's estate in Cheshire, on Wednesday last, at Wrenbury, and the next day a large party were present.

Lord Claude Hamilton, M.P., who since leaving Scotland has been on a tour of visits in Ireland, has arrived at Baron's Court, county Tyrone, on a visit to the Marquis and Marchioness of Abercorn.

Viscount Newport, eldest son of the Earl of Bradford will shortly be married to the Hon. Selina Forrester, sister of the present Lord Forrester, and Countess of Carnarvon.

Miss Gore, daughter of the well-known authoress, is shortly to be united to Harvey Farquhar, Esq.

Last week, two boys, perceiving the train on the St. Etienne Railroad passing at a slow pace near St. Priest, set the between two of the waggons. Immediately afterwards, a moveable of increased speed gave a shock to the train, which shook off the two boys, and threw them right in the way of the advancing carriages. One was killed on the spot, and the other died in the evening, in great torture the wheels having passed over his body.

The annually circular of Mr. S. Tripp, of Bristol, for December, states that with an increasing population, railway property also must improve. Under the old coaching system, an increased traffic was generally met by an increased competition; but far so with railways, where there is a fixed given circle to meet an increasing unwieldy traffic. The trafficupon most of the leading railways has been considerably greater than half year than any preceding half year.

It appears from a parliamentary return, that in January last there were 79,200 officers and men employed in the public service in Great Britain and Ireland, and in the colonies (exclusive of India), of which number 33,172 were in Great Britain and Ireland, and 40,798 in the colonies. In Ireland alone there were 15,521. The return in question shows the army stationed from the year 1793 to 1843. In 1793, the number of officers and men in Ireland was 11,351; in 1822, 28,780; in 1828, 24,018; in 1835, 18,431; in 1835, 19,872; and in 1843, 15,000. In December last, in Ireland, there were 1 080 officers and men of the Royal Artillery, &c., making nearly 17,000 soldiers to a population in Ireland (according to the census of 1841) of 8,175,238.

POST-OFFICE NOTICE.—On and after the 5th of January next, all letters passing between the United Kingdom and any place in Jamaica, when conveyed by packet, will be subjected to the uniform rate of one shillings and two-pence the half ounce, and so on in proportion, in accordance with the scale now in operation in the United Kingdom. Letters, however, addressed to and posted at Kingston, the packet-port in Jamaica, will only be chargeable with the packet rate of one shilling per half-ounce as at present; and letters not being liable to internal postage.—W. L. MAHERLY, Secretary.

THE CASTLES LIBERTY FUND.—We find from the Yorkshire papers, that the movement begun in Huddersfield, on the 22nd ult., in favour of the liberation of Mr. Oastler, and for providing an annuity for him and his wife, is progressing more favourably than his most sanguine friends could have anticipated.

MYSTERIOUS ROBBERY OF PLATE.—Information has been received of an extensive robbery of plate from the residence of Josiah Stansfield, Esq., a magistrate, at New Cross, Deptford. It appeared that in August last the family left the house, with the servants, except the gardener, who was left in charge of the house. Several workmen have been employed on the premises since the absence of the family. A few days ago the family returned, and on opening the plate chest, upwards of £300 worth had been extracted. The chest was found locked and corded, as it was left. Two active officers have been making inquiries, but without any clue to the receivers.

MURDER.—Information has been received at Bow-street of the murder of a child four weeks old, at Gelly gaer, in the county of Glamorgan. A man named Thomas Thomas, alias Henry Farmer, has absconded, and a reward is offered for his apprehension.

EXTENSIVE ROBBERY BY A CLERK.—The Bow street police officers have received information of the absconding of a young man named Henry Jessop, clerk to Mr Hubbard, 4, New Market, Newgate-street, City, with £130 in cash, the property of his employers.

CONVICTS.—Grace, the step-son of John Frost, the Chartist chief in the attack upon Newport in 1839, who is a solicitor, and was about two years since transported for 20 years for forgery, has been, after working 20 months up in the roads, allowed a "ticket of leave," and has been hired as a free servant to his wife, who followed him out. Frost, who, as has been already stated, is released from the penal gang, and is in a situation as clerk, has sent a letter to Mrs. Frost and his daughters, desiring them to go out also, in the hope that Mrs. Frost will be allowed to hire him as a free servant. The Governor having informed Frost, Williams, and Jones, that the Home-office has finally determined never to allow them to return to their native land, they have resigned themselves to their fate, with a determination to secure to themselves kind treatment by their future good conduct.

THEATRE ROYAL, ENGLISH OPERA.—POSITIVELY THE LAST SIX NIGHTS OF M. JULLIEN'S ANNUAL SERIES OF CONCERTS. M. JULLIEN has the honour to announce, the present week will terminate this series of Concerts, the last of which will take place on Saturday, December 23rd, when the Theatre will most positively close.

CHRISTMAS EVE, ST. JAMES'S THEATRE, SATURDAY, DEC. 24.

MR. BRAHAM has the honour to announce a GRAND SACRED CONCERT, assisted by the whole of the Band and Chorus of the Metropolitan Society besides. The established favourite Airs from Handel's Oratorios, given by Misses Count, Ward, Lockey, Ley, and Messrs. Braham, Charles, and Hamilton Braham, and others, the following, from Neukum's "David" first time in London; Air, "My Flocks are Friend's Saviour, Mr Braham; and "The Challenge Duet," David, Mr. Braham and Mr. Hamilton Braham.

Stalls 5s., Boxes 4s., Pit 3s. 6d., Gallery Stalls 2s., Gallery 1s. 6d. Places to be taken at the theatre, private Boxes of Mr. Muchell, and of Mr. Braham, 5, Gloucester-road, Hyde Park Gardens. The Concert commences at eight o'clock.

GREAT ATTRACTION FOR THE CHRISTMAS HOLIDAYS

CHINESE COLLECTION, HYDE-PARK CORNER.—For nearly two years this unique Collection has maintained its position as the most attractive Exhibition in the Metropolis, having been honoured not only by the visits of her Majesty and Prince Albert—of the chief part of our Nobility, and the distinguished foreigners sojourning in this country, but also by the most flattering notices from the public press. The Proprietor, anxious to increase the popularity of this most extraordinary Collection, by enabling all classes to become acquainted with its wonderful contents, has reduced the price of admission.

TO ONE SHILLING EACH PERSON.

Omnibuses run from all parts of London to the CHINESE COLLECTION, which will be open daily, during the Christmas holidays, from Ten in the Morning until Ten at Night.—ADMISSION, ONE SHILLING.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—BRILLIANT EFFECTS are produced by ARMSTRONG'S HYDRO-ELECTRIC MACHINE at three o'clock, and at Eight in the Evenings (except Saturday Evenings). By LONGBOTTOM'S OPAQUE MICROSCOPE the magnified Optical Illusion of converting a Maimoth into the appearance of being a Cast on hole wheel is exhibited, with a variety of other curious effects. Portraits of the CHEMICAL and PHILOSOPHICAL LECTURES, which are delivered daily, are suspended in the Hall of Manufactures. DISSOLVING VIEWS. DIVER and DIVING BELL. Numerous STEAM ENGINES and other MODELS at work. The original CRAYON DRAWINGS of RAPHAEL'S CARTOONS, &c. &c.—Admission, One Shilling.—Schools, half price.

THE SHRINE of NAPOLEON, or GOLDEN CHAMBER, containing the camp bed on which he died in exile, late the property of Prince Louien Lucien which, Madame TUSSAUD and SONS paid £501; the Cloak of Marengo, the magnificent Coat of the King of Rome; the original picture of Napoleon, for which he sat to Isabey Marie Louise, the Grand, his secretaries, the King of Rome, from Life; Eugene, by Lefevre; the celebrated Military Carriage purchased by Mr. Bullock, with the authority of Government, from the Prince Regent, for £3500; the Table of the Marshals, valued at £2,000; the Clothes he wore as an exile—being altogether a matchless exhibition. Madame TUSSAUD and SONS, Bazaar, Baker-street, Portman-square. Admittance, one large room, in which rooms of Napoleon and Chamber of Horrors, 6d. Open from eleven o'clock in the morning till dusk; and from seven in the evening till ten.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK

SUNDAY, Dec. 17th.—Third Sunday in Advent.
MONDAY, 18th.—
TUESDAY, 19th.—Henry II. crowned, 1144.
WEDNESDAY, 20th.—T. Grey born, 1716.
THURSDAY 21st.—St. Thomas Apostle.
FRIDAY, 22nd.—
SATURDAY, 23rd.—Sir R. Arkwright born, 1732.

HIGH WATER at London-bridge, for the Week ending December 23.

Monday.		Tuesday.		Wednesday.		Thursday.		Friday.		Saturday.
M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.
h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.
11 2	11 25	0 0	0 26	0 50	1 14	1 39	2 2	2 51	3 14	3 36

ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.
TERMS, PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

	£	s.	d.
Per Quarter	0	6	6
Half-year	0	13	0
One Year	1	6	0

May be had of all Newsmen and Booksellers, or at the Office, 198, Strand.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

CENSUS.—"A. B., W.," Edinburgh.—We shall attend to the suggestion of our correspondent, which has already been urged upon us by numerous parties.

"S. W."—The population of the chapelry of Hoghfield, in the county of Derby, is given in our list, as stated in the Government returns; the clergyman, however, informs us that it is incorrect, and that the chapelry comprises various other townships the entire population being 3787.

"W. M. W.," Great Yarmouth.—The population of the several parishes in Norfolk, mentioned by our correspondent, is included in our list precisely as they are given in the Government returns; the errors, therefore, if any, do not rest with us. Any further information will be thankfully received.

"A Man of Kent."—All the populations of counts separately given in our list, are of course included in the population of the parishes in which they are situate, for the purpose of giving the entire population of each parish. These double returns do not, however, affect the total of the counties, which are given correctly.

CENSUS ERRATA.—Omitted in our last:—Mawdby, parish, Norfolk, pop. 66; Stutterby, Lincoln, pop. 526.

Arms given, Cheltenham.—The lion and the unicorn were first used as the supporters of the royal arms by James I., who adopted the unicorn as his sinister supporter, displacing the dragon of the Tudors, but maintaining the lion for the dexter as first used by Henry VIII.; and these two have ever since been continued as supporters of the national escutcheon. Richard II. was the first English sovereign who bore supporters; he wore angels. Different sovereigns have varied their supporters at pleasure, but neither of them has adopted leopards. See a clever little book entitled "Genealogy Simplified," showing the changes in the armorial bearings of the sovereigns of England, with a chart. By Archibald Barrington, M.D. (Just published.)

"A Constant Reader." Woolwich.—We do not decide wagers.

"J. T. T."—The engravings shall appear.

"A. G." is thanked for his communication, which shall, if possible, appear next week.

"Caddicot." Chepstow.—Our charge for advertisements is 7s. for the first five lines, and 1s. for each line after.

"A Subscriber" should state more explicitly the information he seeks on taking the altitude of monuments the use of level, &c.

"G. M."—The lines on Chantrey's monument are unadmirable.

"B. B."—We cannot interfere.

"E. T. S."—The suggestion is as impracticable.

"J. M." Aberystwith.—The postmaster must declare.

"A Subscriber, Hackney, and "W. B.," Haverfordwest, should apply to a respectable solicitor.

"T. L." Normanton.—The charge for the postage of a newspaper to France is a half-penny.

"Scripter" can recover the sum as a common debt.

"M. H. S." Finchley.—Twenty-one years. The tale of "England and France has been written expressly for the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, and will be completed in the present volume.

"J. P." should apply at our office.

"P. J." can only claim the amount administered to.

"Z. O."—We should think it unmaterial from what fund the mortgagee is paid.

"E. M." Walton, should apply at the chapel where the birth was registered.

"Xmas."—Christmas-eve is the vigil, or fast, to be observed in the church the day before Christmas-day.

'A Barrister of Ireland.'—The counsel for the prosecution shall appear in a future number.

"G. de C.," Reading.—Our explanation is correct.

"T. N.," Thanet, can recover the debt, provided it has been applied for during the six years.

"Alpha" should read and study the Bible.

"J. G. R."—The Postmaster-General has the appointment, to whom our correspondent should better apply. [with testimonials, &c.

"J. S.," Langton, Yorkshire.—The engraving is on wood.

"Simplex" should avoid low advertising furniture dealers; he has had a lesson which, we should think, he will not soon forget. We are sorry the horse is no remedy.

"Omega," Christ's College.—1. Some of the games will appear. 2. The concert season has commenced. 3. Bishop is foremost as an organ-builder.

"A. Z."—The payment of the prize money will, doubtless, be duly advertised.

"Anon."—We have not room for the "Legend of Edenson."

"A. R."—Your friend should forward the petition to the Lord Chamberlain.

"W. R.," Edinburgh.—The lines on "Hope scarcely reach our standard. The same reply to "G. R." "Other Days."

"W. G."—We shall complete the volumes and bindings half yearly, as heretofore. Vols. I. and II. may be had of our publisher.

"M. C."—The subject shall appear shortly.

"Cupid."—Our correspondent, 3, Bury is foremost as an organ-builder.

"A. Z."—The payment of the prize money will, doubtless, be duly advertised.

"Anon."—We have not room for the "Legend of Edenson."

"A. R."—Your friend, should forward the petition to the Lord Chamberlain.

"W. R.," Edinburgh.—The lines on "Hope scarcely reach our standard. The same reply to "G. R." "Other Days."

"W. G."—We shall complete the volumes and bindings half yearly, as heretofore. Vols. I. and II. may be had of our publisher.

"M. C."—The subject shall appear shortly.

"*Scripter

fully what is to be [illegible] no duty to control over the costume or wardrobe departments of any theatre. When an interesting group is presented to our artist's eye, he seizes it by his graphic skill, and transmits it to our columns with truth and accuracy. If our complainants be offended at the managers' exhibition of anachronical dresses, properties, &c., we are not to blame for it. After all, there is a vast deal of nonsensical conventionalism as to the precise period that a certain cut of coat should have been in fashion; and it is a matter of very little importance whether even Shakspeare had any coat at all. Our correspondents may say that "they manage these things better in France;" but we fearlessly for we have the testimonials of all artists on our side—assert, that a greater or more correct stage costumier (Hazi licence verbi) than G. Smith never existed in the recollection of man.

The subsequent questions of our correspondents can be more briefly answered. We never make invidious contrasts between professors in any art. The world is grand, as applied to an opera, and would not, in our thinking, preclude the permission of spoken dialogue or soliloquy.

We have already expressed our opinion as to the judicious transfer of the scene of the Vespers from Scotland to Hungary.

The orchestra of Drury-lane, on a recent occasion, were certainly incorrect, as were the characters too, but we cannot insert names; it would be partialism, as to which we do not indulge.

As to the rest of our correspondents long communication, we shall shortly answer their many valid inquiries and opinions in an article entitled "Music in England."

" F. F." is informed that our "editorial cowring" has been extended to him in our reviewing columns. Would that we could make men "wise in their generation."

" An English Song" exhibits, on the part of the joint producers (Natell, we presume, such a total ignorance of what "English song" not only is, but was, as to be quite obvious that it was meant for as a compliment, but rather the reverse. There is nothing of English melody or knowledge of English counterpoint about it; and, moreover, the words are scarcely coherent. Does are not, stanzas of such an English song can be produced.

" An Artist" may rest assured that we shall always employ fit people to write.

" A Spectator, Piccadilly.—We must decline answering the questions sent by our correspondent, more to do so would be disagreeable to the parties.

Prince Albert's Visit to Birmingham.—Messrs. Hardman and Hyde request us to state that Prince Albert wore buttons of their manufacture, and not of Mr. Aryshall's, as stated in the report of the Royal visit.

" Elegantia."—Chatsworth is considered to be the most magnificent seat in England.

" A. B. C." may send a specimen, if he pleases.

" H. W., Barnstaple, is thanked for the sketches. Should any event of general interest occur in our correspondent's neighbourhood, we shall be glad to hear from him.

" Enterpe."—We have no control over the proprietors of the work in question.

" J. D., Ipswich.—Yes.

" A Person," Grosvenor-place.—The poet referred to is Wordsworth, who resides at Rydal Mount.

The Wales Account, by "H. E.," The Music of Nature, by "J. F. C.," On the Queen's Visit, by "Beta.—We have not room

" R. S. T."—The edition of our journal for Saturday night's post contains the latest news.

" A Subscriber," Diddington.—We do not know.

" Anthony Jollands," News-agent, Grantham.—We have not room for the subject suggested.

" Algebra" should forward his request to some gravely scientific journal.

" C. T." Nailsworth, should advertise.

" A. O. L., Exeter, will find some good information on ventriloquism in "Brewster's Natural Magic," or in a little volume entitled "Parlour Magic."

" I. T. J." is thanked for the sketch of the farm-house in Gloucestershire, which the great press of engravings of the recent Royal visit has prevented our inserting.

" Demosthenes" should order the work of any bookseller.

" K. L. W."—It is a popular error that fat persons may marry and second may not. The marriage our correspondent speaks of is perfectly legal.

" A. S." should write to the Secretary at War.

" G. P."—If the newspaper be posted regularly as it appears, all the members will reach India or the colonies as addressed.

Thompson's Patent Fire-Escape.—We have not room to enter into the merits of this invention.

" Philo-Chess," Bury.—Lewis's "First and Second Lessons in Chess."

" Melton.—It would be invidious to engrave the portrait sent; as we believe that her Majesty was received throughout her journey with universal enthusiasm.

" C. W. M."—The building is liable to duty.

" J. E."—The countenance would be rated at a window.

" W. B.," Charing-cross.—What our correspondent suggests shall appear.

" Q.," Nottingham, states that the spire of Chesterfield Church, although it appears crooked, is not so in reality; and that this apparent leaning is produced by the spiral form of the structure.

CHESS.—"A" is bound to take the pawn.

Will the secretary of the Moor Green Club forward us his address.

" F. R. M.," " H. F. C.," " Automaton," " A Subscriber," " M. F. W.," " Palamedes."—See our chess article this week.

" Sigma," " J. E. C."—Received.

" Edward."—We shall be glad to hear again.

In answer to numerous correspondents who intend to give two or three games of the match between Mr. Staunton and M. St. Amant every week, until the whole are published.

DRAUGHTS.—" J. Knight."—To the first query, certainly not; to the second, we should say it has the option of letting the move remain as played or having it retracted and played properly.

CHATSWORTH CONSERVATORY.—At the request of many of our subscribers, in a few weeks we shall present our readers with a splendid large engraving of the Grand Conservatory at Chatsworth.

IRELAND.—We have again this week, with feelings of the utmost regret, to request our numerous Irish readers to accept our heartfelt apology for being compelled to postpone the remaining articles and illustrations of the Queen's Visit and solicitors connected with the State prosecutions. A moment's recollection on the part of our good-natured friends and loyal fellow subjects, will remind them of the difficulties we have had to contend with to give the first clear and largest space to the records and illustrations of her royal progresses; and a single glance at our columns to-day will convince them that other matter of great importance, which would lose much of their interest if postponed, claimed our utmost attention this week. The Irish matters to which we have alluded can well afford to stand over a number or two during the present cessation of legal hostilities, and will be read with as much interest a week or two before the trials come on as they would be this week, or would have been the last. We may venture to say the same thing of our report of the inaugural address of the Dublin University Historical Society, and a sketch which our correspondent, the Irish Barrister, has favoured us with of a meeting of the Royal Dublin Society, with portraits and biographical notices of Lis Excellency Earl De Grey and Lord Rosse, who were present. All these matters can afford to stand over, and we have every reason to hope that Mr. Jones's portraits, with which our engravers have taken unusual pains, will please, and that the latter from the sketch of the long-robed friend, the wigs the hall of the Four Courts will well repay perusal.

PHOSPHOR FOR THE BLIND.—We have received a copy of Mr. Hughes's work upon this important invention, as well as a specimen of his "New Embossed Alphabet for the Blind," and we think both works especially deserving the attention of those employed in the education of the blind.

FERAE.—In the illustrated print by Smallwell, prize cattle in our last number, Mr. Beasley's ox should be 4 years 8 months old, and not 8 months, as there described. The other lines are correct from the Prize List.

In a small portion of our last week's impression, the line "Proving House, Birmingham," was placed beneath the view of "Bacchus's Glass works," at p. 381, instead of the first engraving upon p. 382, and vice versâ.

NOTICE.—All communications respecting the transmission or non-arrival of the paper, must be addressed to the person who supplies the paper, or who receives the subscription.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 16, 1843.

England has afforded an asylum to unfortunate greatness more frequently than any other country in the world. Greatness of all kinds —the empires of thrones—the heirs of those thrones destined never to occupy them—regents, fallen from political power—generals, deserted by the armies that once obeyed their nod—all seem, at some time or other, to have turned to England as the only safe refuge, either from the storm of popular fury, or the vengeance of despotic hatred. The confidence felt in the temper of our people and the honour of our Government is a gratifying tribute to both. There is a dislike of needless harshness or cruelty, and an inherent love of fair play in the English character, that lead Englishmen—in the hour of triumph over a political, personal, or national enemy—not to press their advantage to the verge of cruelty. For the last century and a half our political struggles have been often fierce, sometimes accompanied with public violence, but they have never been stained by judicial cruelty—the laws have never been perverted or outraged for the sake of ensuring personal or party vengeance on a personal or party enemy. The same principle has made this country a secure "City of Refuge," from the political storms and convulsions that have from time to time torn asunder society in the continents of both the old and new worlds. In the first French revolution, such of the noblesse as were fortunate enough to escape with their lives from their own country, found safety and sympathy in this. Louis XVIII. was long a sojourner here. His brother, Charles X., was unfortunately so advised as to incur the hatred of his subjects, and could not keep in security the throne he mounted in peace, but was forced to seek repose for his "grey, discrowned head" in the deserted halls of Holyrood. Hither fled Theodore of Corsica, and Iturbide, the Mexican chief; and hither flocked the proscribed patriots of Poland. Even Ferdinand; and the more numerous and more unfortunate Poles, exiled by the despot Nicholas. So naturally do men involved in the political struggles of the Continent look towards England as their probable harbour of refuge, that one of the adherents of General Narvaez is reputed, by the Madrid correspondent of the Morning Chronicle, to have said, in reference to the utter confusion of parties that seems to prevail in Spain "The end of all this will be, that Isabell soon have to be teaching Spanish in London." England is, in fact, compared with the despotic governments of the Continent, an America at a few hours sail from the coast of France—and its advantages are prized accordingly. Here, at the present moment, are—Espartero, the ex-Regent of Spain, and the Duke of Bordeaux, the scion of the Bourbon stock, whom the Legitimists hold up as the rightful heir to the throne of France, and on whom they bestow the empty title of Henry the Fifth. He is not recognised by our Court as a political personage, and he resides here in a sort of incognito as the Comte de Chambord. But the veil is worn with considerable difficulty, and there seems every disposition to throw it aside. The unreasoning zeal of his adherents—the purity of whom Talleyrand said that they learn and forget nothing—has made him the centre of a little faction, whose only bond of union is a vain regret for the past, without any repentance for the unwise part they played in it, and anticipations for the future at variance with all the visible tendencies of society. As far as the unfortunate young Prince is concerned, this is to be regretted; this kind of homage makes him prominent, without procuring him respect, and draws a sort of attention towards his personal and mental qualities, which might otherwise pass unnoticed and unchallenged. The receptions in Belgrave-square have excited some notice in Paris, but here they attract but very little, and have been very far from raising any sympathies among us for the elder branch of the Bourbons, which has outlived as it has also outraged the toleration of mankind. As the Pope has refused no public recognition or his rights, and has made no public assertion of his pretensions, our Government could not interfere to prevent his receiving his friends, nor to hinder them from presenting their congratulations in what form they pleased. Political agitation is here so ordinary a characteristic of society, that things which would cause dismay at Paris or Vienna scarcely excite among us a passing notice. The utter indifference with which the Duke of Bordeaux and his partizans have been regarded by the English people, will, we hope, teach them something of the little estimation in which they are held. They have returned to their native land, where we hope they will obey the laws, as enforced by the able de facto monarch, and not compromise themselves and the Prince by any attempt as mad as that which has lodged Louis Napoleon in a prison. Society will not go back for the scion of any race, or for any name—whether it be a Bonaparte or a Bourbon.

The season of mirth and light-heartedness—the yearly festival on which the brow of care is smoothed, and the heart even of sorrow is made glad—when the joyous circle of young mirthmakers, with their gay prattle, and lively evolutions, and innocent playfulness, make sweet music to the spirits of the aged and world hackneyed—when the cloudless rejoicing of youth removes the mists from and infuses a like serenity into the darkened hearts of the afflicted when Christianity exults in its Saturnalia, not like the Saturnalia of the ancients, profaned by vice and sullied by sensuality, but a Saturnalia characteristic and typical of the purity of christianity itself, and the revel of the heart is an homage to Heaven -when it knits closer the ties of charity, and makes more dear the bonds of affection, and the wildest outpourings of the spirit disenthralled from care are still controlled by the sense that they are the licence of religion, and that in their enjoyment its behests must not be violated. This season of pure and consecrated joy is approaching, and many hearts throughout the Christian world are exulting in its anticipation. And are there none to whom Christmas is no festival—are there none to whom, unless some kindly aid interposes, individual misery will be rendered more bleak and heart-chilling by the contrast of surrounding gladness—are there none who at the dreariness of their cheerless and cheerless hearths, viewing through the medium of their own despair the joy which illumines the world about them, feel it but a lurid light of encircling mockery and persecution, placing them in the position and awakening in them the impulses of—are there not many such world-forsaken wretches in the busy haunts of our cities, in the almost choked-up alleys, which seem shrunk into infinitesimal space, to make way for the gorgeo is mansions of the wealthy and the thronged avenues of commerce—are there no young families who, in the season of Christian festivity, will endure, if unassisted, the pangs of hunger, while others, more fortunate, aresated—will cry with famine almost within the hearing of the merry outbursts of happier juvenile rejoicers—who, in looking for consolation to the parental countenance, will read there the scowl of hopeless wretchedness and agony, but darkening their own gloom, and completing their desolation?

The scorpion girt with fire—

Who, with the consciousness that such things are, and that he has done nothing to remove them, can sit down to his Christmas banquet, and, however sumptuous may be his feast, feel that he has enjoyed it, with those appliances which render the season and the hour so delightful? Can he feel that religion sanctions his revelry, or that he has prepared himself for it by obedience to its mandates? Is Charity no accompaniment of—no duty preparatory to—the Christian feast? Is a world-excluding selfishness, gloating in lonely or domestic sensuality, or heartless levity, consonant with, or worthy of, the season, or the source whence its characteristic observances originate? No. The person who neglects to relieve some misery—to enable some family to be, if not merrier, at least less wretched, at this season, deprives himself of an appliance—though but a mental one—to his own comfort, in comparison to which the richest condiment at his varied board is worthless—the zest of having, in the spirit of Christianity and kindly feeling, enabled others as well as himself to exult in doing homage to Heaven on the sacred periodical occasion of Christian joy.

We trust that our remarks may remind, even though it be but a few, of a duty which all must feel; and that, where there is so wide a field for Charity to exert itself in its consecrated and heart-remunerated labour, the labourers will not be few or unenergetic, but that at the ensuing Christmas a light of consolation and hope may be thrown by kind visitants on the dwellings of those to whom privation has been long familiar—to whom misery has been long a handmaid, and who have long experienced painfully the world's disregard.

THE COURT AND HAUT TON.

WINDSOR, Sunday.—Her Majesty and Prince Albert, the ladies and gentlemen of the suite and household, attended divine service in the Castle The Bishop of Oxford preached. He remained from 5th to 10th, 30th v. Her Majesty and her illustrious Consort took their usual walk on the terrace and in the grounds around the Castle.

MONDAY.—The Queen and Prince Albert took their usual walk in the neighbourhood of the Castle The Prince of Wales and the Princess Alice were taken in a carriage airing, attended by Lady Lyttelton. The Princess Royal was taken her customary morning's walk on the Castle and in the grounds about the Castle Prince Albert went to day to enjoy some sport in the royal preserves. He was attended by Major-General Wemyss, Col. Bouverie, and Sir F. Stovin. The returned to the Castle to lunch. The Duchess of Kent, Lady Fanny Howard, the Dowager Lady Lyttelton, and the Hon. and Rev. C. Courtenay, joined the royal dinner circle

TUESDAY.—The Queen and Prince Albert took their usual early walk in the precincts of the Castle. In the forenoon her Majesty and Prince went to Eton, where the Duke of Wellington, Commander-in-Chief, [illegible] Sir Robert Peel, Lord Privy Seal, the Earl of Aberdeen, Secretary for Foreign Affairs; Sir James Graham, Secretary of State for the Home Department, Lord Stanley, Secretary of State for the Colonies; Sir Edward Knatchbull, Paymaster of the Forces; and the Earl of Jersey, Master of the Horse. At the Council, Parliament was ordered to be further prorogued from Tuesday the 19th instant until Thursday the 1st of February next, and a proclamation was ordered to be issued, summoning Parliament to meet, for the dispatch of business, on the 1st of February. Her Majesty was also pleased to appoint [illegible] Mr. Pemberton Leigh, and R. C. Lowe, Esq., to be Commissioners of the Caps of Good Hope. Sir Robert Peel, and the usual oath appointed to be taken by the governors of her Majesty's [illegible]. Sir Robert Peel and the Earl of Aberdeen remained at Windsor Castle on a visit to her Majesty. During the forenoon the Queen and Prince Albert took their usual walk in the pleasure-grounds of the Castle Prince Albert afterwards hunted with his harriers They threw off at Ankerwycke, and after pretty good sport, his Royal Highness returned to the Castle to lunch. The Prince was attended by the Earl of Morton, Major-General Wemyss, Colonel Bouverie, and Mr. C. F. Anson.

THE DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER [illegible] answer given yesterday to inquiries at Gloucester House on the part of the nobility and gentry was: "The Duchess is pretty well"

His Royal Highness the Duke of Cumberland, attended by Baron Knesebeck, left town on Wednesday morning for his seat at the Hon. Colonel Howard's, Harewood-park, near Ripon, where his Royal Highness passed the remainder of the day shooting, returning in the evening to Cumberland House

THE DUC DE BORDEAUX.—Monsieur le Duc de Bordeaux returned to 55, Belgrave-square on Wednesday from his visit to the Duke of Beaufort, at Badminton. His Grace received the illustrious Prince with every honour, and a large party was assembled on the occasion. The Seventh Regiment of Hussars, His Grace's regiment, [illegible] the Prince was attended by the Earl of Morton, Major-General Wemyss, Colonel Bouverie, and Mr. C. F. Anson.

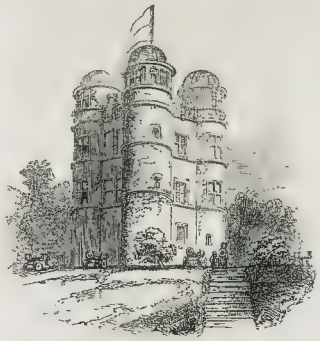
THE DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER.—The

NOOKS AND CORNERS OF OLD ENGLAND.

THE HUNTING TOWER, CHATSWORTH, DERBYSHIRE.

Among the wonders of the Peak, Chatsworth House, the seat of the Duke of Devonshire, has always been enumerated. Behind Chatsworth, nearly at the summit of a steep, rocky, and thickly-wooded hill, stands the building which is represented in the cut. It is a square tower, having at each angle a round turret, which rises above the tower itself, and is surmounted by a small dome. There is nothing otherwise remarkable in the architecture of this building. The windows are most of them blocked up with masonry. The door is approached by a flight of low steps. Its use, at present, is to bear the flag of the Duke of Devonshire, as lord lieutenant of the county. It is built on a level spot of ground, and from its elevated situation affords an extensive view over the park and the surrounding hills.

Hunting towers were, in former times, frequently built in the neighbourhood of the residences of the great, for the purpose, we are told, of "giving the ladies of those days an opportunity of enjoying the sport of hunting." This at Chatsworth, probably, is as old as the first house. Stukeley, in his "Itinerary," gives a view of a hunting tower at Audley End, in Essex, which in his time (1722) was in ruins. "Not far off," he says, "by Audlenhouse, upon an eminence, is a great Roman camp: a hunting tower of brick now stands upon it."



THE HUNTING TOWER, CHATSWORTH.

This is a square tower; and, like that at Chatsworth, is situated upon an elevated spot, overlooking much of the surrounding country. The hunting tower at Chatsworth is now called The Stand. It is mentioned in Bray's "Tour," in 1783, and he says that it was then called "The Hunting Tower." It seems, however, to have long had its present name, as it is called "The Stand" in the map in Speed's "Description of Britain," made in 1666. In the traditions of the place it is connected with the name of Queen Mary of Scotland, who was confined for some time at Chatsworth. Similar traditions are connected with an old building near the river (the Derwent), surrounded by a moat, and including a garden, which is now called "Mary's Bower."

(From a Correspondent.)

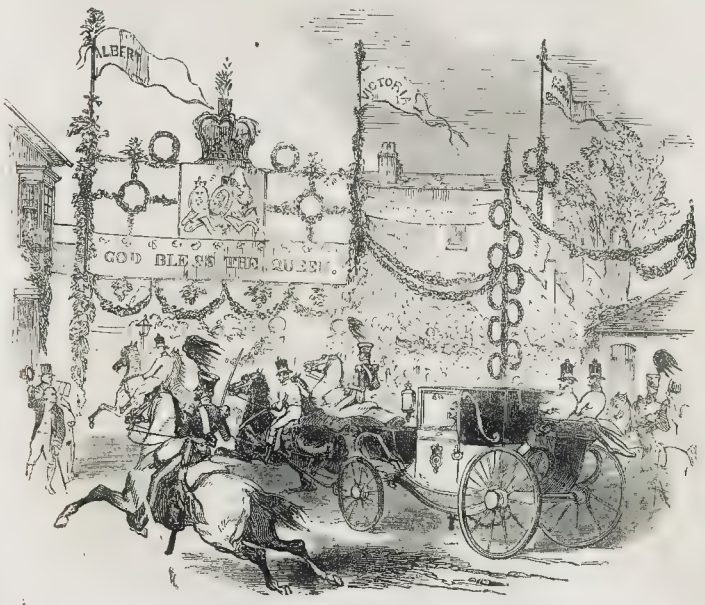
One of the prettiest designs of an evergreen arch I have ever seen was on the high-road from Chesterfield to Chatsworth, and about four miles from the latter. The road lies over a mountainous tract of country, for two or three miles, and upon entering the Hundred of the High Peak, it winds down the sides of the hills, with lofty and precipitous rocks on either side, and a strong mountain torrent beneath. In this wild spot, where there is not a tree or a house in view, an arch of evergreens and roses sprang across the road, with the following inscription in large characters: "Welcome Queen Victoria and her Royal Consort to the High Peak, where they will be surrounded by loyal and affectionate subjects:" and upon two flags which surmounted the side arches were inscribed, "Long live our Gracious Queen Victoria and Prince Albert, her Royal Consort;" and "Long live his Grace, the noble owner of the Palace of the Peak."

THE QUEEN'S VISIT TO THE MIDLAND COUNTIES.—HER MAJESTY GOING TO THE BELVOIR HUNT.



TRIUMPHAL ARCH AT THE EARL OF WILTON'S [illegible]

Although in our late editions of last week's paper, we reported the return of Her Majesty and the Prince Consort to Windsor Castle, our illustrated chronicle of this most interesting event left the Royal party in the enjoyment of the splendid hospitalities of Belvoir. We now resume this picturesque record with a view of the

STAUNTON TOWER.

This noble outwork, which forms so prominent a part of Belvoir Castle, was successfully defended by Sir Manger Staunton, Lord of Staunton, against William, the Norman, who when firmly seated on the throne he had won, allowed the Lord of Staunton to keep possession of the lands he had so nobly defended; and he afterwards held the lordship of Staunton by tenure of "Castle Guard." The tower has ever since been called "Staunton Tower." The lordship of Staunton is situated seven miles from Newark and five from Belvoir, and has been in possession of a family of the name of Staunton for nearly 1300 years. The Rev. Dr. Staunton presented the key of Staunton Tower to George the Fourth, when Prince Regent, during his visit to the Duke of Rutland, on the occasion of the christening of the Marquis of Granby, who died an infant; and on the first evening of Her Majesty's visit this ancient ceremonial was also observed by Dr. Staunton, who, having presented the key to the Queen, her Majesty was graciously pleased to return it.

THE STAUNTON TOWER, BELVOIR CASTLE.

THE DUKE OF WELLINGTON AT THE RAILWAY STATION, RUGBY.

Our next illustration represents her Majesty going to

THE MEET, AT BELVOIR.

On Wednesday morning, about eleven o'clock, Prince Albert, the Duke of Wellington, the Duke of Bedford, and Colonel Bouverie, went out to shoot, their place of destination being kept as private as possible. The spot chosen was Barkstone-wood, a short distance from the castle, where they had some good sport. Between eleven and a quarter to two o'clock, thirty-eight pheasants, two woodcocks, and a rabbit, were shot by Prince Albert, who had three guns, which were loaded by one of his Yagers (Lawley), and occasionally by Col Bouverie. Neither the Duke of Wellington nor the Duke of Bedford shot with the same keenness as his Royal Highness, (who once brought down a cock and a hen pheasant, twenty yards from each other, with one shot), but on more than one occasion, the Duke of Wellington and the Prince had friendly rivalry, one bringing down a bird the other had missed. The Duke of Wellington shot a "mule" pheasant in this way, and when the birds were laid aside after the conclusion of the sport, his Royal Highness told the attendants to put the afore-named "mule" between the cock and hen he had shot—as it would then be in its proper place, "between both." Very few persons were present to witness the shooting, and they were cautioned once by the Duke of Wellington to keep back, or they would be "hurt by one of Prince Albert's long shots."

At a quarter to twelve o'clock precisely, her Majesty, accompanied by the Queen Dowager, the Duke of Rutland, and one of her ladies in waiting, went in the same manner as on the preceding day, to witness the "meet," which was to take place at the Salt Pecks.

It would be almost impossible to describe the animating appearance of the whole scene such were the crowds of horsemen, so numerous were the vehicles of every description from every part of the country, some of the horsemen having come from beyond Nottingham and from other parts of the country, quite in an opposite direction, and from an equal distance—and so gaily were the red coats of the huntsmen mingled with the immense moving mass There must have been several thousand persons present.

Of the picturesque scene in the avenue, immediately beneath the magnificent castle, our engraving conveys a spirited representation.

The Hunt proceeded to Harlaxton, whither they were followed by an immense company, and where they "found" immediately—her Majesty being one of the first to see the fox as he broke cover. He made his first point for School-plats Gorse; then turned short to the left by Strawson, and crossed Harlaxton-wood, and the park, in the presence of the royal carriage—indeed, her Majesty had a good sight of it three times: he then made for Harlaxton, where he was headed and turned short to the right. After this, the fox made for the Grantham-road, crossing that and the canal, leaving Barrowby to the left, and going on for Great Gonerby, crossing the village and the gardens there—across the old North-road and the Witham, into Belton-park, where the hounds were brought to a check in consequence of the very numerous "field." The dogs then went into Jericho Plantations, and soon "found" again; but after a run of twenty minutes, they were obliged to be stopped, in consequence of the evening drawing on. The dogs were in the kennels again by six o'clock. A correspondent, writing from Melton, mentions "how very generally it was remarked by all our best sportsmen here, how admirably Prince

TRIUMPHAL ARCH, THORPE ARNOLD.

Albert rode, and took his fences, with the Belvoir hounds." Her Majesty was most enthusiastically cheered upon her return to the castle.

Next is one of the most superb appointments at the castle, fitted up expressly for her Majesty, and here after to be preserved at Belvoir, as a magnificent memorial of the distinguished honour conferred upon the noble house of Rutland by the royal visit. The state bed is unique for its gorgeous embellishments, and the splendour and taste evinced in its structure and hangings. In form, the bedstead is in the style of the period of Queen Anne; the canopy being surmounted by the regal crown of burnished gold, resting on a cushion elaborately carved. The hangings and draperies are of the richest silk damask, colour eau de Nile, trimmed with exquisitely finished fringe, in accordance with the draperies. The colour of the interior is in harmony; and the canopy terminates at the centre with the heraldic roses of the houses of York and Lancaster. The walls of the bedroom are hung with a most costly pearl-coloured silk fabric, finished by a gold moulding; and the window draperies, and covers for ottomans, chairs, &c., are of a splendid white figured satin of British manufacture; the carpeting is also the finest our domestic frames could supply, and so designed as to blend harmoniously with the general style of the apartment. Altogether, this is a most splendidly appointed apartment; but the excellent taste displayed here can scarcely be imagined by those who have seen only the tawdry and fade "state beds" in our palaces and olden "show-houses." The counterpane is of white satin, embroidered with pink roses.

THE STATE BED,

TRIUMPHAL ARCH, MELTON MOWBRAY.

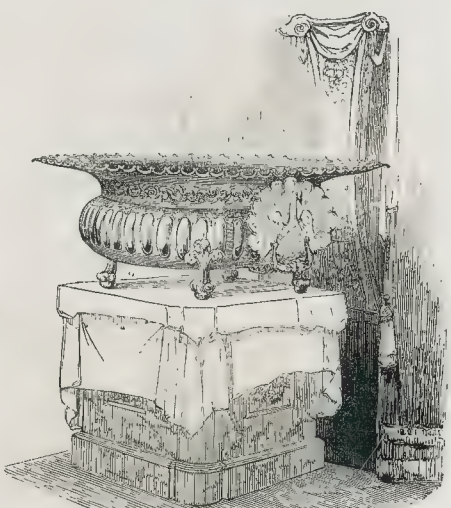
Continued on page 396.)

THE STATE BED, BELVOIR CASTLE.



THE SILVER CISTERN, BELVIOR CASTLE.

CHESS.

Solution to problem No. 46.

WHITE.	BLACK.
1. R to K R 8th	K moves
2. Q to Q Kt 7th ch	K moves
3. R to K 8th ch	K moves
4. R to K sq	K moves
5. Q to Q Kt sq	K moves
6. Q to K B 5th ch	K moves
7. Q to K B 2nd	K takes P
8. R to K B sq	K moves
9. P mates

THE GREAT CHESS MATCH AT PARIS

Subjoined will be found the moves of the second game of the match between Mr. Staunton and M. St. Amant. The former gentleman had the move and played the white. The game will be found particularly worthy of study, as an example of vigorous and well-combined attack, and of the great importance of lure in defending a position. The victory on this occasion also remains with the English champion:—

Mr. S.	M. St. A.	Mr. S.	M. St. A.
1. Q P two	Q B P two	17. Q Kt to K 4th	K R to K B sq
2. Q Q P one	K B P two	18. R one	R takes R ch
3. K Kt to B 3rd	Q P one	19. Kt takes Q P ch	K to Q sq
4. Q Kt to B 3rd	K Kt to B 3rd	20. R takes Kt	Q takes Kt
5. Q B to K t 5th	K P two	21. R to K 3rd	K to Q B 2nd (f)
6. K P two	Q R P one (a)	22. R to Q Kt 3rd	Q R P one (g)
7. K P takes P	Q B takes P	23. Kt to K B 3rd (g)	Kt to K B 3rd
8. K Kt to K 4th	Q B to place (b)	24. Q B P two	Q Kt P one
9. K B to Q 3rd	K Kt P one	25. Kt to K 5th	Q R P one
10. Castles	K B to K 2nd	26. B to Q B 2nd (r)	Q R P one
11. h B P two	Q H P one	27. Kt to K B 7th	Q to Q B 4th
12. K B takes P	K P takes K B P	28. Q to K B 6th ch	K to Q Kt 2nd
13. K R takes P	Q Kt to Q 2nd	29. Q R P two (i)	Kt to K R 4th
14. Q to her 4th (d)	Q Kt to K 4th	30. Kt to Q 8th ch	K to R 3rd
15. Q R to K sq (e)	K Kt to Q 2nd	31. P takes Q	Kt takes Q
16. Q B takes B	Q takes B	32. R takes Q R P	and mates (k)

(a) It would be better to take K P, as by his adversary's taking the Pawn with it, next move Black loses two moves in bringing out his Q B, and carrying it home again.

(b) The Bishop cannot stop on his Q 2nd, as he would then expose his Kt from coming out. He therefore returns to his square, and from the extreme vigour of the attack, never has an opportunity of moving for the rest of the game. In fact, the Q B and Q R are completely useless to the Black to the end.

(c) This Pawn is sacrificed to draw the B from his line of attack.

(d) An excellent move, and long great strength to the attack.

(e) The attack is now irresistible.

(f) The poor King tries to creep to a place of refuge.

(g) Black, seeing the game all but gone, endeavours to try a diversion, by an attack on his side, and, accordingly, makes a dash with his Pawn.

(h) It will be subsequently perceived that the bringing up of this piece is essential to the mate.

(i) The B should have retired, even if not attacked, to allow the Q Kt P to be moved forward.

(j) If the Q takes this Pawn, White will force the King to his Q R 3rd, and give check with Knight to K and Q together from Black Queen's square, as will be seen hereafter.

(k) This game is highly creditable to Mr Staunton's powers of combination. Had Black at the 6th move taken the King's Pawn, brought out the King's Bishop, and castled, he would have had an excellent game, but not anticipating the strength of the attack, he let the opportunity pass, and never had a moment's peace to the end of the setting. M. Saint Amant fought most gallantly, but the fact of two principal pieces being tied up, and altogether out of play, was alone sufficient to ensure the defeat. He remained during the play of Sindbad the Sailor moving about with the Old Man of the Sea always on his shoulders.

The third game, which we give below, remained undecided after lasting seven hours. After some very admirable play, Mr. Staunton proposed to M. Saint Amant to make it a draw, which was consented to. The latter gentleman had the move, and played the black:—

M St A.	Mr. S.	M. St. A.	Mr. S.
1. K P two	Q B P two	30. P takes P	Q takes P
2. K B P two	K P one	31. K B P one	K P takes P
3. K Kt to B 3rd	Q Kt to B 3rd	32. P takes P	P takes P
4. Q B P one	Q P two	33. Q B to his sq	Q to her h 8th (r
5. K P one	Q B to Q 3rd	34. K to Kt 2nd	Kt to his 3rd sq
6. Q Kt to Q B 3rd	K Kt to K 2nd	35. Kt to B 3rd sq	Kt to K R 5th ch
7. Q Kt to Q B 2nd	K Kt to his 3rd sq	36. Kt takes Kt	Q takes Kt
8. Q P two	Q R to B sq. (a)	37. K B takes P	B takes B
9. Q B P one	K B to K 2nd	38. Q takes B	Q takes P
10. K B to Q 3rd	Castles	39. B to K Kt 5th	Q to her Kt 7th ch
11. Castles	K B P two (b)	40. K to his R sq	Q to her R 8th ch
12. Q K P one	Q B P takes P	41. K to Kt 2nd	Q to her R 7th ch
13. Q Kt takes P	Kt takes Kt	42. K to his R sq	Q takes P
14. P takes Kt	Q to her Kt 3rd	43. B to his 6th ch	B takes B
15. K Kt P one	Q R to K 3rd	44. Q takes B ch	K to his sq
16. Q to K 2nd	K R to Q B sq	45. Q to K Kt 5th ch	K to B 2nd
17. Q B to K 3rd	Q B to K sq	46. Q to K R 6th ch	K to his sq
18. K Kt P one	Q B to K Kt 2nd	47. Q to her R 6th ch	Q to K 2nd
19. P takes P (c)	Kt to K B sq	48. Q to K R 6th ch	Q to Q 2nd
20. K to his Kt 2nd	K Kt P one	49. Q takes P ch	K to Q sq
21. Q R to Q B sq	Q takes R	50. Q to K Kt 8th ch	K to Q 2nd
22. R takes R	R takes R	51. Q to her Kt 4th ch	K to Q 3rd
23. B takes R	Q to her sq	52. Q to her R 3rd ch	K to Q B 3rd
24. K to his R P one	Q to her R 3rd	53. Q to her R 3rd ch	K to Q B 3rd
25. Q to K Kt 2nd	Q B to Q 2nd	54. Q to her B 4th ch	Q to her B 4th
26. Q B to K 3rd	K to R sq	55. Q to her K 6th ch	K to Q B 2nd
27. Kt to B 3rd	Q to her Kt 3rd	56. Q to K B 7th ch	K to Q B 3rd
28. Q to her B 2nd	K to Kt 2nd	57. Q to her K 6th ch	K to Q B 2nd
29. Q Kt P two (d)	Q R P one	58. Q to K B 7th ch	Drawn (s)

(a) This move is well played. When the White shall have made the exchange of his Q B P the Rook will enter the adversary's game.

(b) It would, perhaps, be better to move this Pawn only one square

(c) The object of the Black, in thus uncovering his King, appears to be to make an attack on his opponent's King. It seems a hazardous proceeding.

(d) This move has the disadvantage of allowing the opposite party's Queen to enter his game, should a favourable opportunity present itself.

(e) A weak move, because exceedingly doubtful in its results. Had the Pawn been pushed on, and check discovered, it is demonstrable that White must have won the game.

(f) Mr. Staunton here proposed to draw the game, which his adversary agreed to. It must be allowed that M. Saint Amant played the latter part of the game with great ability. Lavish contrivance with a Queen and Pawn to make a drawn game against a Queen and three Pawns. It may be asked if Mr. Staunton would not have done better to sacrifice one Pawn and push on the other to Queen; but, taking into consideration that his opponent's Pawn was farther advanced, and that the issue of the attempt was exceedingly doubtful, we think that he acted prudently in not making the attempt NOTTINGHAM CHESS CLUB.—This spirited club gave an assembly for dancing, chess, and cards, to their friends, on Thursday, Dec. 7, at the Assembly Rooms, Low Pavement. Dancing commenced at nine o'clock. The amusements were kept up with great spirit, and the company separated at a late hour, having spent a most delightful evening.

THE THEATRES.

HAYMARKET.

Mr. T. Reid, the leader of the orchestra and composer to this theatre, and, moreover, a highly clever but unobtrusive artist, took his benefit on Wednesday evening, and, however well attended, could not be better than we would wish it. It is an oasis in the desert to see in these days a Vaudeville quite so decently like "The Provoked Husband," and see it acted with such spirit. It is a "green spot on memory's waste." Mrs. Nisbett as Lady Townly was extremely piquante, and Miss Julia Bennett as the rompish Jenny was very effective without being coarse. We are sure, would attract some lovers of the real drama, if repeated.

BRAHAM'S CONCERTS.

There has been no end to these concerts either in town or country, and we heartily wish that it will be a long time yet before such a sad termination may take place, as must unequivocally deprive us of the greatest singer, "take him for all in all," that any country has ever produced. We have formerly paid our small tribute of praise to this great artiste, both as composer and vocalist—we now speak of him as a veteran of an art in which no recruit can vie with him, and which he will command to the day of his death. Proud depend! be that finale, Braham. Mr. Hamilton Braham, has extraordinary physical powers, but his style is as yet raw and inexperienced. It is well known that parents cannot teach their children, or else Mr. Hamilton Braham would have been (if instructed by his father), the finest barytone singer in the world. Mr. Charles Braham is rapidly improving. Some of the duets on Tuesday last, with the sire of song, were charmingly sung.

What a treat it would be to hear Braham again in a round of those characters with which, by the joint music of his mind and voice, he rendered so delightful!

NATIONAL SPORTS.

Sus enique voluptas

We have had a new division of the year since autumn—a sort of hyemal spring, in which those rural engagements and pleasures that are dependent on the weather are as capable of pursuit and enjoyment as when "the painted populace" were abroad. Nevertheless, the training stables have made no sign, nor is it possible a single trial will come off on this side Christmas in any racing establishment of account. The past week was a high festival of Diana—such huntings as those in the vale of Belvoir being of themselves their own parallels. Their record shall live for ever—the only cause for regret in the brilliant narrative being that portion of it which relates to the death of the age. It is to be lamented their historian hands down to posterity the Duke of Wellington as setting about them "in white leather smalls." Among the flower of English chivalry none went better—he assures us—than the Prince Consort. "Even he was to be seen—may it mend, if possible," vires acquirit eundo." Talking of pace naturally brings us to Steeple-chasing: a sport in which there has not been much doing lately. Neither are its prospects good, at least till the 29th, when the medical students—piped and quadruped—have an encounter at Leatherhead. This promises well: the pharmacopolists of the present age are the most adventurous youths of their generation, and with bone-setters and knackers for its dramatis personæ, if a steeple-chase don't come off with éclat, we should like to know what combination of circumstances might ensure it success.

The great feature with the cultivators of pace, however, has been in the matter of the long tails. Some of the best coursing meetings in the annals of the Sporting Magazine have been on the carpet—an appropriate figure of speech. The Champion, at Newmarket, was an eminently sporting affair—better running ground there is not in England—neither better hares nor dogs to try their mettle. The destruction of that article of food for powder was prodigious, however, the "Links," adjoining Mr. Crockford's farm, was found a great discouragement to the game; your hare never goes in earnest unless when she has a point where to all her hopes and, consequently, her nerves she goes carry her. A considerable crowd of people graced the popularity with the patrons of coursing was passed at this meeting. It was to the effect that in future the system of committees to decide whether the courses should stand or not, should be abolished, and all the management left to the judge. No doubt this will become the general practice at all public runnings with greyhounds.

In pedestrianism there was a meritorious display recently, the more valuable because the actor was one of those whose business it is to set examples of sobriety and manliness. Lord Langford (with some of Sir Hercules' blood in him), a young Irishman in the 55th Foot, walked from Newbridge Barracks to the Castle of Dublin, about 27½ English miles, in 7½ hours, in a soldier's full marching order, that is, to say carrying impedimenta weighing 4st 2lb. He won his match with ease, over a terrible rough road—a fact worthy the profession whereof he has proved himself so active a member. Shooting being a solitary (vice, we had almost said) amusement, its records are rarely written and if written would be of small interest. The season is unpropitious to the lovers of gladiatorial sports—nevertheless, they have occasionally a treat in the marshes of Essex, just now the locality honoured by the especial patronage of "Captain Fancy." The last day there "with a kill," was Tuesday the 5th inst. On the occasion two cavaliers from the neighbourhood of Somers-town, had a joust, of which one George Gray got the worst, being shin "in a trench." The practice now is to make it Gravesend," the rendezvous of the ring and probably a fitter place could not be chosen. In gratitude for the honour thus conferred on their town, the corporation and inhabitants generally should provide a cemetery for the exclusive use of those champions of manhood who fall in the noble effort to uphold the character of their country's courage. Snug lying might be provided for them in the crown lands east of the town, which might be laid out on the plan of Rosherville Gardens—the entrance gates bearing a posy thus—

Sleep well—in glory a sense your lives were just -
Yo heroes—who in glory's cause were "grassed."

Such was about the amount of fun available since our last bulletin—save the quotations from Tattersall's—which, however, will turn out no fun to the takers.

THE DERBY.—18 to 1 agst Col. Peel's lot; 16 to 1 agst Mr. Forth's lot; 7 to 1 agst Ratter; 7 to 1 agst Ugly Buck; 18 to 1 agst Louisiana; 20 to 1 agst Tantalus Squire; 33 to 1 agst Mr. A. Wood's Running Rein, 35 to 1 agst Camp; agst 35 to 1 agst Folgh-a-Ballagh, 40 to 1 agst Mr. Thornhill's colt; 40 to 1 agst Cockamaroo; 50 to 1 agst Leander; 50 to 1 agst Sandlebow; 1000 to 1 agst King of the Gipsies; 2000 to 20 agst Red Rover, 2000 to 30 agst Serpent; 300 to 100 agst the Ugly Buck and Ratter.

FRAGE IN HIGH LIFE.—PRINCE ALBERT'S HARRIERS.—During the past week much inquiry has been made among the sporting circles of the neighbourhood of Windsor relative to the appearance of a pack of hounds in the park, which it was stated, that when Prince Albert, accompanied by the Duc de Nemours, was hunting with his harriers in the neighbourhood of Stanton (her Majesty and the Duchess of Kent being present) a sporting gentleman, to see the sport), Mr. Bulkeley (brother to Captain Bulkeley, of the Life Guards), the lord of the manor, made his appearance, and, addressing Mr. Quarton, the Prince's huntsman, informed him of his coming, and the same time, that he rented the same, and would not allow any one to trespass thereon. The explanation now given is, that Mr. Bulkeley had been forced to this procedure, not from any disrespect to Prince Albert, but in consequence of that act of sportsmanship being paid him which has been paid to other sporting gentlemen, in informing them of the intention to hunt on their manors, as he and his friends were thereby deprived of joining in the sport.

EXTRAORDINARY FEAT AT PEDESTRIANISM.—An extraordinary feat of this kind came off on Thursday, the 7th instant, and is the more remarkable from the rank of the noble performer. The match was made for a wager of 5 guineas —Lord Langford, an officer of the 55th depot, stationed at Newbridge, in Ireland, backed himself to walk from Newbridge Barracks to the Castle of Dublin, (his soldier's full marching order, with musket, &c., on his back) carrying 4 stone 2 lb. in the space of 7½ hours. He started from Newbridge at a quarter past nine o'clock, and succeeded in performing his arduous undertaking in 20 minutes less than the prescribed time. The distance is 31 Irish miles; and, considering the state of the roads, the weight his lordship carried, and his youth, we think it is a feat unexampled in pedestrian performances. Large wagers were pending on the result. We understand his lordship is a winner to a considerable amount. The crowds that accompanied his lordship were immense, and the cheering with which he was greeted on winning was tremendous.

THE SQUIRE AND HIS HOUNDS IN HAMPSHIRE.—One of the longest and severest runs this season with the royal stag hounds took place on Monday last, the fixture having been appointed at Winkfield row, about nine or four miles from Ascot, at 8 o'clock. The field consisted of about one hundred, including Lord William Beresford, and several officers of the 1st Life Guards. Captain Vyse, Messrs. Wortley, Stisfield, &c. The deer, Sulky, a gallant animal, after having afforded some splendid runs during the two past seasons, was turned out near Wick old church, and went away in beautiful style, through Miss Farrand's park, shaping his course to Winkfield row on to the Kennel-piece, so famous as a cover, then bearing away for Mr. Taylor's plantations near Swinley, crossed the Bagshot road, by the Tower hill, into the great plantations, to His Royal Highness Prince Albert's farm at Ralphy. Then away across the plantations to the Jolly Farmer, on the Bagshot road, by Sir Blackwater, skirting the village, where he doubled to the left, making for Farnborough and Cove, and then bore away by the Fleet-pond for Elvetham, near Hartfield-bridge, in Hampshire, into Dogmersfield park (three miles below Hartley-row), the seat of Lady Mildmay, where the gallant stag, after going over between thirty and forty miles of heavy country, a tremendous pace, was literally dead beat and died before the pack and the select few whose horses managed to continue the chase had got up. Only fifteen (including Mr. C. Davis, the hunts man, and the whips) were up at the last. The run occupied a little more than three hours. The distance from point to point, as the crow flies, was upwards of twenty miles; but from the doublings, headings, and diversions, the actual ground gone over, first and last, could not have been much less than forty miles.

Wednesday last was a bye day with her Majesty's Stag Hounds. The meet was at Hillingdon, where there was a large field of sportsmen. The noted deer Headley was uncarted at Pole Hill, and made for the more open country to Iver Heath, where it was taken after a tremendous run of two hours and three-quarters, very few being in at the take.

METROPOLITAN DESTITUTION.

To the Editor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

Permit me to thank you for your powerful advocacy of the cause of the destitute poor of this metropolis.

You will, doubtless, be glad to know what progress the committee, appointed at the public meeting on the 20th ult., have made; and I have great pleasure in stating that they have joined the committee of the City Asylum, which already has invested capital of £10,000, so that in a few days houses will be opened in various parts of the metropolis, to afford a nightly shelter and food to all those whose destitute condition compels them to request such aid.

I am confident that such asylums will receive the support of all charitable individuals; and in addition to this perfected scheme a committee is appointed to report on a plan by which destitution may be averted, through timely pecuniary assistance.

I consider this letter private. You will, however, convey to the public so much of its contents as may be sufficient to keep up the interest of the subject until the report of the committee is ready for advertising.

I am, Sir, faithfully yours, THOMAS ARBER.

29, Brook-street, Grosvenor-square, Dec. 6th, 1843.

A deaf and dumb man, named Charles Stephens, was apprehended last week at Tor Point on a charge of highway robbery. The accused admitted his guilt and pleaded drunkenness in extenuation, but he was fully committed for trial

ASSIZE INTELLIGENCE.

HOME CIRCUIT

CHELMSFORD

The commission for the county of Essex was opened on Saturday, by Mr. Justice Erskine. The calendar contained the names of thirty prisoners, some of them being charged with offences of a very serious character. The criminal court was opened on Monday, at half-past ten o'clock, for the despatch of business.

Elizabeth Hammond, 48, a married woman, was indicted for the wilful murder of her infant child, three weeks old, by nearly severing its head from the body with a razor.—The prisoner, who appeared in a very dejected and miserable condition, was allowed to sit during the trial.—Mr. Ryland, who conducted the prosecution, called a number of witnesses, who deposed to the truth of the facts alleged against the prisoner. Mr. Justice Erskine having summed up, the jury returned a verdict, finding the prisoner Not Guilty, on the ground of insanity The court gave directions that the prisoner should be kept in safe custody until her Majesty's pleasure should be made known respecting her.

William Osborne, aged 30, a shoemaker, was charged upon a capital indictment with having feloniously shot at and wounded his wife, Anne Osborne, with the intent to murder her. In other counts the prisoner was also said to be to maim and disable the prosecutrix, or to do her some grievous bodily harm.—Mr. Rodwell conducted the prosecution. It appeared in evidence that the prisoner and prosecutrix were married in January of the present year, and very soon afterwards differences arose between them, and they eventually separated, and the prosecutrix got her living by working for a tailor at Colchester, at which town both parties resided. After the separation took place the prisoner was very desirous that his wife should come to live with him again, and he wrote several letters to her, entreating her to do so, but she always refused. The prisoner had been observed loitering about the shop where his wife was employed on several occasions, and on the 10th of July, when she left work, accompanied by two other women, he followed her and wished her to stop, saying that he desired to speak to her. She refused, and threatened to inform the police with him if he persisted in annoying her. The prisoner, upon this, drew a pistol from his pocket, and discharged it at the upper part of the person of his wife, and the ball lodged in her neck, and has not yet been extracted. At the moment the prisoner fired the pistol he ran off, but was pursued and taken into custody, and on his being searched, the pistol with which he had shot his wife, and also some gunpowder and bullets, were found in his possession.—The jury found the prisoner Guilty of wounding the prosecutrix with intent to do her grievous bodily harm; and Mr. Justice Erskine sentenced him to be transported for life.

OXFORD CIRCUIT.

OXFORD.

Mr. Baron Rolfe arrived on Saturday last, and opened the commission on the evening of that day. His lordship attended divine service at St. Mary's Church upon which occasion the assize sermon was delivered by the Rev. J. Stoddart, of St. John's College. At ten o'clock on Monday morning the learned judge entered the Crown Court, and charged the grand jury.

Thomas Wilkinson, aged 23, Harding Price, 19, and William Brangstead, 18, were indicted for having, in company, alleged to have been actuated on the enemies of Mr. Payne, at Chipping hurst, in the parish of Cuddesdon, on the 6th of October last. In their defence the prisoners each made a different statement, to no part of which, however, did the jury feel disposed to attach credit, as they immediately convicted the trio, who were sentenced to eighteen months imprisonment, with hard labour.

Two lads of the name of Cropper, the eldest only 14 years of age, were placed at the bar charged with having committed a burglary in a house in the High street, Oxford, in the occupation of Mr. Hitchcock, a druggist. The eldest boy, it appeared, effected an entrance by cutting a pane of glass out of a back stanchion window, and then assisted the younger prisoner in following him; both were detected upon the premises and secured. They were convicted, and a previous conviction for felony having been proved against the younger, he, as well as his brother, was sentenced to transportation for ten years.

MIDLAND CIRCUIT.

NEWPORT.

The commission for this county was opened at the early hour of nine on Monday morning, before Mr. Baron Parke, who, in addressing the grand jury, said he was truly sensible that the gentlemen of the grand inquest might be put to some degree of inconvenience by being called upon to meet at a time certainly unusual, but he felt they would cheerfully abide by such inconveniences if they did but feel they were rendering public justice

Benjamin Hoast, aged 26, was charged with having, at Birmingham, on the 11th of September, corruptly and feloniously received from one Thomas Marshall certain moneys under pretence that he would help the said Thomas Marshall to the recovery of a stolen watch, and bring the offenders to justice, he not having done the same. The prisoner was indicted under the statute of 7 and 8 George 4, c. 29, s. 58, which enacts "That whosoever shall corruptly take any money or reward, directly or indirectly, under pretence or upon account of helping any person to any chattel, money, or valuable security, or other property whatsoever, which shall by any felony or misdemeanour have been stolen, taken, obtained, or converted as aforesaid, shall (unless he cause the offender to be apprehended and brought to trial for the same) be guilty of felony." There was another count in the above, 4th Geo. I., which, it appears, is under which it had been held that it was an offence under 4th Geo. I., chap. 11 (since repealed) to take money under pretence of helping a man to goods stolen from him. Evidence of the prosecution having been given, the jury found the prisoner "Guilty," and the prisoner was sentenced to six months' imprisonment and hard labour, the judge observing, he very likely was not at the time aware of the serious offence he was committing

WESTERN CIRCUIT.

Mr. Justice Cresswell arrived at Exeter on Saturday last, and attended divine service. A very unpardonable blunder has been committed with reference to the commission for this city, which, after all that has been said about it, has been so prepared as not to include within its operation the city of Exeter, which, of all others, stands most in need of it. The consequence is, that we have given great dissatisfaction to all parties. Very few magistrates have attended, so few that the Learned Judge has complained of it, saying, he should like to have seen a little more respect paid to her Majesty's Commission.

After a few cases of petty larceny had been tried on Monday,

Thomas Barrymore Palmer was then arraigned, and charged with horse steal ing.—The prisoner pleaded not guilty, but contended that he was not prepared to take his trial, as he had had no time to get his witnesses. He had been given to understand, that the assizes were not to be held till the 30th of this month, and he had only heard of the 11th as the day on the last of the month. He had immediately sent for his witnesses, but could not procure them, as they had left their homes for a short time.—His lordship told the prisoner, he must have an affidavit of these facts, or he could not attend to them.—The affidavit was prepared, and the trial postponed to the next assize.

This done there was no more business to go on with, the parties not having given information for their bills; no doubt, from a mistaken notion that business would not commence till next day

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.

(Before the Recorder.)

The second session of the present mayoralty was opened on Monday morning, by the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, the Recorder, the Sheriffs, Under Sheriffs, &c. The grand jury, having been sworn, were charged by the Recorder His lordship made a few general observations as to the nature of their duties, and dismissed them to their rooms.

James Maunton, aged 18, was indicted for wilful and corrupt perjury. The Recorder summed up the evidence, and the jury, after some consideration, acquitted the prisoner.—His lordship told the Recorder, that they acquitted he of the wilful and corrupt perjury, but that they had no doubt of the total falsehood of her deposition. They merely gave their verdict on the ground that she acted under the influence of a confused mind.

NEW COURT.

[Before the Common Sergeant, Alderman Sir G. Carroll, J. Hooper, &c.]

Two well-dressed young men, named Edward Moore, described as a job master, and Henry Clare, a dealer, were indicted for stealing a purse, containing six shillings, and three gold Danish ducats, the property of Martha Vartes, from her person in the Strand.—Mr. Bodkin defended Clare, and Mr. Ballantine Moore The prosecutrix, an old lady, stated that she lives in Edmund-square, Kensington, and on the day of the month she was riding in an omnibus. When near Temple bar she was told she had been robbed, and on searching her pocket she found it had been cut in two places, and her money taken out. The property was here produced and the old lady said she had left the Danish coins pay for cakes, and knew them right well Carbonelle Clark stated that he is part proprietor of an omnibus from Pimlico to Blackwall. On the 2nd inst., the prisoner Moore got into the "bus," and soon after Clare and a lady got in. Moore, who wore a cloak, was next to the prosecutrix. He saw him hand more towards Clare, and they got out. Witness gave information, and the prisoners were pursued and taken By Mr Clarkson.—Five pounds had been awarded to witness for the active part he took in the business. Messrs. Clarkson and Ballantine addressed the court for the respective prisoners. The latter gentleman contended that Clare was a stranger to the other prisoner, and was charged wrongfully. A respectable witness was examined, who proved the character of Clare. Mr. Clarkson addressed the jury on behalf of Moore. The Common Sergeant summed up rather longer than he is wont, and said he thought there could be no doubt in respect of Moore. The jury would then say whether the other prisoner was guilty. The jury consulted for a short time, and then returned a verdict of "Guilty" against both prisoners. The Common Sergeant sentenced the prisoners to to transported for 10 years

George Wilkins and Richard Davis, persons of respectable appearance were indicted for stealing, on the 3rd of October last, a £5 Bank of England note and three sovereigns, the property of Edward Sharp. Mr. Wilkins appeared for Wilkins, and Mr. Ballantine for Davis, the prosecutor, on being sworn, stated that he is a Swede, and has spent all his life in sailing between Stockholm and London. On the day in question he was going from Shadwell to the Admiralty, and he met the prisoner Wilkins near Temple-bar. They entered into conversation, and witness (though a stranger to him) was induced to say where he was going. They went into a public-house in the Strand, and there met Davis, who appeared to be a stranger to Wilkins. The conversation turned upon money matters, and Davis said, that he had lately had £700 left to him by an uncle, and had been very nearly done out of it. He also said that he had a fortune of £14,000 He then asked Wilkins and witness if they had any money about them. Wilkins replied in the affirmative, and witness said, he had a £5 note and three sovereigns in his trousers pocket at Shadwell. Davis then said, if they would produce such a sum, he would give them £5. They then went about from place to place, and at last stopped at a house at Whitechapel, and witness went and fetched his note and cash. Wilkins first showed his £5 note, and Davis gave him another. Witness then produced his money, and we dealed by Davis to run into a caravan bag, which he gave to him. Witness did so, and Davistook it, and put a £5 note into it. Witness took up the bag, supposing it to be the one containing his money, and went away; and, after going a short distance from the house, he drew out the bag, to see if the note given to him was a good one, when he found that the bag contained only two pieces of blank tissue paper, and a three-halfpence Watch-wire run loose, and sent to the landlord, that he had been done. The two prisoners had gone when he returned. Witness was positive as to their identity.—Other witnesses having corroborated this evidence, the jury returned a verdict of "Guilty" against Wilkins, and acquitted Davis, in consequence of the uncertainty as to his person on the part of the witnesses.—The Common Sergeant then sentenced the prisoner to be transported for the term of ten years.

On Wednesday, William Jones, 20, Sarah Chapman, 20, and Mary Ann Jones (her daughter) 16, were indicted for stealing, on Saturday last, divers articles of linen and muslin apparel, the properties of G. Ryan and J. Simpson. Both the female prisoners pleaded guilty at the opening of the Court. When they were recalled to the bar at noon, the Common-Sergeant said he had carefully looked over the depositions, and could not find a trace of evidence against Jones. He wished to know if any of the witnesses could identify the girl as the party to the theft. The prosecutors and three or four pawnbrokers answered in the negative. They only knew the females as passed up in the transaction; he was seen in their company. Common-Sergeant—Why, I am sorry you pleaded guilty, for I cannot see why he is sent here. His lordship told the Jury that there was no case, and they were bound to acquit the male prisoner. Verdict, "Not Guilty." He then sentenced Sarah Chapman (the elder to 12 months' hard labour, and Jones to six months in the same gaol.

BURGLARY.—William Biggs, aged 37, coachman, Frederick Barnett, aged 21, sompuncker, Joseph Cordwell, aged 20, labourer, and Mary Vitteridge, aged 22, spinster, were indicted. B ggs, Barnett, and Cordwell, for a burglary in the dwelling-house of George Veale, and stealing an umbrella, two pairs of boots, a tablecloth, and a comforter, his property, and two waistcoats, the property of William Hall; and Vitteridge for feloniously receiving the same, well knowing them to have been stolen. Mr. William, assisted by Mr. E. Platt, conducted the prosecution. The prisoners Barnett was defended by Mr. Ballantine. The other prisoners were undefended by counsel. It appeared from the evidence that the house of the prosecutor, the Montague Arms public-house, was broken and entered through a skylight during the night of the 10th of November, and the articles named in the indictment stolen. To connect the prisoners with the robbery, a man named Ross was produced. He was an accomplice, and had made information against the prisoners in this case, and against some other persons in some other robberies. He deposed that all the male prisoners were connected with himself in the burglary, and the female had received the property with full knowledge of the manner in which they had been obtained. His evidence, however, was corroborated only with regard to Biggs and the female, the articles having been found in the possession of Vitteridge, and Biggs and she having been with Ross, who he asserted was the actual burglar. The jury found Biggs and Vitteridge guilty, and acquitted the other prisoners. Evidence was then given of a previous conviction against Biggs for felony, for which he had undergone sentence of eight months imprisonment, with hard labour. Mr. Baron Alderson then addressed the prisoners, and sentenced Biggs to transportation for life, and Vitteridge to transportation for seven years. His lordship also directed that having been acquitted, Barnett and Cordwell, to be placed at the bar, and admonished them as to their future conduct, desiring them to take warning by the extremely narrow escape they had just experienced, and commenting upon the fact which was known to the court, that they had been both convicted of felony previously. They were then discharged.

George Jones, aged 23, Charles Davis, his brother, aged 21, and Eliza Trigg, spinster, aged 33, were indicted for stealing, in the month of October last, an immense quantity of furniture and certain deeds, papers, and writings, formerly the property of Captain Livingston, deceased, but stated to be the property of Mr. Samuel Cooke, Esq.; secondly, of his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury; and, in the third count, the property of "The Ordinary." Captain Livingston having died intestate. The trial was put off from last session, and the value of the property was alleged to be £600 and upwards. The trial commenced at noon and lasted until five o'clock. Messrs. Clarkson and Cormack defended the prisoners. It will be remembered that the female prisoner was in attendance on Captain Livingston at the time of his death, alleged that the deceased had bequeathed the entire of the furniture and everything in the house to Charles Davis. Several witnesses for the defence were called to support this allegation, but the evidence was equivocating and contradictory. The jury immediately pronounced Charles Davis and Eliza Trigg "guilty," and "acquitted" George. The Common Sergeant sentenced them up for 12 months each, and this was a most important prosecution, and it was the bounden duty of the court to throw the mantle of protection over the property of persons dying intestate, and at the same time let servants and persons in their house that they must not to stamp authority, and that they must abhield themselves by wilful and corrupt perjury. The sentence of the court was, that they be transported beyond the seas for seven years.

POLICE.

BOW STREET.—A man, named Robinson, was brought up, on Thursday, for the second time, charged with having obtained, till Thursday next, on several charges of forgery. His method was to go to private individuals, and ask for charitable bequests from various friends and tradesmen in the neighbourhood. After receiving the money, he went into the next shop he had dealt at before, and bought some trifling article, to deceive those who had paid the forged cheques. It is thought upwards of fifty cases will be found against him, as six or seven have been found since the last examination.

UNION-HALL.—The whole of Wednesday morning was occupied by Mr. Cottingham in hearing charges of picking pockets during the dense fog that prevailed over the metropolis the previous day. The greater part of the cases, and their evidence against the prisoners, who were chiefly young lads, stated that the offence of picking pockets was as frequent between London-bridge and St George's-in-the-East, that the vans (hackney coaches) usually employed were compelled to walk along with their hands in their pockets. The darkness in which the town was enveloped the preceding day gave the light-fingered gentry a general opportunity of following their vocations unobserved; and many accounts of that which was verified by the number of charges of that description entered on the police sheets. The prisoners, against whom the offence was proved, were all committed.

The prisoners attended, were committed for trial; and the remanded of the prisoners were summarily convicted and sentenced to a month's imprisonment each.

John Dunstan and William Shepherd, the drivers of two rival Minerva omnibuses, were charged with racing against each other, to the danger of the public.

Mr. Hewett, a gentleman residing at Cheltenham, came forward and from his account it appeared that he was an outside passenger on one of the omnibuses, and that when they got abreast of one another they whipped their horses, and endeavoured to see to get by one another. They drove about in a reckless pace, quite regardless of the mischief they might have occasioned; and it was only astonishing that some accident had not happened before they eventually pulled up —The magistrate inflicted penalties of 40s each on the defendants.

CHARITY FOR THE BLIND.—A general court of the governors of this charity established 1791, for granting pensions to blind persons, being upwards of sixty years of age, was held on Wednesday, at the institution, adjoining Hall, Doctors' Commons, Mr. Drew, one of the governors, presiding, when twenty-one permanent pensioners and three supernumeraries were elected on to the fund.

DISTRESS IN THE METROPOLIS.—Several meetings have been held at Lothbury-house in the course of the last few days, for the purpose of maturing some comprehensive plan for relieving the destitute poor of the metropolis, and at the same time improving their moral and social condition. Numerous meetings have been attended by several noblemen and gentlemen and incumbents of metropolitan parishes; and after much deliberation it has been resolved to form "a voluntary association for the relief of the poor and for the improvement of the condition of the poor in the metropolis by means of parochial and district visitors." The Lord Bishop of London will be president of the committee, and his secretary, Mr. Tyler, will be honorary secretary. The whole of the funds should be directly applied to the relief of the indigent after all proper inquiries have been made by gratuitous visitors. The rules and regulations will shortly be announced to the public.

LICENSED VICTUALLERS' PROTECTION SOCIETY.—On Wednesday last the tenth annual meeting of this society took place at the Crown and Anchor Tavern, for the purpose of receiving the report of the committee, to elect new members, and on other business. A large number of the trade, who take an active part in its welfare, attended on the occasion. Mr. Hook, the chairman of the society, presided. From the report and balance sheet read by Mr. Smith, the secretary, it appeared that, including the balance in hand from last year, and the donations and subscriptions for the present year, the income of the society amounted to £1889 10s. 7d.; the disbursements for the year ending the 31st ult. 1843, £1718 3s. 7d., balance in favour of the society of £177 11s. 0d. This announcement was received with much applause.

SUNDAY INCENDIARISM AT CAMBERWELL.—On Thursday morning, about one o'clock, an extensive fire took place on the premises of Messrs. Hey wood and Co., floor-cloth manufacturers, Albany-road, Camberwell. It appears that a policeman, No. 101, of the R division, was on duty near the premises at the isolated one, when he discovered flames issuing from the boiling room. By half-past one o'clock the West of England Company's engines, with those from Waterloo-road, Southwark Bridge-road, and Kent-street, arrived, but the interval had unfortunately took place with regard to a supply of water, which was the occasion of the destruction of the whole of the premises, which was almost entirely consumed. The property is insured in the Sun Fire Office to the amount of £2,000.

SUDDEN DEATH IN THE CITY AT CAMBERWELL.—On Thursday morning, about one o'clock, an extensive fire took place on the premises of Messrs. Heywood and Co., floor-cloth manufacturers, Albany-road, Camberwell. It appears that a policeman, No. 101, of the R division, was on duty near the premises at the isolated one, when he discovered flames issuing from the boiling room. By half-past one o'clock the West of England Company's engines, with those from Waterloo-road, Southwark Bridge-road, and Kent-street, arrived, but the interval had unfortunately took place with regard to a supply of water, which was the occasion of the destruction of the whole of the premises, which was almost entirely consumed. The property is insured in the Sun Fire Office to the amount of £2,000.

EPITOME OF NEWS.

An epidemic disease, somewhat similar to the influenza, is very prevalent in many parts of Herefordshire. To old and infirm persons, and those of weakly constitution, it has in many instances proved fatal.

We are informed, from authority, that the Prickley Hall estate has been bought for W. Alsum, jun., Esq., the member for Leeds, who is still absent on his tour to America. The purchase money was £93,000.

A Canadian paper mentions the exhibition at the great annual fair of the American Institute in New York, of a "life-preserving coffin," the invention of Mr. Elsenbrant, of Baltimore. The object is to prevent the terrible burial of persons a person alive; and for this purpose the coffin is fitted with springs and levers inside, which on the slightest motion of the person within, will instantly throw up the coffin lid

The number of beggars in Belgium increases in such a manner in the environs that nobody is safe in the country To remedy this state of things as much as possible, several burgomasters have established a night patrol, which has been found to have a salutary effect in checking the evil.

The Lord Mayor of Dublin, acting upon a requisition most respectably signed, has convened a meeting of the citizens, to promote the project for giving increased facilities to the communication between Dublin and the British metropolis.

Four of the native breed of sheep from Afghanistan have been lately brought to Scotland by Captain Mackenzie, of the Queen's 4th Regiment Only three four, two males and two females, survived the long travel and change of climate, and were presented to Sir Colin Mackenzie, of Kilcoy, Bart. The Iskalif sheep are singular looking animals, with pendulous ears, mop-shaped tails, and silky wool.

It is stated that a bill will be introduced early in the next session of Parliament to remede, and place the matter on a more efficient footing, with a view to cheap postage and free delivery of letters in the rural districts.

We learn, from the papers lately received from the West Indies, that the planters have begun with success to apply guano as a manure to the cultivation of the sugar cane.

The Gazette of Tuesday night contains a great number of addresses to the Queen and Prince Albert, on the occasion of their late visit to the midland counties. It also contains an order in council uniting a district to the chapel of Lothiones, in the parish of Rothwell, in the county of York.

A full ordinary meeting of the Geographical Society was held on Monday evening, R. I. Mercuman, Esq., F.R.S., president, in the chair, when the Earl of Rosse and the Earl of Dartmouth were elected members. A long and interesting paper was read by Dr. Beke on these parts of Abyssinia south of Gondar, the country of the Galles, which is very little known to Europeans, whose mouth rately sent over several valuable and rare presents to her Majesty.

The Duke of Devonshire's annual sale of fat stock at Chatsworth, on Wednesday, realised the sum of £1,701.

The Dover Chronicle mentions a report that Sir John Rae Reid, M.P., has resigned his seat as member for Dover.

It is said that plans have been made, and estimates given, for a railway between Margate and Ramsgate, by atmospheric locomotion, upon the same principle as that between Dublin and Kingstown. Any line, whether of steam or atmosphere or otherwise, which would connect Margate and Ramsgate as being in the direct line from the South Eastern to Ramsgate, would be most desirable for the town.

It is now generally understood that Lieut. Munro will leave the Royal Horse Guards (Blue) and go on half-pay.

The Lords of the Treasury have instructed Colonel Jones, of the Shannon commission, to make a survey of the river Blackwater, with a view to its improvement and navigation.

The Bank of England has, we hear, taken premises at Leicester.

When Alexander Dumas heard of the violence committed towards the Queen of Spain a few days ago, he exclaimed, "Decidedly this is the turned side of my Henri Trois." Yes, but also of Gustave de Grandma to her neigh bour, "and M. Dumas had published it from a rather well-known novel—Walter Scott's Abbot."

We understand that six of the Rosolis rioters, and six of the Cromarty poon-breakers, are to be tried before the High Court of Justiciary at Edinburgh during the Christmas recess. These persons being all out on bail, will refuse to regard to Bigbee, and the Lord Advocate.

The most influential farmers and tradesmen of Mersthan, Sussex, have formed a society, to carry out a plan of employing the whole of the able bodied pauper belonging to the parish throughout the winter.

The unprecedented number of 58 writs of certiorari were issued on Tuesday from the Crown Office. These writs are all from Wales, in cases arising out of the late disturbances, and they are issued by the Crown on the presumption that in the present excited state of local feeling and strong prejudice impartial trials are not to be had in the principality. We understand that before returning the writs of certiorari, a few cases will be tried in Wales, in order to test the impartiality of the juries, and if these cases prove satisfactory the writs of certiorari will not be carried out.

On Monday evening last a barn, containing unthrashed wheat, was fired on the premises of John Hindley, being part of Hurst Hale farm, near Chat Moss, and on the line of the Liverpool Railway. A man named Hyeas is suspected on suspicion.

The Prussian Government, who have always most strenuously encouraged railroad enterprises, have just now conferred on the owners of the various railroad companies in the Prussian dominions the important privilege of free postage for their correspondence, and also exemption from stamp duties on all deeds and documents they may have to execute.

We regret to learn, that the reports which were current about twelve months ago, to the effect that Sir Henry Pottinger had solicited his recal from China, on account of ill health, are now confirmed, with the additional fact, that his request has at length been complied with by the government; and we understand that a successor to Sir Henry in the important command which he now occupies, and which he has filled so much to his own credit, and to the honour and advantage of the country, will leave England in the course of a few weeks.

Ali Pacha has lately refused the demand made by the Consul of the King of Sardinia, to expel from Egypt seven refugees who had taken refuge in that country on account of the late disturbances in the Romagna. One of them, who had been already arrested under a fictitious charge preferred by the above Consul, has been set at liberty.

It is stated that the Cunard steamers will run to Halifax only early next spring, each steamers conveying the passengers thence to Boston and New York

An extensive plot has just been discovered at Barcelona by which it was in contemplated to blow up the Cathedral and the troops in the event of a attempt to take the City by assault. A number of hand-grenades under were found at the house of Geraldo, the owner of the Fonda de Villa, the results of a search expected, which was instituted to discharge them by means of electricity, according to the news is formed plan employed in France and England to blow up the hills which stand in the way of the railroads they are constructing.

A Mr. Dominic Von Malden, of Halifax, Nova Scotia, received information last week that he had become entitled to a fortune of £17 000, by reason of a deceased relation in Europe. He travelled from Halifax to employed in unravelling a heap of coals into his cellar. Mr Von Malden had been in that city for many years, and earned a livelihood as a journeyman printer.

His Excellency H. L. Bulwer, Esq., has arrived in Paris en route to Madrid, and had an interview with M. Guizot, on Monday, at the Foreign office.

An immense block of stone, already sculptured, and forming part of the statue of her Majesty, destined for the Royal Exchange in Edinburgh is to days ago from the quarry at Binnie. The stone weighed between 11 and 12 tons, and was drawn on a truck by six horses. It was late in the evening before the immense mass was elevated in its proper place on the site of the institution.

Earl Fitzwilliam is again convalescent, and able to attend the guardians meeting, and preside as chairman, and also to participate in the pleasures of the table.

The Emperor of Russia has banished the Jews from all those parts of Russia which border on Austria and Prussia. They have been compelled to change their quarters, and they were discovered to be engaged in smuggling transactions on a very large scale

On Saturday morning three pitmen from Backwell had a narrow escape with their lives. They had gone into a pit, which had been sunk for coals, when a strong tide, rushing out of the Type, swept them on the most dangerous part of the Herd Sand, called the Wield. The pilots at the beacon, seeing their perilous situation, got their lifeboat ready, and proceeded to their assistance, and were just in time to save their lives; they were hauled into the lifeboat in an exhausted condition. A minute more, and they would have sunk to rise no more.

The Iron trade is still retrograding, and bars are sold at £4 2s. 6d net, at Newport and Cardiff on which is much over at that

The Board of Customs have decided by their order of the 8th inst., that "Free Currants," mentioned in the English language, shall be charged with the duty of four pence halfpenny per lb.; "Free Currants in the Greek language," and if the parcel does not exceed one pound in weight, to be delivered free of duty. A similar rate of duty has been ordered to be charged on "Bills of Lading," printed in Greek and English language.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE, Friday.—Since Monday the arrivals of English wheat to our market have been very moderate, and we had only a small supply of foreign, but arrivals on shore to-day. Fine qualities were quite as dear, but the value of other kinds had a downward tendency. In foreign wheat, both free and in bond, next no nothing was done Malting barley sold freely. Other kinds of any quality dull. Fine oats made no inquiry, but qualities of consumers Beans, peas, and flour, as last noted.

ENGLISH.—English Wheat, 45s to 50s; Barley, 28s to 30s; Malting, 32s to 34s; Beans, 32s to 34s; Peas, 32s to 34s; Oats, 16s to 18s; Flour, 30s to 32s per sack. Foreign.—Wheat, 40s to 42s; Barley, 20s to 22s; Beans, 30s to 32s; Peas, 30s to 32s; Oats, 14s to 16s; Flour, 28s to 30s per sack.

IRISH.—Wheat, 40s to 42s; Barley, 20s to 22s; Beans, 30s to 32s; Peas, 30s to 32s; Oats, 14s to 16s; Flour, 28s to 30s per sack.

Average prices of the week ending December 9.—Wheat, 47s 6d; Barley, 28s 6d; Oats, 15s 6d; Rye, 30s 6d; Beans, 30s 6d; Peas, 30s 6d.

Duties on Foreign Corn.—Wheat, 19s; barley, 6s; oats, 5s; rye, 10s 6d; beans, 10s 6d; peas, 9s 6d

Ireland.—Very little has been doing in this market since our last, yet the holders are firm and will not sell, except at full prices. The quantity of tea on which home consumption duty has been paid this year, up to the 7th inst., was 28,122,000lbs., against 30,000,000 at the same time in 1842

Sugar.—There has been a decided improvement in the demand for all kinds of sugar the week, and prices, in some instances, have had an upward tendency.

Coffee.—West Indies kinds are in a sluggish demand, at late rates; but in Ceylon a fair business is doing. Mocha and other kinds remain without any variation.

Rice.—The market is flat, at barely previous rates. Nearly the whole of the quantities have been taken out.

Hops.—Comparatively speaking, very little business has been transacted in any kind of hops during the present week, yet holders are firm, and prices are well supported. Present rates as follows. Prime pocket—Sussex, £6 15s. to £7 7s; Weald of Kent, £5 15s to £6 6s. Ditto Choice, £6 7s to £6 15s; Mid Kent, £7 to £8 8s; East Kent, £7 to £8 8s. Farnham's, £8 to £11 10s

Potatoes.—Adair's, 154; Chester Maun, 15s 6d; Holywell Main, 15s 6d; Ord's Redhugh, 14s; Tanfield Moor, Bitchin, 14s; Tuwaley, 14s 6d; Tanfield Moor, Wylam, 15s; Hetton Hewitt and Co., 18s; Wylam, 15s; Northumberland, 17s; Haswell, 20s 6d; Hilton, 20s; Kerr, 19s; Lambton, —; Stobart's dry per ton.

Smithfield.—The number of beasts on offer on Friday's market was reasonably large—viz., 1534 head; but the general quality was not quite equal to what we have observed to be in demand during the previous part of the year. Although the attendance of dealers was numerous, the beast trade was in a depressed state, at a decline on Monday's quotations, 8s 6d per 8lbs, and a clearance was not effected on sheep, the supply of which was moderate, only a moderate business was doing, at late rates. Although we were abundantly supplied with calves, the veal trade was active at an improvement of 2d per 8lbs. Pigs moved off steadily at late rates. Much cows sold slowly at £15 to £19 10s, including four small cows. Per 8lbs to sink the offal.—Coarse and inferior beasts, 2s 10d to 3s 4d; second quality ditto, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; prime large ores, 3s 8d to 3s 10d; prime Scots, &c., 3s 10d to 4s 2d; coarse and inferior sheep, 3s 2d to 3s 6d; second quality ditto, 3s 8d to 3s 10d; prime coarse-woolled sheep, 3s 10d to 4s 0d; prime Southdown ditto, 4s 4d to 4s 6d; large coarse calves, 3s 6d to 4s 0d; prime small ditto, 4s 2d to 4s 6d; large hogs, 3s 0d to 3s 10d; small porkers, 4s 0d to 4s 4d; suckling calves, 18s to 28s; quarter old store pigs, 16s to 22s each.

Newgate and Leadenhall.—We had a very large supply of meat on sale here to-day, yet the trade ruled steady at full prices.—per 8lbs. by the carcase—Inferior beef, 3s 4d to 3s 6d; middling ditto, 3s 8d to 3s 10d; prime large ditto, 3s 10d to 3s 0d; small ditto, 3s 2d to 3s 8d; large pork, 4s 0d to 4s 2d; inferior mutton, 3s 8d to 3s 0d; middling ditto, 3s 2d to 3s 6d; prime ditto, 3s 8d to 4s 0d; veal, 3s 4d to 4s 8d; small pork, 4s 0d to 4s 2d.

ROBERT HERBERT.

COMMERCE AND MONEY.

Although this week generally a very dull time of the year, yet it is most satisfactory to repeat again to our readers, that the accounts received in the course of this week from the many provincial towns, and from the country generally, describe the aspect of business as being in a healthy state, as receiving good wages, and consequently as continuing in a state of perfect contentment with their present position. The harvest has been abundant, the weather favourable, and the manufactured articles purchased with much activity by the tradesmen, chiefly for foreign markets and the stocks, both of cotton and of woollen goods, in the hands of the manufacturers themselves, are very moderate. This account is full corroborated by the fact that several many months to come, and that prosperity must naturally penetrate all other departments of industry throughout the United Kingdom before any months are past.

In the money market, in London, there is, notwithstanding the prosperous state of our manufacturing interests, a most unusual superabundance of capital, and as a consequence, interesting their attention chiefly to the shares of Joint Stock Associations. In this channel much attention has prevailed throughout the week, and prices generally of the great lead ing lines of Railway companies are again dearer. New undertakings of the same description are in progress, and confidence in their eventual stability is nearly gaining ground to the same extent as that of consequence, likewise, continues to be done in various descriptions of foreign bonds, but in the value of none of them can any material alteration be noted

On the English Stock Exchange, the business and jobbers have enjoyed nearly a week of holiday, for very little business has been done in any description of British public securities since our last publication. The Consols being closed until January, at large Limits to the Sold for money transactions and at the present high price of 97, the week has been a most dull one, and the Bulls have little temptation to operate extensively, whilst the continued pressure of non-employed money produces the same effect on the Bears

Before the conclusion of the transactions of the week, however, on the Foreign Stock Exchange, the previous inactivity in the money market was succeeded by a most decided excitement in Portuguese Purchases, to some extent, were made in the Consols for the opening, and they advanced to 97¾ the half-yearly dividend payable in January included, and the hopes of the Bulls for a further advance, but the Bears were not to be thus hurriedly intercepted. Spanish bonds have declined one per cent, and fears of the January dividend on the Three per Cents are becoming more general, and undermine the value of these securities.

BRITISH FUNDS.—3 per Cent. Consols, shut; 3 per Cent. Reduced, 98½ Bank Stock, 181 to 182; Indian Stock, 270 to 274; 3½ per Cents. Reduced, 102½; Long Annuities, 15 3-16; New 3½ per Cents, 99¾ premium; Exchequer Bills, 72s. to 75s. Consols for the Opening, 98⅛; London and Westminster Bank, 22¾, Union Bank of London, 10½; London Joint Stock, 12¾; 3½ per Cent. Annuities, 1854, 99¾.

FOREIGN STOCKS AND BONDS.—Austrian Bonds, 114 to 116; Russian, 115 to 116; Belgian, 101; Buenos Ayres, 78; Chilian, 100 to 101; Dutch 2½ per Cents, 61; Dutch 5 per Cents, 103; Mexican Bonds, 31¾; Peruvian, 23; Portuguese Converted, 44; Spanish Five per Cents, 29¾ Spanish Threes, 20¾; Colombian Bonds, ex. Venezuela, 12; Venezuela, 3¼ to 3½; Mexican, 23 to 24; French Five per Cent Rentes, 120f. ex. Div.; French Three per Cent, 84f. 50c.

RAILWAY SHARES IN JOINT STOCK ASSOCIATIONS.—Birmingham and Derby, 54 to 55; Birmingham and Gloucester, 105; Bristol and Exeter, 63 to 64; Eastern Counties, 9¾ to 10; Eastern Union, 7¾ premium; Edinburgh, 55 to 56; Hull and Selby, 53 to 54; London and Birmingham, 218½ to 219; South Western, 69 to 70, Brighton, 41½ to 42; Manchester and Birmingham, 34 to 35; Midland Counties, 66 to 67; North Midland, 88 to 90, South Eastern and Dover, 21 to 22; York and North Midland, 20 to 21; Blackwall, 7 to 8; Croydon, 15 to 16; Great North of England, 82 to 83; Great Western, 65; Northern and Eastern, 9; Scottish Central, 7 premium; Scottish Midland Junction, 30 to 31; Paris and Rouen, 30½ to ; Rouen and Havre, 20½ to 30½; Norwich and Yarmouth, 14½.

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 12.

WAR OFFICE, Dec. 1.—1st Foot: T. P. Matthew to be Assistant Surgeon, vice Clarke.—2d: H. Balfour to be Lieutenant, vice Hughes, who exchanges.—3d: J. Lewis to be Adjutant, vice Birch. 8th: Lieut. J. E. West to be Captain, vice Ogilby, Ensign G. B. Reeves to be Lieutenant, vice West.—11: Major to be Lieut.-Colonel, vice Sayers.—11th: Lieut. A. H. Smith to be Lieutenant, vice Hughes.—13th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Adjutant, vice Hodgetts.—16th: Lieut. W. Hutt to be Lieutenant, vice Halpin.—17th: Lieutenant to be Adjutant, vice Bagnall.—18th: Lieut. R. Newport to be Captain, vice Brownlow.—19th: Ensign H. H. Oxley to be Lieutenant, vice Scott; Lieut. C. H. M. Smith to be Adjutant, vice Young.—20th: Capt. C. Tourville to be Captain, vice J. B. Creagh; Lieut. P. L. C. Pasley to be Captain, vice Tourville; Ensign F. Pasley to be Lieutenant, vice Pasley.—23d: Lieut. Sayers, vice Pasley.—24th: Lieut. W. M. de Butts to be Captain, vice Brevet-Major C. Campbell; Lieut. G. Plumridge to be Lieutenant, vice de Butts.—27th: Major H. Ballard to be Lieutenant-Colonel, vice P. Grove, Brevet Major J. H. England to be Major, vice Ballard; Lieut. R. B. Brown to be Captain, vice England.—Ensign W. T. Lee to be Lieutenant, vice C. B. Brown.—Ensign C. Tyrrell to be Ensign, vice Lee.—33d: J. Haney to be Ensign, vice [illegible].—34th: [illegible] D. R. M'Kinnon to be Assistant Surgeon, vice Tuthill.—[illegible]: T. Singues, M.D., to be Assistant Surgeon, vice Tuthill.—[illegible]: Ensign [illegible] to be Lieutenant, vice [illegible].—[illegible]: [illegible] to be Ensign, vice [illegible].—[illegible]:

TRIUMPHAL ARCH, BELGRAVE-GATE, LEICESTER.

THE SILVER CISTERN,

next engraved, was briefly noticed in our last journal, and was much admired by the royal visitors. It stands in the grand dining-room of the castle, within a circular recess, between two windows, with handsome draperies, and before a tripod of classic design. The height, from the floor to the top of the cistern, is four feet; and its massiveness may be imagined, when it is stated, that this superb vessel contains 2000 ounces of silver, and holds fifty gallons. It is stated to have been made in 1672; and its chasing is remarkably well executed, whilst the design is bold and appropriate. The cistern rests upon four massive eagle's claws; each of the two handles is a peacock, with wings and tail extended; and all round the upper part, and between the volutes in the lower, is carried scroll-work of chaste pattern. Probably, in size only, is the Belvoir Cistern eclipsed by the immense wine-cooler, manufactured by Messrs. Rundell and Bridge, for King George the Fourth. A "choice spirit," after inspecting the Belvoir Cistern, penned the following lively apostrophe:—

Drink of this fount—for oh! there is a spell in
Its every drop 'gainst the ills of mortality,
Talk of the cordial that sparkled for Helen,
Her cup was a fiction, but this is reality!

Yes, and a costly reality, too! Only think, courteous reader, of some thousands of ounces of silver shaped into the bacchanalian form of a wassail bowl, to be used on the merry occasions of christenings and other festivities, when PUNCH is the presiding deity—who, instead of using the trident of Neptune, flourished a ladle that has more power to make us take a hop, step, and a leap over the globe in quicker time than even the Son of Saturn and Ops himself could ever have effected, according to Homer. We know not how many baptismal immersions have taken place in this argentine font, but, few or many, they must have produced

Some sons of spirit, in whose breasts are mixt
The opposite elements of union —
Sweet—sour—strong—weak—and else component things,
Which, like conflicting discords of the organ,
Make up a tuneful diapason when
They rightly are attempered!

On the side of the dinner-table this superb cistern was placed opposite her Majesty: it stands on a marble table, the sculpture of which is so beautifully executed, that the spectator at first imagines the table cloth has been rumpled in the putting on. This splendid piece of workmanship in silver, was filled with punch on the occasion of the Marquis of Granby attaining his majority.

As we are now about to take leave of Belvoir, we may here chronicle a few of the arrangements made for the Royal visit. The castle, however, is always in such good repair and order, that but little alteration or addition was required. The staircases were, on this occasion, newly covered with scarlet cloth, the bright hues of which blended beautifully with the softened light of the lamps, which are plentifully distributed in all parts of this magnificent abode. The Chinese rooms were set apart for her Majesty and Prince Albert, the whole having been expressly refitted for the occasion by some eminent London upholsterers.—The Queen Dowager was accommodated in what are called the King's rooms. The total number of beds made up in the castle, was 150; and, in addition to these, some forty or fifty were made up for the attendants of the distinguished guests, in the extensive range of stables, and some of the adjoining houses; while nearly every disposable bed in the neighbouring village hostelries, as well as private houses, had been engaged for several days beforehand.

Rather a novelty in the setting out of the dinner-table was observed on this occasion of her Majesty's visit—viz. the dessert (which was superintended by one of Mr. Gunter's chief artistes), being placed on beforehand. This is the Russian fashion, and is found to be very convenient, since immediately the last course is removed, there is the dessert all ready. The table was ornamented with all the Duke of Rutland's gorgeous gold and silver service—the various cups his horses have gained for him at Newmarket, Leicester, and elsewhere the grand candelabrum was ornamented with small but beautifully emblazoned flags, on which were the armorial bearings of her Majesty, the Prince, the Queen Dowager, and his Grace.

For the information of our fair readers, the following particulars respecting her Majesty's dinner-dresses here find a place:—one dress was of pink satin, edged with lace, and ornamented with turquoises and diamonds. One evening her Majesty wore a beautiful bird-of-paradise feather in her hair, fastened by a splendid stone; and on another, a wreath of flowers was her only head-dress—her hair being dressed plainly on both occasions.

Previous to the departure of her Majesty from this splendid seat, the Queen presented Lady Adeliza Manners with a gorgeous bracelet, set in pearls and diamonds, as a mark of her Majesty's esteem and friendship, and to Miss Victoria Wortley, (her Majesty's goddaughter, the lovely child of Lady Emmeline Wortley), a splendid ruby brooch.

Among the minor hospitalities on the occasion, are the following:—At least 800 of the Duke's tenantry and their friends were served with refreshments in the Granary. Eight hogsheads of prime old ale were set down for their refreshment, and due justice was done to this good cheer. In addition to this plenteous provision, between 200 and 250 of the tenantry were taken care of in the Servants' Hall: and a large miscellaneous party was entertained in the Steward's room; three different dinners being served up in each place.

It is stated, that about twenty-three hundred-weight of meat was consumed at the castle during the Royal visit—of fish and fowl, the quantity could not be calculated.—Every day, twenty-four different dishes were served up at each of the three courses of which the Royal dinner was composed.

THE NEWS-ROOMS, LEICESTER.

Before leaving Belvoir, the noble Duke gave directions that one hundred good stuff gowns should be distributed among as many poor women of good character residing in the adjoining parishes. The poor have already been feasted at his Lordship's charge, and many a heart has been made glad in honour of her Majesty's visit to this locality. The guns upon the bastion at Belvoir Castle, with which her Majesty was saluted upon her arrival, are very curious, and have an historical interest—they were captured by Napoleon in Egypt, and afterwards retaken by the English from the Emperor during the continental campaign.

We should acknowledge that some of the preceding details of the Belvoir festivities have been derived from the Leicestershire Chronicle, wherein the Royal visit has been excellently reported.

THE RETURN.

Before six o'clock on Thursday morning, lights were to be seen in nearly every apartment in the castle, and active preparations for her Majesty's departure where everywhere being made.

Her Majesty could not have had a finer morning than this of her departure, for witnessing the fine picture of feudal magnificence presented by Belvoir Castle, with all the glow of an unclouded morning sun shining full upon it, and the finely-varied landscape of hill and wood and dale by which it is surrounded.

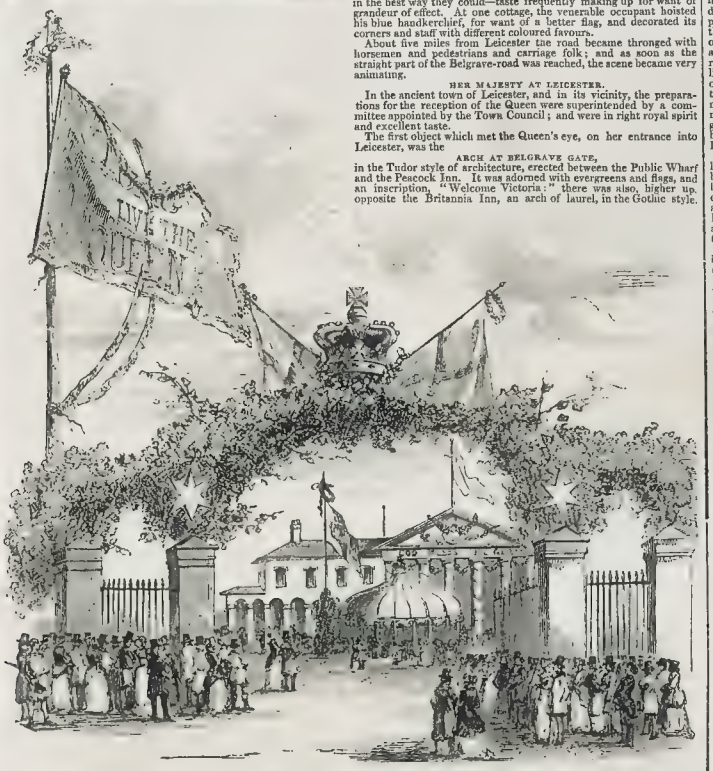
TRIUMPHAL ARCHES AT MELTON AND THORPE ARNOLD.

At Waltham and elsewhere there were rustic arches, with flags and inscriptions; and at the entrance to Melton a truly fox-hunting testimonial had been erected—consisting of a very grand rustic arch, with a crown and flags and "welcomes" to the Queen and Prince, and last, but not least, in the estimation of a Meltonian, two stuffed foxes, perched up aloft, their heads being so turned (if recollection serves aright), that one was looking to the Queen's side of the carriage and the other to where the Prince would sit! Every house was decorated, and with taste; but the centre of attraction was in the neighbourhood of the George Inn; and a little below this a temporary platform had been erected, on which some hundreds of neatly-dressed and happy-faced children were stationed, ready to raise their "sweet voices" as their Queen passed by. It would take too long to enter into details as to the designs and mottoes here; suffice it to say that Melton Mowbray fully sustained the reputation of Leicestershire for loyalty; and her Majesty was pleased to express to the Marquis of Granby her approbation of her reception.

For the sketch of the first Meltonian arch, our acknowledgments are due to Mr. F. S. Halpen. In this "fox-hunting testimonial," to the right and left, is a fox; in the centre is a flag, bearing the figure of a setter, the pole being surmounted with a fox's "brush." The large arch at the Earl of Wilton's hunting seat, and the light and graceful arch at Thorpe Arnold, near Melton, were much admired.

The villages between Melton and Leicester all showed their loyalty

TRIUMPHAL ARCHES, LEICESTER.



ENTRANCE TO THE RAILWAY STATION, LEICESTER.

Many of the private houses, too, were festooned with laurel, and banners floated from the windows. Temporary wooden galleries were erected in front of several houses, to accommodate the multitude of spectators. The houses in Gallowtree-gate were nearly all ornamented, in front, with laurel garlands, flags projecting from the windows, and inscriptions.

The grand feature, however, of the whole, was formed by the three near the bottom of Belvoir-street: they were lofty, varied in construction, and so framed, as to produce a fresh, imposing, and beautiful effect. Viewed from a short distance in front, they had the appearance of a continuous vista of laurel, intermingled with flowers, ribbons, &c. The first arch was surmounted on each side by flags; and a crown occupied the centre: underneath these were the royal arms, and various inscriptions. On each of the arches were placed numbers of pennons, which fluttered gaily in the breeze. The second arch was erected opposite Mr. Wheatley's; and the third, in front of the General News Room.

ARCHES AT THE THREE CROWNS HOTEL, AND THE NEWS ROOM,

Proceeding onward, were large galleries in front of the Swan-with-two-Necks, Mr. Hull's, stonemason, and in various other parts. Next come the arch, at the beginning of Campbell-street, surmounted by two flags; and passing beyond this, there was the gallery for the school children, seven thousand in number. Leaving this gallery on the left hand, the next object was the arch of laurel over the Station-gateway, which was very tastefully devised: the flags on the sides, and an immense crown in the centre, completed the tout ensemble.

ENTRANCE TO THE RAILWAY STATION.

The façade, fronting the yard, was classically ornamented, its columns being twined with laurel wreaths, and its entablature festooned with the same. The station itself was splendidly decorated. The iron pillars which support the roof were enwreathed with evergreens, on a pink ground; and festoons and garlands were suspended from the cross-beams of the roof. About sixteen flags were elevated along the line of the platform roof; and above all, floated the Standard of England. The two principal flags were cleverly painted and gilt by Mr. M. Mowbray, of King-street.

About half-past ten o'clock the royal cortège entered the town, which event was announced by the firing of cannon. The whole distance, from the bottom of Belgrave-gate to the Station-entrance—nearly a mile in extent—was densely crowded with people, who gave expression to their loyalty by cheering, &c.

On arriving in front of Mr. Nedham's Prince Albert drew her Majesty's attention to the body of Odd Fellows of the Manchester Unity, who were situated there; also to the arches of evergreen near the crowns; and her Majesty was overheard to say that they looked uncommonly beautiful, and that it was surprising to witness them.

About ten minutes to eleven, the royal pair entered upon the platform. The Mayor and Magistrates, and the Railway Directors, received the Queen and the Prince, who were immediately ushered into the refreshment-room, accompanied by some of the attendants. When the door was closed, the Earl of Jersey having returned throughout, a mixed group presented itself.

The royal pair took refreshment in the small room adjoining the ante-room. The table was most elegantly set out, every article being served up on silver plate. Two chairs, in the style of Louis XIV., were provided; one, with a seat and back of damask, and the frame-work burnished with gold, a crown being fixed on the top of it, was for the Queen; the other, a lower one, tastefully worked with figures and a escutcheon in German wool.

When the royal pair re-appeared, the soldiers presented arms, the standard-bearer lowered the colours, and the cheering was renewed on all sides. Her Majesty's dress was of shot silk, with green and purple plaid pattern, and covered with a velvet tunic of a puce colour, trimmed with sable; the bonnet was of straw, encircled with a wreath of crimson flowers.

DEPARTURE FROM THE RAILWAY STATION.

The band of the 64th played the National Anthem, and the artillery fired a royal salute. The royal carriage was in waiting at the end of the pathway of scarlet cloth, along which the royal couple proceeded In a few moments, at about twenty minutes past eleven, the train being ready, moved slowly forward, drawn by the Basilisk engine. Her Majesty and Prince Albert again acknowledged the greetings from the ladies and gentlemen on the platform, and in the adjoining carriages. In a brief space, the truck, on which was the carriage containing the Duke of Wellington passed by: a good hearty cheer was then given for the great captain, who acknowledged the same politely in military fashion.

The Directors and other railway officers accompanied the royal party to Rugby: the journey was made in forty-two minutes. An assemblage of the boys of the school took place, and they cheered under the royal carriage very loudly.

The evening of the day of her Majesty's visit was celebrated by dinners at the Three Crows and Bell Hotels, and also by many private parties, as well as entertainments by employers.

LEICESTER.

After the accession of the house of Lancaster to the throne, this antique town was frequently visited by the sovereigns of that family A parliament was held here by Henry V., and another by the Dukes of Bedford and Gloucester, during the minority of Henry VI. In the conflict between the houses of York and Lancaster, the castle suffered severely; and in the reign of Richard III. it had become so dilapidated that when that monarch was at Leicester a few evenings prior to the battle of Bosworth Field, he preferred to sleep at an inn in the town; the bedstead upon which he slept is now in the possession of T. Babington, Esq., of Rothley Temple. During the Parliamentary war the town suffered materially; it was taken by storm by the royal army, in May, 1645, but was retaken by the parliamentary forces under Fairfax, in June following, prior to which orders had been issued by Charles I. to pull down what remained of the castle, and to dispose of the materials. The remains are intermixed with the various buildings that have been erected on or near the site; the most complete portion of them is a beautiful arched gateway tower, called the magazine, from its having been purchased by the county as a depôt for the ammunition of the trained bands in 1682.

At Rugby, a vast crowd of persons were assembled; and while the locomotive of the Midland Counties line was being detached, the boys of the Rugby school, who had occupied a platform on the down line, suddenly rushed across the road, and, by permission, advanced close under the windows of the Queen's carriage, waving their hats, and cheering in the most vociferous manner. The Queen and the Prince both rose to acknowledge this outburst of youthful loyalty, and the Prince lowered one of the door windows and contemplated the curious scene the boys afforded with much apparent interest.

The Grammar School, which is the distinguishing feature in Rugby, is a noble and magnificent establishment, and has for many years maintained a high degree of reputation. It was founded in the 9th of Elizabeth, by Lawrence, Sheriff of London, grocer, who endowed it with a house and land, and with eight acres of land called the Conduit Close, near the Foundling Hospital, London. In 1730, the income did not exceed £116 per annum; but from the subsequent improvement of the estate, the revenue has increased to upwards of £5000 per annum. Belonging to this establishment there are twenty-one exhibitions of £60 per annum, for seven years, at either of the universities; also several fellowships, varying in value from £100 to £300 per annum, which are given exclusively to the head master and share, who may retire after having been ten years in the school. The premises were rebuilt in 1808. They form a splendid range of building in the Elizabethan style. The principal entrance is under a square gateway tower, with octagonal turrets at the angles, through a richly groined archway, above which is a beautiful oriel window, embellished with stained glass, leading into a spacious quadrangle, of which two sides are cloistered.

The chapel is a detached edifice, in the later style of English architecture. The interior is fitted up like the choir of a cathedral. The roof, which is flat, and painted to resemble oak, is panelled, and ribbed with diagonal intersections. The east window is enriched with tracery, and embellished with painted glass, representing the offering of the Magi, and at the west end are two canopied seats for the head master and the chaplain, over which is the organ gallery.

On the south side, near the altar, is a white monument of marble, by Chantrey, erected to the memory of the late Dr. James, head master, in which he is represented in a sitting posture, reading, with several volumes at his feet.

At Weedon, the military were stationed on either side the line, the troops presenting arms, and the band playing the national anthem.

At Wolverton a scene presented itself, calling for something like a detailed notice. When the train drew up, the platform was found to be lined with the Bucks Yeomanry Cavalry, with his Grace the Duke of Buckingham, commander of the regiment, at their head. Among the other officers were Lord Chandos (the Duke's eldest son), Major Lucas, Captain Talbot, Captain Cloud, Captain Garrett, and Lieutenant Bailey. The uniform, dark green and silver, and the perfect appearance of the men, altogether contributed to give a very striking effect to the scene. A battery of six guns, stationed at a short distance from the hotel, fired a royal salute as the train stopped. It had been arranged that her Majesty should alight and partake of refreshment here; but on Mr. Glyn, with his brother directors, Mr. Ledsam and Mr. Cooke, advancing to the carriage for the purpose of conducting the Queen to the saloon prepared for her reception, her Majesty inquired if it was absolutely necessary to stop for any time, and on being informed that it was not, and that her own wishes would alone be considered in the matter, her Majesty at once determined on remaining in the carriage, and proceeding forthwith. This was a grievous disappointment to many hundred persons, and not the least so to a bevy of young damsels arrayed in white and silver, at the entrance door of the saloon, through which the Queen must have passed had she alighted. The saloon carriage stopped exactly opposite the Duke of Buckingham, and her Majesty and Prince Albert, at once recognising his Grace, entered into conversation at the door of the carriage, and continued into conversation with the noble Duke for some minutes.

At twenty minutes after one the train was again in motion, and at twenty-nine minutes past two o'clock (within a minute of the time appointed, her Majesty stepped out of the railway carriage at the Watford station. There was erected a handsome pavilion fronting the line, and a temporary portico, beneath which her Majesty entered the royal carriage in waiting; the Queen remarking to Mr. Glyn—"I have had a very pleasant journey, and I feel that you have done everything possible to secure my comfort and convenience throughout." Her Majesty's horses had been stabled in Watford, at the Essex Arms Inn.

The weather continued remarkably fine throughout the whole of the journey, until a short time before her Majesty's arrival at Watford, when there was a slight shower. On Mr. Glyn expressing his regret that there should be rain, the Prince, pointing to the state carriage, observed, "Oh, Mr. Glyn, we can never know inconvenience from the weather while we are in that cuirass."

HER MAJESTY'S DEPARTURE FROM THE RAILWAY STATION, LEICESTER.

At Uxbridge the corps of Volunteer Yeomanry had assembled and proceeded to Rickmansworth, to escort her Majesty. A detachment under the command of Lieutenant Cox escorted her Majesty to Harefield, where they were relieved by another detachment, under the command of Cornet Newdegate, who escorted the royal cortège to Uxbridge, where it was relieved by a guard of honour, under the command of Adjutant Corbet, who escorted it to the confines of the county. The fine brass band of the corps were stationed at the White Horse, and received her Majesty with the National Anthem.

In feudal times Uxbridge was an important station as a frontier town, and was fortified at an early period. It afterwards had a regular garrison; and during the civil war of the seventeenth century, it was the scene of the memorable but unsuccessful negotiation between the King and his Parliament. Sixteen commissioners on each side held a conference here, which commenced on the 30th of January, 1645, and continued about three weeks, in an ancient brick mansion, situated at the west end of the town, still designated as the Treaty House, which has undergone various alterations, and is now the Crown-inn. Two of the principal rooms used on this occasion still present specimens of the ancient and curious wainscot, in a fine state of preservation. This edifice was occupied by the Earl of Northumberland, and a mansion in its vicinity by the temporary residence of the Earl of Pembroke. The royal commissioners selected the Crown-inn, which formerly stood opposite the present White Horse; and the parliamentary commissioners the George, which, although materially diminished in size, yet remains. In 1647, the head quarters of the parliamentary army were fixed here, and there was a garrison so late as 1689.

The royal party and suite arrived at Windsor at a quarter before five o'clock. The streets, from the bridge up Thames-street and Castle-hill, to the very gates of the royal residence, were crowded by all the respectable inhabitants of the town, to receive her Majesty with their loyal and affectionate greetings upon the return of the Queen and the Prince Consort from their visit to the midland counties.

PAVILION AT THE RAILWAY STATION, WATFORD.

Her Majesty appeared to be in the enjoyment of most excellent health, having experienced but little fatigue from the eighteen journeys of nearly 120 miles from Belvoir. Her Majesty and the Prince Consort dined alone this evening in their private apartment.

The rate of travelling by the railway has averaged twenty-five miles an hour with remarkable precision throughout the route. The posting speed, too, always bore out the previous calculation. The latter department was under the immediate direction of Mr. Cocum, of Lord Jersey's department.

The royal carriages formed the train throughout the route her Majesty travelled by rail.

In order to add to the precautions against chances, when her Majesty travels on the railway, a pilot engine always precedes the train at a distance of a mile.

THE DUKE OF WELLINGTON AT THE RAILWAY STATION, RUGBY.

The large engraving, upon page 393, is a characteristic portrait of "the duke," returning the salutation of the assembled crowd, at the Rugby station, where his grace was received with extraordinary enthusiasm.

A MARRIED Clergyman, late Scholar on an open foundation of the College Oxford, receives Eight Pupils. He has used for some years on the Continent (actually in Paris) and is assisted, by a resident German, a member of the University of France. He is well acquainted with the system of the Military Schools, having had relatives at each, and two of his present pupils are destined for Woolwich. Terms for 15 entirely guineas, of that age, eighty. References to heads of houses in Oxford, for Address Rev. Q. Q., care of Mr. Painter, 342, Strand. A pupil can be received for the vacancy.

PUTNEY COLLEGE.—Established for General and Scientific Education, including every Branch of Civil Engineering.
President—The Duke of BUCCLEUCH, K.G., K.T.
The Course embraces Mathematics—Mechanics Physics—Chemistry—Geology—Civil Engineering—Machinery—Drawing in all its Branches—French and German Languages, and Literature.
Application for admission to be addressed to the Committee of Management, College Putney, where every information may be obtained.

DANCING TAUGHT in the most fashionable style, by Mr. WILLIS, 41, Berners-street, Golden square. Private Lessons at all hours to ladies and gentlemen of any age, wishing privacy and expedition. An evening academy on Mondays and Fridays. A juvenile academy on Wednesdays and Saturdays. Lessons in the Valse à Deux Temps every day.—A card of terms may be had, on application as above. The ROOMS may be ENGAGED for PRIVATE PARTIES.

HOTEL BLACKFRIARS BRIDGE, (SURREY SIDE).
FAMILIES and GENTLEMEN visiting the Metropolis will find THE OLD LEAPING BAR, in BLACKFRIARS ROAD, decidedly the most economical, central, and pleasantly situated in London.
Observe—the very moderate charges for Bed and Breakfast, only 1s. 6d. per week. Dinners from the Joint, as near as may be, 1s. 6d.: Choicest Wines, Spirits, &c., equally moderate.
Handsomely Furnished Private Rooms, a Suite of Apartments. GOOD STALING

W. S. HALE'S IMPROVED COMPOSITE CANDLES.—From the great experience he has attained in the manufacture of these Candles, and the constant attention he gives to every improvement, has brought them to a perfection not to be surpassed by those produced by any process at the expense of WAX and Sperm Candles, at less than half the price. They give a brilliant light. Do not require snuffing. They are less affected by heat, and may be put out without an extinguisher and without smell, the cotton not requiring cutting, and when so lighted do not gutter. All Candles made by W. S. HALE neither contain stearine or any other deleterious ingredient. Manufactory of IMPERIAL WAX CANDLES NIGHT MOCRAS, &c. Sold by nearly all dealers in Town and Country.
Office for Patents, 65, Chancery-lane, Dec. 7th, 1843.
Sir—In reply to your inquiry, as to whether there be any Patent for the making "COMPOSITE CANDLES," we beg to inform you that we have carefully examined the list of Patents granted since the year 1620, and do not find in the list of any patent for manufacturing Candles the words 'COMPOSITE CANDLES" mentioned
We remain, sir, your obedient servants,
To Mr. W. S. Hale NEWTON and SON.

EMPLOYMENT.—Persons having a little time to spare, are apprised that Agents continue to be appointed in London and Country Towns by the EAST INDIA TEA COMPANY, for the sale of their celebrated TEA (Offices, 9, Great St. Helen's Churchyard, Bunnes-street). They are stocked in showy leaden canisters from an ounce to a pound, with the prices and weight marked on each packet, and but little trouble is occasioned by the sale; the license is only 11s. per annum, and many during the last seventeen years have realised considerable incomes by the Agency, without 1s. let or loss. Application to be made (if by letter, post-paid) as above.

PANKLIBANON IRON WORKS, adjoining Madame Tussaud's, 85, Baker-street, Portman-square, London.—The attention of the Nobility and Gentry, and others about to set up a table, is respectfully invited to the above establishment, where are offered, at WHOLESALE PRICES, for CASH only, the largest Assortment of General Furnishing IRONMONGERY, Tinned Copper, Iron, and best Tin Cooking Vessels, Stove Grates, Kitchen Ranges, Fenders, Fire Irons, Paper and Iron Tea trays, Tea-urns, Tea-pot Stands, Hot and Cold water and Shower Baths, Patent Lamps for Candles or Oil, &c., Table Cutlery, Sheffield Plate, &c., each article being marked in plain figures.

COFFEE.

	s.	d.
Good Common	0	9
Good Ceylon	1	0
Fine ditto	1	2
Finest ditto	1	4
Finest Java	1	6
Finest Cuba	1	8
Finest Mocha	2	0

G. T. MANSELL and Co., 2, Bucklersbury, Cheapside.

TABLE CUTLERY at the Manufacturing Prices.—Be not deceived by parties selling Cast-iron Goods, as genuine, as they are GEORGE'S CUTLERY MANUFACTORY, 2, 3, Cheapside corner, Hosiers Lane, or 1, Park-terrace, Camden-town.
Ivory Table Knives, 7s. per doz.; Dessert ditto, 5s. per doz.; Carvers, per pair, 6s. 6d.
N.B. Several thousand Second-hand Knives for sale or hire on very low terms.

"On ait ordonné de la rhubarbe et du séne
Mais mon, j'ai la pour nous
Moyen plus doux."—SCARRON.

IT is pleasant to eat a light delicate SPONGE CAKE: but by eating it to do without the doctor and his nauseous stuff is better. All you that cannot take all medicine; all mothers with sick children, who will not be scared to take what is to do them good: look to this, and send for a packet (1s. 1½d.) of DRABBLE'S APERIENT BISCUITS, which are a vegetable purgative without calomel, and in the pleasant disguise of a sweetmeat. Sold by W. DRABBLE, Chemist, 25, Bedford-row, and all Venders.

BRIGHT'S VEGETABLE CUSTARD COMPOUND, is now known for the table, patronised by the Royal Family, Nobility, and Gentry—the only article ever brought before the public for making custards without eggs. It has been received in the higher circles, and has been favoured with flattering testimony from the Mansion-house and the best taverns in the metropolis for its excellence, ease of preparation and varied usefulness.
Reform Club, 8th Dec. 1843.
Dear Sir,—I am happy to inform you that I have tried your newly invented "Custard Compound" with success on different days. In my work now in progress I shall give some of those receipts which will be very beneficial to society. I am, Your Obedient Servant,
A. SOYER.
John Bright, Esq., F. L. S., Brixton Hill.
Sold in canisters at 1s. and 2s. each, and in packets, each to make a pint, at 6d. per dozen. Manufactory, 9, Holland-street, North Brixton, and may be had of druggists, Italian warehousemen, confectioners, grocers, &c., throughout the kingdom, as well as of all agents appointed for the sale of Bright's Nutritious Farina for infants and invalids, and Bright's Sesame Breakfast Bar (eggs for persons of weak digestive power. Name are genuine unless signed by the proprietor, "John Bright." A specimen packet, to make two pints, will be forwarded free to any address, on the receipt of 1s., post-free, at the manufactory.

THE UNION of FAMILIES and FRIENDS at this season is a fit occasion to make appropriate presents, and taste, aided by fashion, is marked in the selections of various orders that subsist even in beauty. DIXON, who has often assisted the choice of those who indulge in the luxury of giving by these personal announcements, submits to those PARISIAN NOVELTIES in Lace for their notice in Lace shawls. Capes, Fichus, Berthes, Tippets, Collars, Habit Shirts, Chemisettes, Cuffs, &c., all pressing gifts to Ladies. A useful caution to Gentlemen and Ladies is to avoid Lace that is not DIXON'S, as numbers are daily imposed on by base imitations. Those are arranged in all the various qualities and sizes at very low prices. Embroidered Lace trimmed Dress Handkerchiefs in great and costly variety. Address, DIXON, principal Lacemaker to her Majesty and Royal Family, No. , Regent street.

COMPTON-TERRACE, HIGHBURY, ISLINGTON.—TO BE LET, an exceedingly compact and well-finished MODERN RESIDENCE, containing seven rooms, with kitchen and cellarage, and every convenience for a genteel family. The house has been lately embellished with every modern improvement. The breakfast, dining, drawing, and bed rooms are of lofty, cheerful appearance, and adapted to accommodate a large or small family. Rental low for the first year. Apply to Mr. DAVIS, surveyor, 4, Bedford-row, Islington-green, and to Mr. D'S BARNS, House and Estate Agent, Islington Green.

F. ARNOLD has the most respectfully to inform the Nobility, Gentry, and the Public, that he has just manufactured the unserpassed quality of Cologne, which upon trial will be found far superior to anything before offered for sale. ESSENCE OF SPRING FLOWERS, is 6d. per bottle. REAL VERBENA EXTRACT, is 6d. ROSEMARY DE LA REINE, is 6d. LILLY OF THE VALLEY, 2s. and 4s. and 47 other Scents, which may be retired upon. MEDICATED POMATUM a safe remedy for curing Scurf, Dandruff, &c. 6d. ROSE VERBENA, and a variety of Scent, pockets, 6d. each. Fine 6d. Brown Windsor soap, and every article suitable for toilet and handkerchief, to be had of every Stationer and Chemist in Town and Country. Wholesale Agents, MARRIAGE and Co., Cannon-street, May-fair. Please observe the name, F. ARNOLD, upon every article.

A WATCH, as a Gift, is recommended for its usefulness and elegance. Gold Horizontal Watches, with beautiful dials, Warranted not to vary more than 15 minutes per week, are selling for £6 6s. each at JONES's, 338, Strand, opposite Somerset House. Every Watch sent to the Country.

AIR GUNS and AIR CANES, recently improved by REILLY, Junior.—These weapons are effective at all ranges within one hundred paces, they discharge without noise or recoil; are loaded with extreme rapidity; and for safety produce peculiar confidence. Rifles, with which to shoot, at target practice, deadened grounds, &c.—when ordinary shooting would be only a disturbance.—Trial on the Premises. REILLY, Gun Maker, 315, Holborn, near Chancery-lane.

ALFRED LINDOP'S STANDARD STEEL PENS are manufactured of the finest quality of metal, and are expressly adapted for that finest style of Mercantile Penmanship now so generally adopted and admired.—Sold wholesale by ALFRED LINDOP, 19 Cannon street, London, and may be had of all respectable stationers. Price 3s. 6d. the box, containing two gross.

PATENT LEVER WATCHES, London Made.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Watchmakers, 3, Cornhill, London, opposite the Bank.—Patent Lever Watches, mounted in silver cases, four guineas each, or, in gold cases, ten guineas each. They have the detached escapement, jewelled, and unvarying power for the watch to continue going whilst being wound. The performance warranted.

BACON.—J. CRAFT, Philpot-lane, City, offers to the public BACON of excellent quality, which he receives weekly from a Farmer in Wiltshire, who attends to the feeding and rearing of his pigs in such a way as to make the bacon of a most delicious flavour, and which will be sure to suit the most delicate stomach. Sold by the side or half side, at 6d. per lb. Sent to any part of town carriage free.

ALE of very superior quality, brewed entirely from the very best Malt and Hops, and in such proportions as persons of nice palates will be sure to appreciate. Sold in casks of 18 and 9 gallons each, at 1s. per gallon. Sent to any part of town carriage free. Orders by post punctually attended to. Address to the JOHN BULL BREWERY OFFICE, No. , Philpot-lane, City.

KETT'S CASTOR OIL POMATUM stands pre-eminent over all similar preparations for strengthening and cleansing the Hair, and entirely prevents and removes the baneful effects of Scurf. Its unique perfume renders it a favourite acquisition to the toilette. In pots, 1s., 2s., and 4s. each. Sold by G. Colk, 79, Fleet street; J. Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; T. Grounds, 49, Tavistock-row, Covent-garden; Kirk, 293, Broadway, Bond-street; Sutton and Co., New Bond-street (by churchyard); and of all chymists, through Messrs. Barclay and Son, 95, Farringdon-street.

NELSON'S PATENT OPAQUE GELATINE, Half the Price of Isinglass.—CAUTION: From the increasing demands for NELSON'S OPAQUE GELATINE, many spurious articles are imposed on the Public by parties to guard against which, and for a protection to purchasers, it is sold in packets only, by most respectable chemists, grocers, and oilmen, in town and country, at 3s., 1s. 6d., 7d., 6d., 3d., 2d., and 1d. each packet, bearing the Patentee's signature. Extract from Dr. Ure's testimonial, June 6, 1843:—"I find Mr. G. Nelson's Patent Opaque Gelatine to be at least equal in strength and purity, if not superior, to the best isinglass for every culinary purpose; it is entirely free from any impregnation of acid, such as I have found to exist in other kinds of gelatine in the London market." The Opaque Gelatine is an article well adapted for hotels, taverns, ships' use and ship stores, and a safe and profitable commodity for exportation.—Emscote Mills, Warwick, and 14, Bucklersbury.

H. WALKER'S NEEDLES (by authority "The Queen's Own") have large eyes, are easily threaded (even by bad persons), and have improved points, temper, and finish. Each paper is labelled with a likeness of her Majesty or her Royal Highness Prince Albert, in relief, on coloured grounds. Every quality of needles, fish-hooks, hooks and eyes, steel pens, &c., for sale by shopkeepers. Those needles or pens for the home trade are sent free by post by any respectable dealer, on receipt of 13 penny stamps for every sixpenny value. H. WALKER, Manufacturer to the Queen, 26, Maiden-lane, Wood-street, London.

OXFORD HOUSE FURNITURE WAREHOUSE, 356, Oxford-street, three doors west of the Pantheon.—SELLING OFF the most extensive CABINET and UPHOLSTERY STOCK, together with the large assortment of superior secondhand Furniture, taken in exchange from several private establishments. The being one of the largest and best Stocks in town, Gentlemen wishing to have elegant and substantial Furniture, at a reduced price, will find this one of the best opportunities that has offered itself for some time to the public notice.

CUT GLASS, CHINA, EARTHENWARE, &c.—SANDER and Co. beg to announce that their Show Rooms and Warehouses contain nearly twelve a assortment of New Patterns in Dinner, Dessert, Tea, and Breakfast Services, and Chamber Sets, in Porcelain, Iron-stone China, and the new fluorscent Ware, equal in appearance to China, at a fourth the cost. The Cut Glass department comprises every modern and elegant fashion in the and dessert dishes, decanters, claret jugs, tumblers, wines, &c., together with all kinds of glass, of a plain and economical description. A large stock of Lamps, Chandeliers, and Hall Lanterns. Paper Mache Trays, Fancy Ornaments in China, Alabaster, Ormolu, Bronze, &c., &c.—319 and 320, HIGH HOLBORN, opposite Gray's Inn-gate.

In two volumes, royal 8vo., price 30s., cloth lettered,
THE PICTORIAL HISTORY OF FRANCE, AND OF THE FRENCH PEOPLE, from the appearance of the Franch in Gaul, to the period of the French Revolution. By Mr. C. M. BUSSEY, and Mr. CAMPEY. Illustrated with upwards of 400 Designs, by Jules David.
London: W. S. ORR and Co., Paternoster-row.

NEW EDITION OF WORDSWORTH'S GREECE.—In imp. 8vo., price a Guinea and a Half, cloth lettered, GREECE, PICTORIAL, DESCRIPTIVE, AND HISTORICAL. By CHRISTOPHER WORDSWORTH, D.D., Head Master at Harrow, and author of "A Journal of a Residence in Athens and Attica."—New Edition, much improved.
London: W. S. ORR and Co., Paternoster row.

CYCLOPÆDIA OF NATURAL SCIENCE.—Now ready, price 10s., cloth lettered, VEGETABLE PHYSIOLOGY AND BOTANY.—A New Edition. Revised and much enlarged.
Also, recently published, price 5s. 6d. each, and 6s. 6d. cloth lettered,
MECHANICAL PHILOSOPHY, HOROLOGY, AND ASTRONOMY.
Price 10s. sewed, in Two Parts, or 10s. 6d. cloth
ANIMAL PHYSIOLOGY.
London: W. S. ORR and Co., Paternoster row.

CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEAR'S GIFTS.
On the 20th inst., in prettee cloth bindings, gilt edges, price 5s. 6d. plain, 12s. coloured,
YOUNG ENGLAND'S LITTLE LIBRARY; a collection of original Tales for Children, in prose and verse, contributed by Mrs. S. C. Hall, Mrs. Howitt, Miss Gaspey, Mr. Albert Smith, the Author of the "New Tale of a Tub," and other authors of established reputation. Illustrated by Crowquill, Absolon, and Chase. Also, uniform with the above, price 2s. 6d. plain, 3s. 6d. coloured, bound in patent cloth, gilt edges,
The BOOK of CURIOSITIES, Natural and Artificial; forming plates of the most remarkable Natural Phenomena, and the Principal Wonders of Ancient Art.
London: W. S. ORR and Co.

NEW CHRISTMAS BOOK, BY MR. DICKENS.
On Tuesday next the 19th, in small 8vo., with four coloured Etchings, and Woodcuts, by Leech,
A CHRISTMAS CAROL; IN Prose. Being A Ghost Story of Christmas. By CHARLES DICKENS.—Price Five Shillings.
CHAPMAN & HALL, 186, Strand.

Just Out, Parts I. and II. of the New Work, by the Author of "Stanley Thorn," entitled SYLVESTER SOUND, Published in Parts, at One Shilling.—Each Part contains Four humorous Engravings, on Steel.—To be completed in Twelve Parts.

ILLUMINATED CHRISTMAS PRESENT.
THE ILLUMINATED MISCELLANY, for 1844, Elegantly Printed in Colours, with Gold Enamel Title, and Handsomely Bound in Cloth, price 1s. 6d. A superb Christmas Present, and New Year's Gift, of Elegant Extracts in Prose and Verse.—London: FRANCIS, 25, Museum-street, Bloomsbury; Sold by SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, and Co., Stationers' Court; to be had of all Booksellers.

Just published by the Metropolitan Drapers' Association.
THE FIFTH THOUSAND of the PRIZE ESSAY on the EVILS of the LATE HOURS of BUSINESS, &c. By THOMAS DAVIES, with a Preface by the Rev. Baptist W. Noel, M.A. Price Sixpence and One Shilling.
JAMES NISBET & Co., 21, Berners-street; and all Booksellers.

DR SUTTON'S RECREATIONS BY RIDDLE
In a very large Volume, Octavo, closely printed and illustrated by upwards of 400 Wood Cuts, price 10s. cloth,
RECREATIONS in SCIENCE and NATURAL PHILOSOPHY. DR HUTTON'S Translation of Montucla's History of Opinion." The present New Edition of this celebrated Work is revised by EDWARD RIDDLE, Master of the Mathematical School, Royal Hospital, Greenwich, who has corrected it to the present era, and made numerous Additions.
"A most invaluable Present for the Holidays."
London: Printed for THOMAS TEGG, 73, Cheapside, and sold by all other Booksellers.

FINDLAY'S BROOKE'S GENERAL GAZETTEER.
Library Edition. In one very large Volume, 8vo., consisting of Eight Hundred Pages, closely printed, double columns, embellished by Five New Maps, from Original Drawings by the Editor, price 12s. bound in cloth,
A GENERAL GAZETTEER; or, COMPENDIOUS GEOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY, containing Descriptions of every Country in the known World. By R. BROOKES, M.D. The whole revised, and Accounts of all the most recent Discoveries, Population, Statistics, &c. added from the latest authorities, and corrected to the present period. By A. G. FINDLAY.
London: Printed for THOMAS TEGG, 73, Cheapside, and sold by all other Booksellers.

Now Ready, New Edition, Ninth Thousand, Post 8vo., 7s. 6d.,
CHRIST on the CROSS; a Exposition of the Twenty-second Psalm. By the Rev. JOHN STERNHOLD. Perpetual Curate of Cury and Gunwalloe, Cornwall. This work is strongly recommended by the Rev. John Browne, of Chelmsford; the Rev. Hugh Wade, of Hoxton; the Rev. Charles Bridges, of Old Newton, Suffolk; the Rev. E. Bickersteth, of Watton, Herts; and by its intrinsic merit, which in the course of two years has gone through a fourth, has "for private study, and family and social enjoyment, no equal."
London: Published by J. H. Jackson Islington-Green; and sold by SCHOLEY, Fleet-street, HAMILTON and Co., Paternoster-row, ALLEN, York; WIGHT, Cheltenham; ROBERTSON, Dublin, and all other booksellers

NEW VOLUME OF THE EDINBURGH CABINET LIBRARY
Just published, in small 8vo., 5s. cloth,
VOYAGES ROUND THE WORLD from the Death of CAPTAIN COOK to the Present Time: including Remarks on the Social Condition of the Inhabitants in the recently discovered Countries, their Progress in the Arts, and more especially their Advancement in Religious Knowledge. By the Rev. JOHN BROWNE, of Chelmsford.
Volumes already published, price 5s. per vol., with Maps and numerous Engravings.
Polar Seas and Lands, Discovery and Adventure in.—Egypt, 1 v.—Palestine, 1 v.—Lives of Drake, Cavendish, and Dampier, 1 v.—British India, 3 v.—Discovery on Northern Coasts of America, 1 v.—Travels of Barry M. Lord Avonmore and Sir Walter Raleigh, 1 v.—Nubia and Abyssinia, 1 v.—Arabia, 2 v.—Persia, Afghanistan, and Beloochistan 1 v.—Lives of Washington, 1 v.—Barbary States, 1 v.—China, 2 v.—Circumnavigation of the Globe, 1 v.—Life of Peter the Great, 1 v.—Scandinavia, 2 v.—Iceland, Greenland, &c., 1 v.—Italy and the Italian Islands, 3 v.—Mesopotamia and Assyria, 1 v.—Polynesia and New Zealand, 1 v.—United States, 3 v. in the press.
Oliver and Boyd, Edinburgh; Simpkin, Marshall, and Co., London.

OCCUPATION FOR CHILDREN IN LONG EVENINGS.
A Permanent Fund of Amusement and Instruction.
BUTTER'S TANGIBLE ARITHMETIC and GEOMETRY; an easy and effectual Method of Teaching the simple Rules of Arithmetic and Practical Geometry, by the Operation of Square Pieces. Price 2s. 6d., or a Set in a Case of Boxes, with Cuts. Price 1s., or with a Box of 85 Cedar Cubes, 5s.; with 144 ditto, 6s. 6d.; with 144 larger Mahogany Cubes, 10s. Sold by all Booksellers, Stationers, and Toymen.
J. TRIPPER AGNEW, Patentee and Proprietor, 10, Portland-street, Soho-square.

Just Published, price 5s.,
CURE for NOISES in the EARS, or NERVOUS DEAFNESS, by J. D. HEWGOOD, B.A., Civil Regis Cantab, and many years Surgeon to to the Leeds Ear and Eye Infirmary. Sold by the author, at 14, Red Lion-square, who may be consulted Daily, from Ten to Two only.

NEW WORKS PUBLISHED BY A. H. BAILY AND CO., CORNHILL, LONDON.
Now ready, 2 vols. 8vo., with 24 Illustrations, cloth boards,
WANDERINGS in the HIGHLANDS and ISLANDS, with Sketches taken on the Scottish Borders; being a Sequel to "Wild Sports of the West." By W. H. MAXWELL, D.D.
In Parts, One Shilling each,
MAXWELL'S IRISH REBELLION in 1798, with Plates by George Cruikshank, and numerous Portraits on Steel by the first artists. Part I. to appear on the 1st of January, 1844
The forthcoming work will illustrate the most important and interesting era in Irish History—the Rebellion of 1798, and the Events that led to it in France on the enactment of the Levies in the Union; with ample details, Military and Political, of the Rise, Progress, and Suppression of the Insurrection in '98.

NEW FRENCH AND ENGLISH DICTIONARY.
FRENCH and ENGLISH and ENGLISH and FRENCH LEXICON, by MARIN DELAVOYE. One Volume, handsomely bound in calf (1,200 pages) price 10s. 6d.
"This work, unlike all its predecessors, down to the present day, contains on the French as well as the English index, words as they are written, be they compounded, declined, contracted, or modified in any possible way. Each word is found alphabetically classed, under whatever form the law of grammatical construction may have required, as it is thoroughly analysed, and etymologically explained.
"This is a very useful book, got up with great accuracy."—Times, May 17, 1843.
"Both teachers and students are much indebted to Mons. Delavoye for this admirable lexicon."—Literary Gazette June 11, 1842.
SECOND THOUSAND.—Just published, in one handsome volume, post 8vo., beautifully illustrated, cloth lettered, price 8s. 6d.,
JAMAICA IT'S PAST and PRESENT STATE.—By the Rev. JAMES M. PHILLIPPO, Baptist Missionary in that Island.
"A volume of enchanting interest, which equals those of Williams and Moffat, presenting a most instructive and entertaining view of the state of society in Jamaica, and written in a spirit which inspires implicit confidence in the author."—Patriot.
"We cordially recommend the friends of the abolition cause to purchase it without delay."—Anti Slavery Reporter.
London: JOHN SNOW, Paternoster-row.

In Sailing Parts, and Twenty-one Nos., printed in Music folio,
MUSIC FOR THE MILLION, Vocal and Instrumental; intended to illustrate the Science by the publication of Standard and Classical Music, at the lowest price, consistent with accuracy and elegant typography
Part V. of Music for the Million contains "The Mermaid's Cave," by Horn; "The Trip to America," an Original Quadrille, by F. Lancioni, constructed on American and British National Airs, with Musical Introduction, descriptive of the Voyage across the Atlantic, Gee, "Mail Coach Horn," with Variations, by T. Comer.
DAVIDSON, Tudor-street, New Bridge-street; of whom may be had,
DIBDIN'S SONGS, the only complete Edition, with the Music of 136, in 1 large vol. 24s. or in 8 parts, 2s. 6d. each.
THE SONGS' HOLIDAY BOOK; a capital Christmas Present, treating of Angling, Swimming, Conjuring, Firework-Making, Cricket, Archery, Boys' School Games, Scientific Amusements, Electrotype, Daguerreotype, &c., with 100 Engravings, price 2s. 6d.

PATRICK, LOWTH, ARNALD, WHITBY, AND LOMAN. On Monday, 1st of January, 1844, will be published in Post 8vo., Part I., price 2s., and Vol. I., price 24s., to be continued on the First and Fifteenth of every Month, until completed in Forty-seven Parts at 2s. each, or in Volumes every Three Months at 24s. each of
A CRITICAL COMMENTARY and PARAPHRASE on the OLD and NEW TESTAMENTS, and the APOCRYPHA By PATRICK, LOWTH, ARNALD, WHITBY, and LOWMAN. With the Text at large, forming Four Volumes, Imperial Octavo. Prospectuses may be had gratis of every respectable Bookseller in the kingdom.
London: Printed for THOMAS TEGG, Cheapside, and may be procured by order of every Dealer in Books in the United Kingdom
 Wanted active Canvassing Agents for this Work.

ANNUALS FOR CHRISTMAS GIFTS

Just published, handsomely bound, gilt edges, suitable for the drawing-room table, each volume illustrated with 800 engravings by eminent artists,

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, Volume I., price £1 1s., and Volume II., price 25s., illustrating and describing the Historical and Passing Events of the present day, and forming the most attractive and instructive reading for the Family Circle. Each of these volumes has cost the proprietors, in illustrations alone, upwards of £6000, independent of a very heavy expenditure for literary assistance; and they are submitted to the public as a specimen of what can be accomplished by British artists and British workmen. Each volume is complete in itself, and may be purchased separately. Vol. III., price 18s., will be completed in January, 1844. To persons about to purchase or presenting their friends with a Christmas Gift, these volumes are strongly recommended as far superior, in every respect, to the ephemeral works published under the name of Annuals

Published by W. Lloyd, 198, Strand, and Simpkin and Marshall, London.—Sold by all Booksellers and Newsvenders.

PRINCE ALBERT'S SONG—THE YEOMEN of ENGLAND—Sung at the grand Leicestershire Yeomanry and Agricultural Meeting, and received with acclamations of applause. Composed by W. LOVELL PHILLIPS, with a superb Drawing, by John Brandard, illustrating the pursuits of the Princess Queen Elizabeth—Queen Anne—and Queen Victoria. Price 2s.

"THE SPIRIT of the FOUNTAIN, sung by Mrs. H. P. Grattan at the Princess's Theatre composed by W. Lovell Phillips, with a splendid frontispiece by John Brandard. Price 2s.

"AH YOU A NURSING GIL" the celebrated Gipsy Song, now singing by Mrs. Keeley, at the Princess's Theatre, in the farce, "Borrowing a Husband," and received with the loudest acclamations of applause; composed by W. Lovell Phillips. Price 2s.

London: Published by Lonsdale, 48, Albemarle-street; where may be had

THE NIGHT STORM AT SEA, arranged as a divertimento for the Pianoforte, in which is introduced the celebrated Song, "The Pilot—Good night, my dear, in Providence," with a magnificent Frontispiece, by John Brandard, descriptive of a night storm at sea. 2s. 6d.

CHRISTMAS and NEW YEAR'S PRESENTS, &c., with numerous Illustrations.

1. EASTERN ROMANCE; Tales from the Arabian Nights, &c. revised edition, 24 Woodcuts, 7s. 6d.
2. ROMANTIC FICTION; from the German of Fouque, Chamisso, &c. 7s.
3. FABLES, ALLEGORIES, &c.; a select and revised collection, 2s. 6d.
4. POPULAR TALES and LEGENDS; scarce, 4s. 6d.
5. THE CASTLE of FALKENBURG; and other Tales. (From the German.) 3s.
6. GENOVEVA of BRABANT. 2s.
7. LEGENDS and TRADITIONARY STORIES; 47 Tales, 4s. 6d.
8. The RED and WHITE ROSES, and other TALES, 3s.
9. AUSTRALIA POPULARLY DESCRIBED, by the Rev. W. Priden, 8s.
10. ELEMENTS of KNOWLEDGE, pictures, 3s. 6d.
11. THE LIFE of OUR LORD, with 13 Col. Pictures, 4s. 6d.
12. ROBINSON CRUSOE for CHILDREN. (Old Cut.) 2s. 6d.
13. SELECTED POEMS of WORDSWORTH for SCHOOLS, 7s. 6d. or half-bound, gilt edges, 9s. 6d.
14. NURSERY RHYMES, JINGLES and SONGS. Small 4to.
15. ARIEL; a tale of Early Times, 2s. 6d.
16. CHRISTMAS EVE; a German Tale, 1s.
17. UNDINE; Engravings, 2s. 6d.
18. THE TWO CAPTAINS, 1s.
19. ALADDIN'S KNIGHT, 1s
20. SINTRAM, 2s., or bound, 3s. 6d.

(The last four are translated from the German of Fouqué's "Four Seasons")

London: James Burns.

N.B. Mr. Burns' list of Works of Imagination and Amusement for Old and Young may be had gratis on application.

This day is published,

FINDEN'S ROYAL GALLERY of BRITISH ART, Part VI., containing "The Deliverance of St. Peter from Prison," painted by W. Hilton, R.A., "The Death of the Red Deer," painted by Sir D. Wilkie, R.A.; and "The Harvest Waggon," painted by T. Gainsborough, R.A.

London: Published for the Proprietors, by T. G. Marsh, 4, Hanover street, Hanover-square; F. G. Moon, 30, Threadneedle-street; and R. Ackermann and Co., Strand

A WORK OF NOVELTY

Just out, price 6d., neatly done up in a Tartan wrapper, and gilt edges,

THE GRAVE OF GENIUS.

A Tale: true and serious. By J. O'La MONT.

By the reviews of the leading Journals in Britain, this little work—described as a Novelty in Literature—has already earned a high character.—

"Well told."—Aberdeen Herald.

"Remarkably well told."—Era.

"Faithfully portrays the struggles of Genius."—Liverpool Chronicle.

"Literature, we are sorry to state, has its rotten disfigurements, when it becomes an object of trade; and when party pandores—a clever adaptor—say, literary thief—when successful in disguises, reaps golden harvests, while honest, proud, sterling talent starves. Mr. La Mont has evidently applied the lash; and described the whole history in a style and manner which displays a knowledge of no common intellect, and possessed of all the benevolent feelings that exalt mankind."—London and Farm Magazine.

London: W. Strange, Paternoster-row.

 May be had, to order, of all booksellers in town and country.

NEW and ENLARGED SERIES of the MEDICAL TIMES.—The "prodigious improvement" which Dr. James Johnson, in his Quarterly Review, recognized, as evinced in the Medical Times, under its new management, having been followed by an equally productive success, the conductors have found that, for the already too largest of the medical journals, they cannot do justice to the numerous calls arising out of their new responsibilities without a considerable enlargement. They have, therefore, to announce that, on the first Saturday of the New Year, the MEDICAL TIMES will be presented in TWO VOLUMES, by the weekly addition of four-and-four closely-printed quarto columns, being an increase of one-half to its already numerous pages, of readiness to its scientific matter. This important change (introducing a new era in journalism) will, it is believed, give the profession a periodical which, in its scientific claims on their support, will be wholly without a precedent. No new fact in medicine—no improvement—no discovery in any quarter of the globe, will escape its record. It will improve every thing of original worth in the English journals—will carefully give the substance of those published in France, America, and Germany, and, by a promptness weekly renewed, present to its readers in the position of one subscribing to all the journals. On other matters, the system followed will be

1. To give Lectures, by G. J. Guthrie, Esq., F.R.S., on Clinical Surgery: Dr. C. J. B. Williams, F.R.S., and Professor of Medicine in the University College, on the Theory and Practice of Medicine: H. T. Brande, F.R.S., & C. L., &c., on Chemistry: and by the distinguished French savant Raspail, on Animal and Vegetable Physiology. In this part of the work, also, the Lectures delivered in the hospitals, schools, and public institutions, possessing any peculiar importance, is sure to be found.

2. To publish, every fortnight, Biographical Sketches of our eminent and more prominent medical characters. The Panelling of January 6 will be of Sir B. Brodie.

3. To publish monthly two foreign letters—one from a gentleman doing honour even to the illustrious Liebig's laboratory (J. L. Mospat, Esq.), recording, from time to time, the achievements of German Science—the other from a foreign savant, Dr De Beaumont, Physician to the Imperial Emissary at Paris, who will be found to be most unyielding from out the seething condition of French scientific exertion. No week will pass in which these letters will not detail a discovery or practical improvement of great importance to every medical man.

4. To give original contributions on the most important points of Medicine and Surgery, from eminent surgeons and physicians. The Editor has been honoured already by promises of articles from, amongst several other gentlemen—W. Ferguson, F.R.S., surgeon to King's College Hospital, and lecturer on surgery; T. Wharton Jones, F.R.S., lecturer on physiology to Charing-cross Hospital Medical School; H. Hancock, Esq., surgeon to Charing-cross Hospital; Charles Clay, M.D., lecturer on jurisprudence, Manchester; J. B. Thompson, A.B., M.D.; R. Hunter, M.D., lecturer on anatomy and physiology to Westminster Hospital School; Samuel Lane, Esq., surgeon to the Lock Hospital, &c.; Rutherford Alcock, Esq., surgeon to the Royal Ophthalmic Hospital; G. Fichet, Esq., senior surgeon to the Surrey Dispensary, president of the Medical Society, &c.; K. Simon, Esq., surgeon to King's College Hospital; H. Padlipp, F.R.S., surgeon to the Marylebone Infirmary, lecturer on surgery to Westminster Hospital Medical School.

5. To give records of singular or important cases occurring in the private experience of the journal's numerous subscribers, in every part of the world.

6. To report faithfully all the Meetings of the Royal Society, Royal Institution, Royal Medico-Chirurgical, and other Societies connected with medicine

7. To Review all New Medical Books—favourably as justice to the public warrants, unfavourably as non connection will do from the journal's pages.

8. To give a fortnightly list, carefully prepared, of all the new Medical Works published at home or abroad

9. To publish monthly a Drug Price List, giving the latest record of the wholesale market prices. The Medical Times will thus contain nearly twice as much as any other medical journal. The following will be the Terms of Subscription.—For a single number: Plain, 5d.; Stamped, 6d. Per Quarter, free by post, 6s. 6d. Half-year, 13s. Annual subscription at the reception of The Medical Times in remote country places, &c., the publisher will keep open, for a month, "A Roll of Subscribers," in which gentlemen sending their names, with a post-office order, or an order on a house in town, for 6l. 5s., will secure the journal by post, free, every Saturday morning, for twelve months. This convenience is offered to avoid the trouble and uncertainty of book debts. The New Series will begin January 6, 1844.

The Medical Times Almanack will be ready in the last week in December. The enormous sale of last year's Almanack justifying the most lavish expenditure in doing justice to the Almanack for 1844, the conductors of The Medical Times will present it with a number of novel attractions, and more than one-third larger than the last, viz., 80 quarto columns Price 6d., stamped 6d.

Advertisements should be delivered in by December 30th. Office, 49, Essex-street, Strand J. V. Carlisle, publisher

EUROPEAN LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, No. 30, Cheapside, and 1, Crown-street, Finsbury-square, Blackfriars, London.—Established January, 1819.

President—SIR JAMES RIVETT CARNAC, Knt., Rock Club, Portsmouth.

Vice Presidents—Geo. Forbes, Esq., 9, Fitzroy square.—With Twelve Directors.

FACILITIES are offered by this long established Society to all the world and the means of every class of insurers. Premiums are received yearly, half-yearly, or quarterly, or upon an increasing or decreasing scale. The amount for life participation septennially in the profits realised. A liberal commission is allowed to Solicitors and Agents.

DAVID FOGGO, Secretary.

N B—Agents are wanted in towns where none have been yet appointed.

THE METROPOLITAN LOAN COMPANY, Offices, No 1, Craven-street, Strand, London.—LOANS are advanced by the Company, on the security of responsible householders, in sums of £10 £15, £20, £25, £30, £35, £40, £45, and £50, for periods, at the option of the borrowers, of twenty-five weeks, at 5s per cent., or of fifty weeks, at 8s per cent.; to be repaid by weekly instalments, on forms of application, at the Company's offices, or at such other places as may be appointed by the Directors.

COOKE'S INDIAN CURRY and MADRAS MULLI GATAWNY PASTES COOKE and Co., 24, Princes-street, Cavendish-square (from 28, Haster garden, established 17 years), beg to state that the above are always used at the Oriental Club house in London, and that they prepare Curries and Mull-gatawny Soup much superior to those made from curry powders, and equal in flavor to those made in India. Easy Indian receipts for meat, game, vegetable, and fish curries, and mulligatawny soup, accompany each pot. Cooke will find by young those parties, either by themselves or when mixed with curry powder to improve its flavour, they will be able to make better curries and mulligatawny soup in half the time requisite for the curry powder when alone. C. and Co. have also superior Cayenne, Madras, and Bombay curry powders, in cases and bulks. The Madras is the most suitable to English, American, and Colonial tastes. Also Bengal Chutney and Sauce, mango and lime pickles, Bombiloe, &c. Please to be aware of bad imitations of the above, but to ask analus for Cooke's to avoid disappointment. The trade supplied at the usual terms.

NEWSPAPER OFFICE, No. 15, COVENTRY-STREET, LONDON, Established upwards of Four Thirty Years.—J. Mudie and Sons' Office of News Agents and Stationers, supply the Illustrated News, and all other London Newspapers (a correct list of which may be had on application), with the strictest punctuality, to all parts of the Kingdom and the Colonies, free of postage, and by the morning mail, if required. T. M. and Sons beg to state that they print the entire address of their customers on the wrappers when ordered for Six Months, or longer.

PIANO FORTES, warranted of the best Materials and Workmanship. Also Self-playing Piano Fortes and Organs, at the wholesale prices. N.B. Several very good Cottage, Cabinet, Grand, and Square Piano Fortes, by the best makers, to be sold cheap.—J. Isaac, Finger Organ, 237, A Newman and Sons' Office, 226. A Double Action Harp, 23l.; a Self-playing Piano Forte, 42l.; at Mr. DAVIS'S Manufactory, 20, Soho-square, Oxford-street, Strand.

MAKE YOUR FRIENDS HAPPY for SIX GUINEAS.—One Dozen Superior Champagne.

1	"	Claret.
1	"	Sherry.
1	"	Port.

Madeira or Madeira.

All good sound Foreign Wines, bottles, and hamper, included, delivered free within three miles of London, or for ten dozen extra to all parts of England.

BENDALL, Bro. and Co., 23 & 24, Bread-street, City

BRETT'S LIQUEUR GINGER BRANDY, being strongly recommended by the Faculty as a salutary cordial stomachic, is likely to become equally eminent with their IMPROVED PATENT COGNAC, which not one in a hundred can distinguish from the finest French Brandy. Either of these Brandies may be had at 18s per imperial gallon, or a half dozen hamper, containing any required portion of each, for a sovereign. HENRY BRETT and Co., Old Pemberton-row, Holborn-court, City.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.

For 7 Guineas.		For 2½ Guineas.
1 dozen	Champagne	1 dozen.
1 do.	Scotch Ale	1 do.
1 do.	Crusted Port	1 do.
1 do.	Sherry	1 do.
1 do.	Sweet Lisbon	1 do.

All of Excellent Quality. Bottles and Hamper included. Delivered within 2 miles of London free of Carriage.—Cork and Co., 8, Walbrook, City.

TEAS.—WHOLESALE PRICES

	s. d.		s. d.
Good common Black	3 6	Fine Pekoe Souchong	4 6
Strong Congou	3 4	Superior do.	4 8
Fine do., Pekoe flavour	3 8	Finest do. imported	5 0
Good delivered in all parts of town daily.		Country Orders, amounting to 40s, sent free to all parts of Great Britain.

MANSELL and Co., 2, Bucklersbury, Cheapside.

SIX Pounds of good sound TEA for Eighteen Shillings.—The EAST INDIA TEA COMPANY announce a further reduction of from 4d. to 6d. per lb., and are resolved, while the Merchants continue to supply the market so liberally, that the public shall reap the benefit.

No. 9, Great St. Helen's Churchyard, Bishopsgate.

FISH and BARRELLED OYSTERS for CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.—JOHN WEBB'S VENTILATING HAMPER has Friends the Public he has a regular supply of the Small NATIVE OYSTERS—Best Scotch Salmon, Trout, Whiting, Cod, Soles, Turbot, Brill, Turkeys, Geese, Fowls, Rabbits, Hares, &c. Orders per Mail, Coach, Steam Packet, or Railway, Every Morning, by which arrangement his NATIVES will travel any distance in good condition, and will be found equal to the finest FISH as soon as caught, at the lowest prices of the day's market. Orders per post, &c. have the same attention as personal purchasers. Very Superior Oyster Rooms.—Fish and Game Establishment, 158, Cheapside.

PROTECTION from the WET and COLD—SUPERIOR WINTER WATERPROOF WRAPPERS, and OUTSIDE GARMENTS of all kinds, for the present season. For the convenience of selection, &c., an extensive variety of the same, also of BEDFORD'S VENTILATING MORNA has Friends the Public he has a regular supply of the Small NATIVE OYSTERS—Best Scotch Salmon, Trout, Whiting, Cod, Soles, Turbot, Brill, Turkeys, Geese, Fowls, Rabbits, Hares, &c. In the Needs, per

GRAND MILITARY DISPLAY.—STORMING OF CARISBROOKE CASTLE.

THE BESIEGERS ATTACKING THE OUTPOSTS

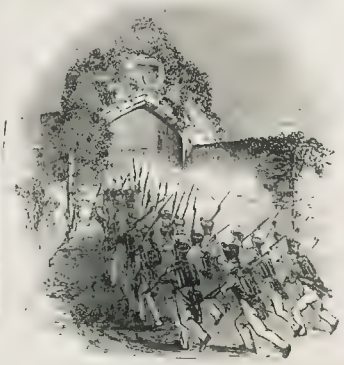
ENTRANCE TO THE VILLAGE OF CARISBROOKE

STORMING OF CARISBROOKE CASTLE

The inhabitants of the Isle of Wight and neighbouring towns have just witnessed one of the finest military displays that has taken place in the island for upwards of forty years—and it was then only excelled by the number of troops at that period, quartered in the island; at the time we allude to there were then 40,000, but on the present occasion there were only about 1200, consisting of the whole of the officers and soldiers of the several depôts stationed at Albany barracks, or, perhaps, better known by the name of Parkhurst, viz., of the 12th, 20th, 23d, 42d Highlanders, 71st, 91st, and 97th, together with the Rifle Brigade. In our 39th No. of the second volume, page 56, we gave a brief account of this relic of antiquity, also two engravings, being more particularly in reference to its having been the abode of the ill-fated monarch, King Charles I., who had been for some time confined a prisoner within the castle walls. We purpose now presenting our readers with a description of the building and the scene which animated those who were fortunate enough to be eye witnesses of the storming of the castle on the 28th ult.

Carisbrooke Castle is situate about a mile south-west of the town of Newport, and about six miles from Cowes, upon a lofty eminence overlooking the village of Carisbrooke. The most ancient part of the castle is that which stands on the west side, next the grand entrance, and forms an almost parallelogram, with the corners rounded off. Much of the buildings, undoubtedly, is the Norman era, and a small part on of it is probably Saxon. The "Keep" is situate on the north side of the fortress, and was built in 1262; this is upon the summit of an artificial mound, and is 60 feet in height, the ascent to which being by a flight of 81 steps. In the reign of Elizabeth, the castle, together with the whole of the buildings, was enclosed by a wall faced with stone, and defended by a deep moat, both of which still remain, though the former is much dilapidated. The whole space with in the centre occupies about twenty acres, and the entire circuit of the walls about three-quarters of a mile.

The site and locality were admirably adapted for a splendid display of military science, the approaches being very numerous, and consequently gave an excellent idea of the method of concentrating the forces at one given point. Accordingly, every arrangement was made for the storming of the castle, or rather to take it by assault, and that a sham fight, by the whole of the depôts, to the number of about 1200, should take place, and the country, to the extent of two miles, adjoining the castle, should be occupied by the troops.



THE BESIEGERS ENTERING THE CASTLE.

The day was peculiarly fine for the spectacle, being cool and dry. Every commanding hill or situation was occupied by splendid equipages containing the élite of the island, and many thousand spectators, clad in their gay costume, particularly the high road to Clatterford, as well as the lane above Mount Joy, the seat of the Misses Gunter.

About noon, the forces intended for the defence of the castle arrived on the ground. They consisted of the 12th and 20th depôts, with that of the 42nd Highlanders, whose tartans and plumes had a most superb effect. Having fetta borrah about half-past eleven o'clock, they marched up the way at New Village and halted at "Castle View," and were then told off into divisions to occupy the various defensive positions. A company of Highlanders were placed on the keep, which now displayed a white flag, while other troops were placed in various parts of the parapets of the castle. A reserve was formed in line on the brow of the hill, under cover of the south-west bastion and the round towers, forming the grand entrance to the castle. The outposts and reconnoitring party were also thrown out, and scouts and skirmishers were posted in all directions for defence. Everything being now prepared, the besiegers, or enemy, consisting of the 23rd, under the command of Captain Seymour, the 91st, under Captain Melvin, the 71st, under Captain Spiers, and the 97th, under Captain Campbell, together with the Rifle Brigade, were observed advancing in two divisions—one from the Newport-road, and the other from the Forest-road—the Sappers and Miners and the Rifle Brigade severally carrying with them scaling-ladders, planks for pontoons, &c. The attack commenced with the outposts; the first being made by a company of the 71st, on that occupied by a division of the 12th, at the corner of Gatcombe-road, and a smart fire was kept up for a considerable time. The firing on the outposts now became general, the besiegers having advanced in different points, and the first outpost being taken, a company of the 12th, at the sound of the bugle, retreated, under the protection of the fire of another defending party, who were secreted in an adjoining plantation placed there for the additional purpose of checking the advance of the enemy up a narrow defile, leading to the castle, which appeared to be stoutly defended during the greater part of the engagement; the Rifles forming a left wing, and firing with precision upon the flanks of the Highlanders, who were obliged to make a flank movement. Here they closed, and the 23rd were signally successful; the 42nd Highlanders, however, covering their retreat in gallant style; and, continuing to do so, were closely pursued by the 23rd—the latter being aided by some Rifles, and some skirmishers of the 97th—till they were ultimately driven from the hill into the highway, under a heavy fire from the left gabion of the castle. The 23rd continued to advance close upon the defenders in their retreat within the grand entrance, and, before the gates could be closed upon the besiegers, the gallant 23rd entered, and took possession of the portcullis. The rapid advance which followed was decisive.

The ammunition of the defenders being nearly expended, they were under the necessity of abandoning their posts to the enemy, who were now under the very walls of the castle. This attack was by far the most brilliant of the operations; but while all this was going on, an attack was simultaneously made at the north buttress by the 71st, who were then scaling the walls; this part was defended by a company of the 20th, who kept up an incessant fire under cover of the gallant 42nd from the keep. After a severe struggle, the 71st routed the outposts, and entered the castle by this route. At the same time the 97th and 71st attacked the east gate, which they stormed, after an apparently strong resistance by the defensive on the ramparts, and a most effective shower of musketry from the watch tower and embattlements. The rapidity and accuracy with which these movements were effected, attracted general admiration. Other movements now came up, and the besiegers made their way de[illegible] the keep, [illegible] of the castle; in the course of a few minutes the above flag was hauled down, and the "Union" hoisted in its stead. Peace being now proclaimed, they sent whilst those who remained as the occupants of the castle, with their guests, upwards of 300 nobility and gentry, shortly afterwards sat down to a most sumptuous déjeuné à la fourchette, embracing every delicacy that heart could wish for, and which was served up in the banqueting-room of the castle, in splendid style, by the messman of the depôt battalion. In the evening the whole company tripped it on the light fantastic toe, to the tunes afforded them by the "Highland piper," aided by the assistance of a quadrille band.

[illegible]

London: Printed and Published by WILLIAM LITTLE, at 198, Strand, where all communications for the Editor are requested to be addressed.—SATURDAY, December 16, 1843.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 86.—Vol. III.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1843. [Sixpence.

OFFICE, 198, STRAND.

OUR CHRISTMAS GREETING.

The close of another year draws us into the good old custom of greeting our kind and tried friends with warm wishes for their happiness—with grateful thanks, too, for their proved goodwill towards ourselves.

When, upon the first page of the first number of this journal, we sanguinely mapped out to the public the plan which we had prepared for their approval, we used words of ambitious import and strong signification—words which told that we burned ardently to accomplish much good to promote improving impulses—to stimulate the whole frame, being, and genius of Art-Literature, and to make it plain, potent, and practical in the stirring world of news. We did not seek to out-bound the fair decorum of modesty, nor to found claims of presumption upon the generosity of public indulgence; but, still we ventured much in promise—for we had before us a broad and tempting field—and we did indicate how much might be sown in it by our own industry and enterprise, and how much might be gathered at the harvest, if the public would but come to reap. And come they did. The seed we dared to sow sprang up into lofty crops, which (witness our two splendid volumes of the world's history) were gathered into noble granaries. But the ground was tilled by society, and our large army of readers ploughed the furrows and farmed the soil. The public set its fiat of approval upon our project—emigrated into our new colony with simultaneous voice—laid the axe manfully to our forests of difficulties—cleared away the brushwood—raised structures of hope and promise joyously and fast—and anon the new settlement (for the Illustrated London News is now a permanent settlement beyond dispute) was not only populated, but cultivated, and dispensing its crops of produce to all quarters of the world.

And we are now plunged into the cordialities and congratulations of our second Christmas. Let us confess that we do not, cannot, meet the occasion without strong and earnest feelings of abounding joy—without heart-exultation, which we hope has no alloy of selfishness, nor any taint of the meanness of mere vanity in its pride. We do hope our thousands of ready friends will estimate fairly the honourable gladness which we really feel as we open our hearts to them at the close of another year, and in our old English anniversary of festivity and smiles; for, in proportion to our present honest and unrepressed elation would our disappointment have been bitter and grieving, if we did not think that the welcome awarded to us in thousands of happy homes was in some measure the reward of sound good achieved by us throughout the land. We will not, with any squeamish hypocrisy, throw away from us the glorious consciousness that, besides promoting the progress of literature and art, and elevating the whole character of public intelligence, we have defended religion, advocated poverty, and upheld the cause of virtue, charity, and love. In the early part of our career, we addressed the clergy of the empire—we told them one and all—in forwarding to each of them a copy of this journal—that there was a genuine and sincere ambition on the part of its proprietors and conductors to produce (aided on its march to popularity by the lure and fascination of illustrative attraction) a newspaper that, for the mature and the reasoning, should fulfil all the purposes of such an organ without partiality or prejudice; that for the young and thoughtless should fix landmarks of instruction, and sow germs of knowledge; that to the wealthy should administer with the pabulum of curiosity the richer luxuries of art; that to the poor should proudly award the undeviating earnestness of a solemn and sympathizing friendship; but that to all, and for all, and above all, should implant the purest principles of an enlightened morality in the universal breast—opposing all the bad elements which in some quarters have tended to deprave the press of the country, and seeking to displace them from the sanctuary of families by the advocacy of a holier philosophy, and a more untarnished creed. It was to such professions—not we trust all unfulfilled—that the clergy responded with a generous patronage, so that not only more than one-half of their entire body subscribed to the paper, but their recommendations and example in towns, villages, and hamlets, all over the land, fixed it in the English home—crowned it with domestic favour, and made it what it now assumes to be—for its respectability, its circulation, and its influences—par excellence, the Family Paper of the Week.

That clergy of all denominations should so have promoted the success of the Illustrated London News, is a practical security for its moral conduct, and the fair purity of its pictured page—that politicians of all parties should have awarded it an equal amount of patronage, destroys nothing of its influence, and should imply nothing of indecision in its tone. To assail the bad, and to promote the good, among all classes of our fellow subjects, has been our steady aim, and in that—which is the true secret of our strength and influence—we falter not a jot. If we uphold sound institutions—espouse order and respect the laws—do we therefore anchor in the bosom of aristocracy, and wink at the corruptions of the rich? No! but we have sounded the voice of independence in their mansions and palaces, and we have dragged the miserable poor within their gates; we have bade them grasp the hand of Charity, and pour out blessings and bounty from her lap. We have sought—for the poor man's sake—to strike at the root of every oppression, and nobles and judges and magistrates have met from us equally the censure which we deemed to be just. But, on the other hand, we have sought carefully to preserve the social balance, and to let no man fall. We have employed no levelling principles—no strength to pull down power that is good. Nobles, judges, magistrates, have had our praise (as well as blame), whenever their acts have been surrounded by the dignity of virtue; and none have honoured the position, and admired the graces of a lofty station, more than we. Nor have our advocacy of the interests of the poor, and our sincere desire to alleviate their misery, ever led us into false sympathies, or initiated a tone of revenge. We have never incited to disaffection, and our doctrine has been, not "the poor against the rich," but "the poor for the rich," and "the rich for the poor," and all for honesty, charity, religion, loyalty, love of country, and the brotherhood that binds mankind.

We are here only speaking of principles, and although we have laboured industriously, we are humbly conscious of the poor share which we have taken in working them out—against the vicious tendencies of party warfare and political strife.

But in our sphere we have succeeded, and although we must ever be ambitious to grow more powerful for good, yet we are well content and humbly grateful for the measure of prosperity which crowns the Illustrated London News; and we return heartily to the expression of that flowing happiness which fertilizes all the spirit with its sparkling joy, as we meet the smiles and kindness of uncounted thousands of readers, and bid them "Merry Christmas" with the familiarity of a growing friendship, and the sincerity of a confirmed esteem.

To all we say "God bless you," and believe that the wish which is here only recorded in our paper has an echo and emphasis in the hearts of those who direct the destinies of the Illustrated London News.

FAMILY OF NORTH AMERICAN INDIANS, PRESENTED TO HER QUEEN, ON WEDNESDAY LAST.

THE OJIBBEWAY INDIANS.

A party of nine natives of the wildernesses of America, are now in London, from the north-eastern shore of Lake Huron, well illustrating the modes, costumes, and personal appearance of these wild denizens of the forest. The party consists of two aged chiefs, four young men (reputed warriors), two women, and one girl, ten years old.

A few days since Mr. Catlin, who seems to have taken charge of the party since their arrival, had the honour to present them to his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, Baron Knesebeck, and the Hon. C. A. Murray; all of whom seemed highly pleased with their wild appearance, and also with the several dances which they then gave; and his Royal Highness transmitted to them several valuable and appropriate presents.

On Wednesday last, by her Majesty's desire, they were conducted by Mr. Catlin, to Windsor Castle, where they were received into the presence of her Majesty, his Royal Highness Prince Albert, her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, and the Royal Household.

After his Royal Highness had shaken the hands of the chiefs and warriors, the old chief, who is 75 years old, advanced and addressed her Majesty in the following manner, as interpreted by Mr. Catlin:—

Great Mother—I have been very sorrowful since I left my home, but the Great Spirit has brought us all safe over the great waters, and my heart will now be glad that we can see your face. We are now happy.

These are all the words I have to say. My words are few, for I am not very well to-day. The other chief will tell you what I intended to say.

The war-chief then rose, and in a very energetic manner made the following speech, which was also literally interpreted to her Majesty.

Great Mother—The Great Spirit has been kind to us, your children, in protecting us on our long journey here. And we are now happy that we are allowed to see your face. It makes our hearts glad to see the faces of so many Saganashes (English) in this country, and all wearing such pleasant looks. We think the people here must be very happy.

Mother—We have been often told that there was a great fire in this country—that its light shone across the great water; and we see now where this great light arises. And we believe that it shines from this great wigwam to all the world.

Mother—We have seen many strange things since we came to this country. We see that your wigwams are large, and the light that is in them is bright. Our wigwams are small, and our light is not strong. We are not rich, but yet we have plenty of food to eat.

Mother—Myself and my friends here are your friends your children. We have used our weapons against your enemies. And for many years we have received liberal presents from this country, which have made us quite happy and comfortable in our wigwams.

Mother—The chief who has just spoken and myself have fought and bled by the side of the greatest warrior who ever lived—Tecumseh.

Mother—Our hearts are glad at what we have this day seen—that we have been allowed to see your face. And when we get home our words will be listened to in the councils of our nation.

This is all I have to say.

After this the war chief took into his hand his drum, or tambour, on which he commenced beating, and singing at the same time, which called his warriors on to their feet; and they then performed in succession, with all their wild and startling effect, the Medicine Dance, the Pipe Dance, and the War Dance, much to the apparent surprise as well as amazement of her Majesty. After which, through the Hon. Mr. Murray, Prince Albert "assured the chiefs of her Majesty's great gratification at the interview, also of her Majesty's friendship for the Indians, and desire that they may have a safe and pleasant journey home to their native land, to their families and friends."

After this, the party of Indians partook of the refreshments prepared in an adjoining apartment, and returned in good cheer to London.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, DECEMBER 19.

SPAIN.

The disgraceful affair of M. Olozaga has assumed a new feature, and it is more than probable that it will be hushed up. The Ministers, acting—so it is reported—under the advice of Count Bresson, the new French Ambassador, and who reached Madrid on the 7th, have made overtures to the Progressist party, to the effect that should they consent to the return of Christina to Spain, the accusation against M Olozaga would be abandoned. The Progressists refused: the Ministers now became alarmed, and their vacillating conduct caused many of their friends to waver against them. Espartero, it is said, is now on the frontiers of Portugal, the Queen at Barcelona. The committee is now formed and is composed of Messrs. Madoz, Lopez, Aylion, Moreno Lopez, and Cortezon, Progressists; and Mestre, Pasada and Pasey Oder, Moderates. Thus the Progressists have a great majority decidedly favourable to Olozaga. As a contre coup, the Ministers, on the 11th, sent M. Antonio Cortes to Paris, requesting Christina to cross the frontier without loss of time. Cortes is the gentleman who made a private interview with Christina, which does not take by the Ministers, contrary to their will. Her conduct, however, continues a secret—physicians are not let out—and even the Hotel de Castille remains in statu quo. Spain for the present, at least, presents a most melancholy picture of the times.

A very warm debate took place in the Congress on the 12th M Mendizabal de la Rua spoke against and M Olozaga in favour of the report. The latter, in part, very successfully refuted the charges brought against him. He said he had been forced into the step he had taken, and that he was ready to leave the Secretariat at the slightest intimation. He concluded, by stating, that he could not be considered responsible for the acts of the Regent, as he was not consulted on them. He was ready to submit to the decision of the Chamber, and to the trial, but he must protest against the report, as it was not in accordance with the Constitution. The debate was adjourned to the 13th, when M Olozaga commenced a long speech in support of the report

POLICE.

LOW STREET.—On Thursday, a highly-respectably dressed young woman, named Jane Thornberry, weeping bitterly, was charged, before Mr. Jardine, with robbing her aunt, Miss Jane Thornberry, a maiden lady, living at No. 186, High Holborn. The prisoner, while on a visit to her aunt, in November last, took away with her, on her return home to Manchester, a hundred yards of silk, a diamond ring, and a dress belonging to another lady. Sergeant Weston F 6 gave the charge at Manchester, and apprehended her; and at Messrs. Hall and Goodwin's, pawnbrokers, Derby, found the property pledged. The prisoner fainted away in the dock, on being committed to take her trial.

John Robinson, the man charged with uttering fictitious cheques, pretending they were from tradesmen who wished to be accommodated with change, was brought up, and fully committed for trial. We gave the particulars in our paper of last week.

CLERKENWELL.—Joseph Pearson, a half-starved miserable-looking man, who appeared to be suffering from bodily pain, was charged with shoplifting. It appeared from the evidence that, between two and three o'clock on the previous day, the prisoner went up to the window of Mr Lindner, a respectable pawnbroker, in North-place, Gray's Inn-lane, and suddenly snatched his hand through the centre pane of glass and pulled out a watch which was hanging on a rod. Mr. Lindner immediately ran out, the prisoner never attempted to slir, but as soon as Mr. Lindner made his appearance, he put the watch into his hand, saying, "I am starving, I want to be punished. I want to be made an example of, and to go to prison."—Mr Combe (to the prisoner): Where do you come from?—Prisoner: I am a native of Woolwich, and have been wandering about for several days looking for work, but could find none.—Mr. Combe: What do you say to the charge?—Prisoner: I did it on purpose: I was starving.—Mr. Lindner said the prisoner did not evince the least wish to escape, and he wished to have him summarily disposed of.—Mr. Combe said he had no power to dispose of it summarily, and should send him for trial.—Mr. Mallet (the clerk) humanely suggested that the prisoner should have some food, as he seemed to be in a state of ill. To this suggestion the worthy magistrate at once acceded

WORSHIP-STREET.—John Lewis and William Fitch, two dirty-looking men were charged, at this office, with the commission of a ruffianly assault on two police constables, and the latter with attempting to rescue a prisoner, and with obstructing the police in the execution of their duty. The charge was fully proved, and they were sent to the House of Correction for one month.

LYMON-HALL.—Six medical students belonging to one of the Borough hospitals were charged with creating a disturbance, and assaulting the police.—Between two and three o'clock on Tuesday morning the defendants were apprehended to have walked into Three Crane-court, leading out of the Borough High-street, and created shouting and making use of most discordant noises. A witness living in the court, whose wife was very ill, went down and requested them to desist, but they paid no regard to him, and still continued hallooing and hoot ing. Serjeant Durrep, hearing the uproar, went into the court, and on remonstrating with the defendants, he was immediately attacked by one of the students who struck him in the face, and made his mouth and nose bleed. The serjeant was compelled to use his staff, and while he was being struck his assailant, whose face and head exhibited marks of punishment. The serjeant was then attacked by others of the defendants, and more policemen coming up, a general row took place, during which the defendants were all secured, and taken into custody. The charge was fully proved, and they were sent to the House of Correction for one month.

LYMON-HALL.—Six medical students belonging to one of the Borough hospitals were charged with creating a disturbance, and assaulting the police.—Between two and three o'clock on Tuesday morning the defendants were apprehended to have walked into Three Crane-court, leading out of the Borough High-street, and created shouting and making use of most discordant noises. A witness living in the court, whose wife was very ill, went down and requested them to desist, but they paid no regard to him, and still continued hallooing and hoot ing. Serjeant Durrep, hearing the uproar, went into the court, and on remonstrating with the defendants, he was immediately attacked by one of the de endants who struck him in the face, and made his mouth and nose bleed. The serjeant was compelled to use his staff, and while he was being struck his assailant, whose face and head exhibited marks of punishment. The serjeant was then attacked by others of the defendants, and more policemen coming up, a general row took place, during which the defendants were all secured, and taken into custody. The charge was fully proved, and they were sent to the House of Correction for one month.

MANSION-HOUSE.—The Lord Mayor said, he wished it to be known to his fellow-citizens, that he had received several anonymous letters, informing him that, in consequence of the carelessness of many of the inhabitants, the footways were in a very slippery condition He had no doubt whatever upon the subject, and was most desirous of seeing the ordinance which the law enjoined done. If, therefore, his anonymous correspondents, instead of making written communications to him, would summon those who caused the nuisance to the Mansion-house, he should take care to inflict such penalties as would be likely to keep the streets in a safer state of things. He expected that, as the Lord Mayor himself could not personally interfere to cure the evil, the mint thus thrown out would be taken with all possible expedition.

MARLBOROUGH-STREET.—Thomas Hester was brought before Mr. Maltby, for final examination, on numerous charges of swindling. In addition to the cases on which the prisoner has been fully committed, the particulars of which we have already appeared, the following charges was brought forward:—Mr. Webber, saddle and harness-maker, Soho, said, the prisoner entered his shop a short time ago, and asked him if he knew Mr. Frederick Hodgson, of Wellington-street. He said, he did. Hickman had been a customer for some time; upon which prisoner replied, "Ah, Harry's a good sort of fellow. He found fault with my saddle the last time I went a hunting with him, and he gave me a new one, and I promised to call and get it furnish me with just such a one as I want." The prisoner ultimately fixed upon a bridle and saddle; but, on putting his hand in his pocket, said, he had no money, and proposed to sell prosecutor some potatoes, provender, &c. At the same time, a sample, saying that his carts came three times a week to Covent-garden market. Witness was ultimately induced by his plausible manner, to let him have the saddle and bridle, and very shortly afterwards he learned the prisoner was a swindler. Mr. Hickman said, he knew nothing to the prisoner's advantage. He had never hunted with the prisoner, nor had he given him the recommendation he spoken of.—The prisoner declined saying anything, and was then fully committed.

SHIPPING INTELLIGENCE.

CAPTURE AND DESTRUCTION OF A BRITISH WHALER, AND MASSACRE OF THREE OF THE CREW.

For some time past much interest has been created at the east end of the metropolis, in consequence of the reported capture of the Sarah and Elizabeth by pirates and the partial massacre of the crew in Coffin's Bay, which we allude to state turns out to be too well founded, as appears by a statement furnished by Captain Billingham, the owner of the ill-fated ship, who has just arrived in this country.—The Sarah and Elizabeth was the property of Mr. Thomas Wyld, of Ratcliffe, and was about 300 tons. She sailed from Gravesend on the 24th April, 1841, and reached the bay on the 19th of May, when her cargo of sperm oil was 850 barrels. On the morning of the 22nd two boats, manned by eight men of the crew, were sent ashore for a supply of firewood and water, and shortly afterwards the captain espied five large prows bearing down upon his vessel; but the rest of the narrative we must give in his own words:—"Perceiving they were pirates, I directed the remainder of the crew to arm themselves. The muskets were got up and two boats' crew on the deck got ready, but, unfortunately, the men were unable to find the ball cartridges, and we were all placed in the greatest jeopardy for most of the pirates were armed with spears, guns, and other weapons. By this time the watering party were attacked by about thirty pirates, who were in two smaller prows. Seeing the approach of the pirates, some of the men commenced running along the beach, while the remainder were scuffling with their opponents. Observing the imminent danger in which those on board were placed, as the five prows, containing between 400 and 500 men, were fast closing on the ship, I ordered my men to launch the whale boats, and pull for their lives. Before many seconds had elapsed we left the ship. The natives pushed on their prows to overtake us, but luckily our whale boats were too swift a craft to be captured; still they showed some disposition to continue the chase, and fired a shot, which passed my mate's distance of boats length or feel. Seeing the utter impossibility of saving some of my crew who were on shore, I put in and succeeded in rescuing several of them, but the remainder were nowhere to be seen. There was no time to search for them, the pirates' boats being close on us, and we had not a moment to be putting out to sea, in the hope of gaining some assistance. In this we were exceedingly fortunate, for in less than half an hour we perceived a sail a few miles distant, and succeeded in coming up with her, and found her to be the Victoria, Captain Hardie, who immediately sent boats to communicate the intelligence to Captain Mathews, the Alert, and Captain Blake of the Pilot, which vessels were lying a short distance from the Victoria. The boats took place on the 24th, and the mode of retaking the Sarah and Elizabeth. It was determined to send all the men that could be spared from the three ships, and accordingly three boats in the charge of Captain Hardie, three under the charge of Captain Blake, followed by a cutter of the Alert, under the command of Mr. Grossmith, Mr. Mitchell, and Mr. Mardinson (Captain Martinson being ill), with two more boats in my charge (eleven in number, pressed into the mission. The three above-named ships lay sixteen miles from the unfortunate whaler: the weather, however, being fine, they gained rapidly towards the spot, smoke rising apparently from her deck. On arriving within a few miles of her we noticed a tremendous blaze, followed by a terrific explosion. This was conjectured to be the powder magazine which had blown up, which proved to be the case, for upon coming up to her we discovered that she was a wreck. On coming to search the unfortunate vessel, the

The events of the later years of his life must be tolerably familiar to every reader, but that life was a long one, and the incidents of the earlier portion of it may not be so well remembered. He arrived at the age of manhood when the outburst of military ardour that followed the attempts of the sovereigns of Europe to destroy the Republican Government of France was beginning to shake the thrones of the Old World; and he was destined to see his own country overwhelmed by the stream that Rolled down empires in its flood.

France declared war against the Low Countries in 1793—the struggle of the prince and the people was unavailing; a Marshal of the Republican Army, the fierce Davoust, overran Holland—England made a vain, and, for herself, disastrous effort to expel the French from part of it; and, finally, a brother of the "setter up and puller down of kings" Louis Napoleon—wore the crown which was the inheritance of the House of Orange. Nothing is more certainly proved by history than the fact of how little either of individual skill or energy will make a reputation for a legitimate sovereign, yet William Frederick did not manifest even that little. In the years which elapsed between the failure of the struggle against France, till the contest was again renewed against Napoleon when Emperor, nothing was heard of him—it is true he was not then king, but he was the heir of a crown that might have been worth some effort; but he took no part in the great contest; he was the passive waiter upon those events which the alliance of the sovereigns, the diplomacy of Metternich, the almost insane personal ambition of Napoleon, and the utter prostration and exhaustion of France, worn out by feeding the war of twenty years, all brought about in his favour. We believe he was present at the battles of Jena and Wagram, but he never gave any proof of skill as a leader. The fall of Napoleon restored him to his kingdom; he was proclaimed on the 16th of March, 1815, and entered Brussels as Sovereign on the 5th of April following. From that time till 1830, he governed Holland and Belgium, and so ruled as to produce the utmost dissatisfaction among his Catholic subjects;—the Belgian provinces always had more attachment to France than to Holland, and the feeling was increased by the somewhat intolerant measures of the Dutch King and Ministers. Dutch officers were alone employed and promoted in the army and the state; Dutch laws were imposed on a people that preferred their own; the use of the Dutch language enforced in the courts of law, among a people who did not understand it;—all measures marked by a combination of pride, weakness, and folly. Add to these causes of discontent, the fact that the King was also the greatest merchant of his kingdom, having a share in almost every manufacture, and a part in nearly all great commercial enterprises, promoting the commerce of the country, but doing it in such a manner that whoever might suffer, the coffers of the King were replenished, and we have a tolerable list of evils that might be tolerated for a long while, but would certainly not be borne for ever. The crisis came; the mine so ready to explode was fired by the musquetry of the "three days," that drove the Bourbons from Paris. In the same year William Frederick ceased to be the sovereign of Belgium; his sceptre passed from him, and "his heritage did another take." A far abler head than that of William Frederick now wears the crown once possessed by the line of Nassau.

PORTRAIT OF THE EX-KING OF HOLLAND.

Thenceforth he ruled Holland alone, and ruled it as he had done before, according to Dutch prejudices and modes of thinking and acting, so that the years passed in political quietude, if not in domestic peace. But it is said that love, the great master passion—the tenant of all hearts, and the leveller of all ranks—had found its way to the bosom of the phlegmatic king; the dreams of the money-making monarch were disturbed, and he thought less than of old of guilders and florins, of the price of the funds, and of ships to the east and west. He had become enamoured of the Countess d'Oultremont, and various rumours were circulated with respect to their connection. The most credible seemed to be that she was united to him by what is not uncommon among the royalties of the continent—a left-handed marriage. After a time, however, it was stated that his Majesty intended to make her legally his wife; this intention on his part excited the greatest dissatisfaction among his family and his people. But William Frederick was endowed with a considerable share of obstinacy, and took the extreme step, as some would consider it, of abdicating the throne, and retiring to a private station, rather than resign the lady to whom he had given his affections. This purpose he carried out in 1840, ten years after his expulsion from Belgium, and his son, known in England as the Prince of Orange, when an unsuccessful suitor for the hand of the Princess Charlotte, succeeded him. From that time he lived in the most complete privacy, and perhaps with more happiness than he ever experienced on the throne His disposition was that of a quiet, worthy, plodding, money-making merchant, able to deal well enough with the details of business, but incapable of comprehending or giving effect to the more enlarged principles required in the ruler of a kingdom, and more especially of a kingdom in which the people are divided by different habits, languages and religions. He never ceased to consider the Belgians as rebels, and was as obstinate in this respect as in insisting on the offensive measures that made them so. He did not in any respect support the reputation of the house of Orange, which has given to Europe good diplomatists and generals in abundance, our William the Third was born. He died enormously rich, possessing a larger private fortune than any crowned head in Europe, with the exception perhaps of Louis Philippe; and the half of this mass of wealth he has left to the lady for whom he sacrificed a crown. Marc Anthony lost the world for Cleopatra, and was content to lose it; the sacrifice made by William Frederick was not so great, yet it was greater than most men would consent to. Who would have thought that the eloquent, the handsome, the passionate and profligate Triumvir of Rome would find an imitation on a small scale in the king of the most methodical, most dull, and most money-making of nations?

NEW GOVERNMENT HOUSE, SYDNEY.

THE NEW GOVERNMENT HOUSE, SYDNEY.

As many of our readers, and, indeed, a majority of the public, must feel an interest in our colonies, and especially in that most interesting one of New South Wales, we are induced to place before them a view of the new Government House at Sydney, received by the last arrival from thence. How extraordinary has been the origin and progress of the truly English colony of New South Wales, is evinced by the mere fact that its foundation dates only from the year 1788, when some thousand British colonists or adventurers, with five head of horned cattle, seven horses, and twenty-nine sheep, settled there; and that, although 15,000 miles distant from the mother country, it has so vastly increased up to this present time, as to possess a chief city and suburbs containing nearly 30,000 people, besides large and small settlements throughout the country, 8,000,000 sheep; 1,000,000 cattle; 30,000 horses, and a very extensive import and export trade, chiefly with the mother country. It is to be regretted that this interesting colony has been for some time past, and continued to be by the last accounts, in a very depressed state, and for which various reasons have been assigned, but as the parent state has happily during the present year, been progressively emerging from the commercial and financial difficulties which had oppressed her for so long a period, it may reasonably be hoped that the improvement will extend to her colonies.

The foundation of the new Government House at Sydney was commenced in 1837, during the administration of Sir Richard Bourke. The plan and designs were furnished by E. Blore, Esq., architect, of London, and this magnificent structure has been brought to a satisfactory completion by the colonial architect, M. W. Lewis, Esq.

The main body of the building is 170 feet long, and 40 feet high; it is surmounted by a tower 20 feet square, and 20 feet high from its base, which carries a flag-staff of 50 feet in height. The interior of the walls is of brick, the exterior being of rubbed sandstone. The suite of reception rooms, when the folding-doors are thrown open, extend 105 feet, are 20 feet high, and elegantly furnished. The chimney-pieces are splendid specimens of colonial marble.

On the 24th of May last, the present governor, Sir George Gipps, opened this magnificent building with a ball and supper, in celebration of her Majesty's birthday.

JOCKOSOT.

...ned societies and literary circles of the metropolis and its ...ood are at present much interested in the private exhibi... ...nique member of that ill-fated section of the human ... "Indians" of North America. This individual, who ... the name of Jockosot—or the Walking Bear—has been brought to this country by William Wallace, an attaché of the American Embassy, and himself no ordinary subject of interest, as "a distinguished speaker and poet"—to endeavour to obtain, through the mediation of the United States Minister, the restitution of some territorial privileges to which the Indian considers his tribe to be entitled. We feel a pleasure, therefore, in giving him a wider publicity than he is likely to obtain through the exclusive media of scientific parties.

Jockosot, of the tribe of the Sacks and Foxes, was born in the state of Mississippi, and is now 35 years of age. His mother's name was Jocharna—the She Fox—while his father, who earned a bloody chieftainship by his successful wars against the Osages, was known by the more terrible appellative of Katuchasha THE BEAR. Their hopeful son—noble in gait and fleet of foot—was, from those regal qualities, dignified by the title of WALKING BEAR, a name by which he is still well known in his native haunts. On the death of the royal "Bear," Jockosot—having taken several scalps from the Pawnees—was deemed to possess sufficient cunning and prowess to permit his inheritance of the vacant tomahawk, and he was accordingly inaugurated chief of his martial tribe. In this savage pre-eminence he passed several seasons with credit to his skill as a hunter, and to his patriotism as a ruler of the people, who, notwithstanding centuries of oppression, have never yet in a single instance submitted to the yoke of slavery. About ten years since he removed with his tribe to an advantageous locality in the state of Missouri, and there the Sacks and Foxes still reside. In that and the adjacent states they are celebrated for strategie and valour, and for being the tribe to which the dreaded "Black Hawk" belonged. At present, in consequence of the battles with the white and hostile tribes, they are much reduced, and are so fast decreasing, that, from once numbering eight thousand, they may be expected in a few years to become extinct. We have learned that Mr. Wallace, after showing Jockosot to the Ethnological Society, will introduce him to the London public in the first of a series of lectures, which he intends to deliver on the United States of America. Our engraving exhibits two portraits of Jockosot—one as he sang to us a "death song," and the other in the performance of the war dance. When our sketches were shown to him, and it was explained they were for the "big paper," he, for the first time in his life, broke through the reserve and self possession of the Indian spirit, and expressed—surprise.

JOCKOSOT, THE NORTH AMERICAN INDIAN CHIEF.

NEWSPAPER LONDON NEWS

GRAND JUNCTION RAILWAY FETE AT CREWE.—THE TEA-ROOM.

GRAND JUNCTION RAILWAY.—FETE AT CREWE.

The Crewe works of this important railway are situate at the angle of the junction of the three lines from Chester, Manchester, and Liverpool. About two years ago only the site could boast of but a few detached farm houses. The Company (and a few others) have imparted to it a very different aspect. Their own land—including the site of the works—is about 30 acres; and the whole is laid out in streets, and nearly covered with comfortable cottages in varied and distinctive styles uniform in the several streets. About twelve months ago the population was about 1000; it now amounts to double that number, of which about 1150 are families supported by the employment given by the Company, who own 250 of the cottages. The station-houses adjacent are handsome and commodious, and there are three fine bridges over the respective lines here meeting—the Chester-bridge (of three arches), the Liverpool-bridge, and the Crewe-bridge, over the general line southward, at the station. There are, also, schools, an assembly-room, committee-room for magistrates, &c. The Company have fitted up a portion of their buildings as a temporary Church of England, and have appointed their own chaplain. Some idea may be formed of the extent of the premises when we state that, including the interior yards, they have a frontage to the Liverpool line of 730 feet, and a width, at the broadest end (the form of the ground being in its general outline nearly a rectangled triangle), of about 500 feet. They cover, in fact, about seven acres. The whole of the buildings are of substantial brick work, with stone facings, and lay a claim to a degree of architectural neatness rarely found in structures of this class. The main rooms are of amazing extent. The "carriage manufactory" is 241 feet long by 74 feet wide. The "Engine, and Carriage, and under Repair Room," or "hospital," is 300 feet by 100 feet; the "Engine, in Steam Room," 140 by 84. The establishment, indeed (the Company having removed their works from Edge-hill and elsewhere to it, as the grand manufactory for the whole line), may, be said to be "the finest and most extensive railway workshop in the world."

Certain factories having been recently completed, the directors determined to give the superintendents, clerks, and workmen, as well as their wives, families, and acquaintances, a grand dinner, tea, and ball; and having fixed the most convenient day, preparations were made on a most extensive and liberal scale. The workmen received each four tickets of admission, so that they might invite their friends and acquaintances, (the females being admitted free to the tea and ball), the attendance was consequently very numerous—including not only the "beauty" of the village, but many of the farmers and their families for miles round the rapidly improving locality.

One of our engravings shows a general view of the railway station. The other illustration represents the tea and ball room. The latter was adorned with evergreens, some of them almost trees. Here, at one end, were seven rows of tables, handsomely laid out. The windows were filled in between with evergreens and roses. About one half was left open for the dance. At that end there was a painting of an immense landscape, representing a water-mill at work, with trees that assimilated with the green and tall real trees placed near them. There was also on one side a dense arbour, and a large orchestra covered with green cloth, 300 feet in length by 100 in breadth.

The dining room was 250 feet in length by 100 in breadth, and was profusely decorated with evergreens, drapery, and the Royal, and Liverpool, and Birmingham arms; there were spread five tables and two cross tables, at which about 500 of the workmen, their families, and friends, sat down to a substantial dinner at two o'clock.

The directors partook of refreshments in another part of the works, but immediately afterwards joined the general assemblage, and several of them addressed them.

The usual loyal toasts were given, and drank with enthusiastic demonstrations. "Prosperity and perpetuity to the Grand Junction Railway," was then proposed and received with thunders of applause. There were several other toasts given—as "The Chairman and Directors," "The Engineer," "Captain Huish and the other officers," "The Workmen," &c.

Towards five o'clock, the company retired to the tea-room, in which many of their friends from the neighbourhood had assembled. The spacious room was brilliantly lighted with gas, and large coloured railway lamps amongst the TREES and festoons of evergreens. The tea-tables were provided for the accommodation of 1200. Negus was also plentifully served. The tables scarcely occupied half of the room, the remaining space—an amazing extent—being left for the dance and promenade. There was a glorious concourse of "honest men and bonny lasses." The band, meantime, played a number of choice airs. Although there might be at times upwards of 1500 persons present, there was ample space for all throughout the whole evening. Several of the Directors and their families joined in the merry dance; and the Highland bagpipes finished off the ball with "The Campbells are Coming," and played in front of the assemblage when they retired.

While the dance was going on, the villagers and neighbours were entertained with a splendid exhibition of fire-works, provided at the expense of the Railway Company. Altogether, this was a joyful day. It was, in truth, a fascinating spectacle:—the young women—of whom there were large numbers—looked charmingly, and tripped admirably in country dances and quadrilles. All appeared to be delighted, and the whole fête will be long remembered; and, doubtless, stand recorded as one of the first remarkable events in the annals of the "juvenile city of Crewe."

THE RAILWAY STATION, CREWE.

DEATH OF LORD LYNEDOCH.

The month of December, 1843, proved fatal to one of the illustrious men who led our armies during the Peninsular war, and in the corresponding period of the present winter, another, and scarcely less distinguished, soldier has been "gathered to his fathers." Sir Thomas Graham, Lord Lynedoch, has paid the debt of nature. But though the corporeal portion of these great leaders must perish and disappear, the fame of their heroic deeds will be preserved and transmitted to the admiration of a remote posterity. When the existence of England as a nation shall cease to be remembered, their public services may be forgotten, but not until then. Amongst the most distinguished of the able and scientific soldiers who led the conquering armies of England from the Tagus to the Seine, was the venerable man whose death it is now our duty to record. His lordship expired on Monday night, a few minutes before eleven o'clock, at his town residence, Stratton-street, having for several days been very seriously and alarmingly indisposed.

The early life of this eminent man was that of a private country gentleman, but one whose mind had been cultivated in no ordinary degree. The classical attainments of his father, and the many elegant accomplishments of his mother were directed to the education of their son, who, owning to the death of both his elder brothers had become heir to the family estate. The judicious and careful education which he received, produced in him an extraordinary aptitude for study, and in his mind faculties early developed were fully matured by an extensive and long tour. He was born at Balgowan, Perthshire, in the year 1750. In 1774 his father died, and in the same year he married the Hon. Mary Cathcart, one of the three daughters of the ninth Lord Cathcart; and it is a remarkable fact that two other daughters of the same noble lord were married on the same day. Thus we find Mr. Graham apparently settled down for life in the quiet, unobtrusive, happy, condition of an independent country gentleman; and thus he continued in the enjoyment of great domestic felicity, surrounded by many estimable and attached friends, for a period of nearly twenty years. He had by this time attained the mature age of two and forty, and to all external seeming was one of the last men in the world likely to enter upon a military life.

In the year 1792, however, his domestic happiness was brought to a termination by the death of his wife, to whom he was most tenderly attached. The effect of this melancholy event proved sufficient almost to unsettle the mind of Mr. Graham, and his case adds one to the many instances that might be adduced, in which domestic calamities have procured for the state services of the highest order in the field and the cabinet. It may be said, that this change in his condition and prospects imparted almost a romantic character to the tenour of his life. His grief was so deep and lasting as greatly to injure his health, and he was recommended to travel, with a view of alleviating the one and restoring the other by change of scene and variety of objects. At Gibraltar, he fell into military society, and there he first conceived the possibility of obtaining some respite from his sorrows by devoting himself to the profession of arms.

Lord Hood was then about to sail for the south of France, and Mr. Graham had recently been a traveller in that country. He therefore gladly acceded to his proposition to accompany him as a volunteer. We accordingly find him, in the year 1793, landing with the British troops at Toulon, and serving as extra aide-de-camp to Lord Mulgrave (father to the present Marquis of Normanby), who was the general officer commanding-in-chief, and who marked by his particular thanks the zeal and able services of the elderly gentleman who had thus volunteered to be his aide-de-camp. He was always foremost in the attack, and on one occasion, at the head of a column, when a private soldier fell, Mr. Graham took up his musket and supplied his place in the front rank.

On returning to this country, he raised the first battalion of the 90th regiment, of which he was appointed Colonel Commandant on the 10th of February, 1794. This regiment formed part of the army under the command of Lord Moira (afterwards Marquis of Hastings). It passed the summer of 1795 at Isle Dieu whence it proceeded to Gibraltar. On the 22nd of July, 1795, the rank of colonel in the army was conferred upon Mr. Graham.

PORTRAIT OF LORD LYNEDOCH.

At Gibraltar, he endured for a short time the idleness inseparable from garrison duty in so strong a place; but a continuance of such a life proved intolerable to him, and he therefore obtained permission to join the Austrian army. His connexion with that service continued during the summer of 1796, taking the opportunities which his position presented him of sending to the British government intelligence of the military operations and diplomatic measures adopted by the commanders and sovereigns of the continent. It is well known that his despatches at this period evinced, in a remarkable degree, the great talents and characteristic energy of the writer.

During the investment of the city of Mantua he was shut up there for some time with General Wurmser; but, incapable of continuing unemployed, he effected his escape under cover of night, though not without encountering great difficulties and imminent hazard.

Early in the year 1797, he returned to England; but, in the following autumn, joined his regiment at Gibraltar, whence he proceeded to the attack of Minorca with Sir Charles Stuart, who bestowed the warmest eulogiums on the skill and valour displayed by Colonel Graham.

Not long after this, the Colonel, with the local rank of Brigadier, besieged the island of Malta, having under his command the 30th and 89th Regiments, and some corps embodied under his immediate direction. Brigadier-General Graham, aware of the prodigious strength of the place, resorted to a blockade, and the French held out till September, 1800, when after a resistance of two years' duration, the place surrendered. On the completion of this service, General Graham came home for a few months, and, again anxious for active service, proceeded to Egypt, but before his arrival that country had been completely conquered. He returned through Turkey, making some stay at Constantinople, and during the peace of Amiens resided for a short time at Paris. His active and enterprising spirit had now to endure a period of repose. In 1808, however, he proceeded with Sir John Moore to Sweden, where he availed himself of that opportunity to traverse the country in all directions. Shortly afterwards Sir John Moore was ordered to Spain, and General Graham served there during the whole campaign of 1808. On his return to England he was promoted to the rank of Major General, and appointed to command a division in the expedition to Malta, but having been attacked with fever, he was obliged to come home. In February, 1811, having been previously raised to the rank of Lieutenant-General, he took the command of an expedition to attack the rear of the French army that was then blockading Cadiz, an operation which led to the memorable battle of Barossa, the military details of which would much exceed the limits assignable to such an outline of Lord Lynedoch's brilliant career as it is now intended to present. The thanks of Parliament were voted to Lieutenant-General Graham and the brave force under his command, and never were thanks more nobly earned or bestowed in a manner more honourable to those who offered and those who received them. He was at that time a Member of the House of Commons, and in his place in Parliament he received the thanks of a nation's gratitude. In acknowledging the honour thus conferred on him General Graham spoke as follows:—"I have formerly often heard you, Sir, eloquently and impressively deliver the thanks of the house to officers present, and never without an anxious wish that I might one day receive this most enviable mark of my country's regard. This honest ambition is now fully gratified, and I am more than ever bound to try to merit the good opinion of the house."

Barossa was to Lord Lynedoch what Almarez was to Lord Hill, and Albuera to Lord Beresford. Eclipsed and out-numbered as these victories had been by those which the great Duke achieved, they still were to the commanders who led our forces on those memorable occasions the greatest events of their lives, and the sources of their most signal triumphs.

After this series of events, General Graham joined the army under the Duke of Wellington, but from ill-health was obliged to revisit England for a short period. Early in 1813, however, he returned to the Peninsula, and commanded the left wing of the British army at the ever-memorable battle of Vittoria. Mr. Abbott, the Speaker of the House of Commons, and afterwards Lord Colchester, in alluding to General Graham's distinguished career at this period, stated that it was "[illegible] never to be mentioned in our military annals without the strongest expression of respect and admiration;" and Mr. Sheridan, speaking of the various encomiums, personal and professional, which adorned his character, said, "I have known him, in private life; and never was there seated a loftier spirit in a braver heart." Allusion to his services in the retreat of the British army to Corunna—in which, Sir John Moore, the General in command, was killed—he continued, "In the hour of peril, Graham was their best adviser, in the hour of disaster, Graham was their surest consolation."

Very little more now remains to be said concerning our subject of his career. He commanded the army employed in the memorable siege of the town and Baltic of St. Sebastian. His commission also the left wing of the British army at the passage of the Bidassoa, and soon after, in consequence of ill health, he was obliged to resign his command to Sir John Hope. In 1811 he was appointed to a command in Holland, and on the fall of Bergen-op-Zoom the same year he again received the thanks of Parliament, and was raised to the peerage, having previously been created a Knight Grand Cross of the Order of the Bath, and subsequently a Knight Grand Cross of the Order of St. Michael and St. George. He was likewise a Knight of the Tower and Sword in Portugal.

For many years he represented his native county in Parliament; and he had, therefore, the gratification, as already stated, of seeing several Dukes of the House of Commons in his place as a member. In 1841, he received the rank of General; and the Government of Barbadoes Lines.

As we observed that the habitudes of age began to accumulate, he left London round the climate of Italy better calculated to sustain his declining energies than the atmosphere and temperature of his own country; he, therefore, spent much time on the Continent; but, on a recent occasion, no anxious was he to manifest his sense of loyalty and his personal attachment to the Queen, that, when her Majesty visited Scotland, he came home from Switzerland, for the express purpose of paying his duty to her Majesty in the metropolis of his native land.

There are few pursuits which so much demand the enterprise, energy, and valour of youth, as the profession of arms; and few commanders attain eminence except those who have the good fortune to do so at an early period of life. With respect to Lord Lynedoch, however, it is a curious fact that the Duke of Wellington fought his last battle at an earlier period of his than that in which Lord Lynedoch finished his maiden sword. It is also not unworthy of remark, that we are now accustomed to regard our noble subject as presenting his figure to a surprisingly advanced age, when, in fact, the subject of this memoir was old enough to have been the father of his sire.

We regret to state that the illustrious old soldier is extinct. He leaves behind him no descendants to be emulators of his example, or to derive honour from his name.

The family from which he is descended is known of that from which the Dukes of Montrose trace their origin. His father was Thomas Graham, of Balgowan, and his mother was Christian Stirling, daughter of the first Earl of Hopetoun. He was born, as already stated, in the year 1748, consequently he has survived several sovereigns, commanded in battle those who will be held in honoured remembrance, when loyalty is considered to be a virtue or military renown a passport to fame.—Abridged from the Times.

The annexed portrait is from the celebrated painting by Sir Thomas Lawrence.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK,

SUNDAY, Dec. 24th.—Fourth Sunday in Advent.
MONDAY, 25th.—Christmas Day.
TUESDAY, 26th.—St. Stephen
WEDNESDAY, 27th.—St. John the Evangelist.
THURSDAY, 28th.—Innocents.
FRIDAY, 29th.—St. Thomas à Becket
SATURDAY, 30th.—Boyd died, 1601

HIGH WATER at London Bridge, for the Week ending December 30.

Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.
h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.
1 50 2 15	2 40 3 5	3 30 3 55	4 20 4 45	5 10 5 35	6 0 6 25

ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

TERMS, PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

	£	s.	d.
Per Quarter	0	6	6
Half-year	0	13	0
One Year	1	6	0

May be had of all Newsmen and Booksellers, or at the Office, 198, Strand.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

CORRESPONDENTS.—"J. R. S.—Our correspondent may remit in the manner he proposes, and the papers will be forwarded in one cover by return of post to whatever address he desires. The population of the parish of East Retford is correctly stated in our list, according to the Parliamentary Return. The parish of Faskerton, in the county of Lincoln, is correctly given in our list: there is another place called Faskerton, a township containing 402 inhabitants, in the county of Nottingham, the population of which is included with Bolleston parish, in which it is situate. Leyenstone hamlet, in Essex, contains 1484 inhabitants, as in like manner included in the return for the parish of Low Leyton.

"Miss H. C."—Our best thanks are due to this lady for her attentive communication, which we have noticed under its proper head.

"R. R.," Sunderland.—The compiler of the Census will answer our correspondent specially by letter.

"A Constant Reader," Dublin.—The population of the city of Glasgow and suburbs in 1831 was 202,426, and in 1841 274,933. The city of Dublin in 1831 contained 204,155 inhabitants, and in 1841, within the same limits, 232,331 inhabitants. The population of Dublin city and suburbs, within the district of the Metropolitan Police, in 1841, was 287,749.

CENSUS LITERATI.—The population of the parish of Buckingham, in the county of Bucks, should have been stated in our list 6064 inhabitants. Omitted in list:—Amberley, Sussex, pop. 723: Retford, Notts. pop. 3c.; Tamworth, Gloucester, pop. 362, Helston, town, Cornwall, pop. 3381.

The Kirkwhan Temperance Institute shall appear.

"B. F. H." may probably obtain the information he requires of Mr. Bagster, Paternoster-row.

"W. D."—Due announcement will be given.

"A Young Reader," Cumberland, should apply to the editor of the "Mechanics' Magazine."

"R. D., Matlock.—We have not room at present for the engraving.

"H. S., Norwich.—We shall peruse the London magistrates from time to time.

"V. V. X."—The "new edition" shall appear

"Latimer.—Notheb

"A Subscriber," Hull.—2000 per cent on the 3s

"W. E.," Barnstaple.—I [illegible] secretary of the New Royal Exchange is Mr. Tite; the builders, Messrs. Peto and Grissel.

"A Subscriber," Dublin.—[illegible] Dublin, to assist

"A Friend to the Poor."—We shall [illegible] the case the

"J. B.," Maberdy-road.—You did write to the Admiralty, Charing-cross.

"R. H. C.," City, is thanked for the suggestion, which shall be attended to.

"Odd-Fellow."—Thanks.

"Parlez Cork."—We have not room.

"A Subscriber," Castlebar, Connaught.—The season is over

"J. M.," Aberystwith.—The Grand has been twice forwarded.

"A Subscriber," Richmond Harbour.—We do not know any artist with the initials H. K. H.

"Josephus W.," Kingsland-road, is one of several subscribers who have approved of our announcement of the silent system of imprisonment.

"S. L.—We will endeavour to profit by his suggestions.

"Constant Reader"—the error was restored in transferring.

"N. R."—The subject suggested will not suit.

"Gathering."—The subject was drawn by an artist who has several times witnessed the spectacle

"A British Sportsman."—We have ever denounced the brutal exhibition called cock-fighting, and shall continue to do so

"G. R.," Pentonville.—We agree with our correspondent that the Gresham lectures are delivered at an inconvenient hour.

"A. Z.," Chippenham, is thanked; but we have no room.

The Elm Arch reached us too late; but the sketcher is thanked "Countries" should recollect that the event is worthy of historical record.

"J. K."—See future numbers.

"W. H.," Macclesfield.—To reply to our correspondent's questions is inconsistent in a newspaper.

"W. F. H.," Essex.—The sketches of the pigs arrived too late, the interest has passed.

"X. Y. Z."—The prizes are awarded at the King-street Bazaar.

"A Magistrate," Weymouth.—We consider that the publication of our correspondent's letter would serve the cause he attacks

"A. J. S."—The fineness of the season is against our correspondent's hints.—"Zero."

"Allan."—"The Poet's Adieu" will not suit

"H. B. W."—Whitworth's sweeping cart, which we have already engraved, is, we think, far superior to that by our correspondent.

"H. A."—Compliance with his wish would bring too many applications from establishments similar to our correspondent's.

"H. P. C."—We do not answer questions as to the age of ladies.

"G. L. B.," Birmingham.—The song does not reach our standard.

"E. B."—Any back numbers may be had of the publisher. We have no time to look over acts of Parliament.

"A Politician" has overlooked.—"We do not remember to have seen the work in question.

"J. C.," Leek.—Inaccurate

"L. W., Ruthen.—We cannot recommend any society of the description referred to.

"A Constant Reader," Derby.—The opportunity has passed.

"J. K.," 121, New Bond-street.—The same reply as the preceding.

"Annette."—We scarcely know. From the report of the 7th game, we perceive that M. St. Amant had won five games to Mr. Staunton's ten.

"F. F."—See any good work on angling.

"E. M. N."—Write to the Government Annuity Office, Old Jewry, London. The Long Annuities are annual payments by Government, which will expire in 1860.

The same reply to another communication without a signature.

"J. H. L.," Manchester.—The address is 16, Wellington-terrace, St. John's Wood.

"A. V.," Northam.—The letter will not suit.

"An Admirer," Monmouth.—The crew will appear in connexion with the next match.

"Alpheus Tar" shall not [illegible] again.

"A. B. C."—The Fashions will in future appear on the last Saturday of each month, and present the costumes for the ensuing month.

"A New Subscriber," Leighton, may deduct the expenses he mentions from his account.

"J. O."—The engraving of the new Welsh church shall appear.

"H. E."—"W. C. H."—Delightful

"A Constant Subscriber," Leeds, is thanked for the hint.

"J. G.," Sheerness.—Any original sketches will be acceptable.

"A Subscriber's letter is too complimentary to ourselves for insertion.

"W. C. S.," Kirriemuir.—Your correspondent favour us with a sketch!

"L. P. D."—The back numbers are the same price as the current one.

"H. C.," Watton, Norfolk.—Norwich.

"F. R."—We cannot undertake to receive the subscription liberally proferred by our correspondent

"Cuca" should consult the Oxford and Cambridge University calendars.

"A Constant Reader," Dublin.—No; the Unsworth engraving will be given in due course.

Chesterfield Spire.—A correspondent sends the following extract from "Ford's History of Chesterfield, 1839:"—"By measurement, in January, 1816, the ball on which the weathercock is fixed was found to lean towards the south six feet from the perpendicular of its base, and four feet four inches out of perpendicular towards the west. Nearly at the top of this spire are leaden doors, which open to a vast prospect. On a bright sunny morning in 1839, I was looking out of the door which opens to the north, and the bulging of the spire about midway was as great as to hide the tower on which it was erected; and on the south side I could count the layers of lead to the bottom, besides appearing to be suspended over a precipice, which a plumb-line would prove was over the roof of the body of the church."

CHESS.—"Clericus" and "A. B."—Received.

"A. B." will be happy to play a friendly game at chess, by correspondence. Address A. B., Post-Office, Mahill, Ireland.

"A Chessite."—We cannot take upon ourselves to say.

"H. Hinchliff."—Will you send the solution.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1843.

CHRISTMAS.

I.

A Christmas song—a Christmas song
That shall not be sung alone,
For rich and poor—for the Altar pure,
The good Church and the Throne!
For the Judge's Court and the College hall,
And the Bar with burly brow,
Noble and Peasant—Man and Child,
The sail—the loom the plough!
For the soldier brave—for the son of the wave,
With the British flag unfurl'd,
A Christmas song—a Christmas song
For all the living world!

II.

A Christmas song for the beautiful Queen,
Star of a loyal love,
A priceless Crown and a peerless brow
And a heart warmed from above!
Daughter, and mother, and wife,
With the flowers of virtue fair,
That garland the bosoms of common life
Royally blooming there!
Happiness cling to her soul!
Joy laugh out in her tone!
And ring loud and long a Christmas song
For the Lady of the Throne!

III

A hymn for the glorious Church!
A sacred strain and slow,
Whose music there, with the breath of prayer,
Shall Heavenward seem to go!
The incense of hope and faith
From the Christian's spirit-shrine,
Rising on holy wings above
With a melody divine!
A hymn for the Christmas-day,
A blessing amid its mirth,
And pæans of praise let myriads raise
In the song of the Saviour's birth.

IV

A Christmas song for the judge
With justice in his soul,
That hath ever a thought of God above
As he wieldeth his Earth-controul;
That looketh nor left nor right,
But still to the truth inclines,
And marketh his course with a wisdom bright
That chasteneth while it shines!
A holiday song for the Bench and Bar,
When duty is o'er and done.
And may Christmas be a time of glee
To gladden them every one!

V.

A Christmas song for the Peer—
With joy may his castles ring,
Giving away with a generous cheer
Whatever his lands may bring!
Food that hath wax-ed fat
Wine that hath long grown old—
With glowing ale from a wassail vat,
And wool for the poor and cold!
A Christmas carol for all such Lords—
And may good warm hearts be gay:
Be blessings spread on the path they tread
On every Christmas-day!

VI.

A Christmas song from the Peasant's lip,
To tell of a happy lot—
And that labour has won, by snow and by sun,
Peace for his lowly cot.
That his wife is glad within,
His children there break bread—
That logs are ablaze on his rugged hearth
And the fire is not dead!
The Peasant's Christmas song,
Merry, and clear, and shrill—
Oh I love to hear it, wild and sweet,
Come trillingly o'er the hill!

VII.

A Christmas song for the rich
Of every thriving trade;
Oh! blessings round bring every pound
That honesty hath made!
If once they wanted lest the tide
Of Fate should change again—
May they remember those who now
Are poor as they were then!
Charity warmeth the heart,
And maketh it leap and bound.
Then a Christmas song for the wealthy throng
Who still in her train are found.

VIII.

A Christmas song for the poor—
May light fall on their life,
And Want lose all its bitterness
And Sorrow all its strife!
May Hunger go with Cold and Woe,
Food bid starvation die!
Clothes warm—and beds grow under them
Where resting limbs may lie!
A Christmas song from every voice,
With music that can pray;
God, Man and Mercy to relieve
Their wretchedness away!

IX.

A Christmas song for the loom—
Oh! work it not all for gain,
But set it to spinning of mortal joys,
And not to the woof of pain!
A Christmas song for the plough,
Gladfully be it sped,
Furrowing well in the hill and dell
The furrows that bring us bread!
A song for the commerce-wing,
That fluttereth to the gale.
Ay! a Christmas song while the lungs are strong,
For the loom, the plough, and the sail.

X.

A Christmas song for the gallant troops
Who wield our country's glaive,
Brothers in arms of hero tars,
Whose home is on the wave.
A Christmas toast from England's soul
To music warm and wild—
"The Nelsons and the Wellingtons,"
Who made Her Victory's child!
A Christmas song for all the lads
Who on her missions roam;
God bless them, be they where they will,
God speed them safely home!

XI.

A Christmas song—a Christmas song
That shall not be sung alone,
For rich and poor—for the Altar pure,
The good Church and the Throne!
For the Judge's Court and the College hall
And the Bar with burly brow,
Noble and Peasant—Man and Child,
The sail—the loom—the plough.
For the soldier brave—for the son of the wave,
With his British flag unfurl'd,
A Christmas song—a Christmas song
For all the living world!

We often hear of the "strong arm of the law;" we sometimes see it in operation, especially against the crime of poverty, in the "move on" of the burly policeman to the famine stricken wretch who has no alternative but punishment in a prison or starvation out of it. But the strength that resides in the "arm of the law" is something like the "equality" which all men are said to possess in its "eye;" it is greatly modified by circumstances; it is strong only in the inverse ratio to the resistance that can be offered to it. Exceedingly powerful against the weak it is exceedingly weak against the powerful.

Ever since the lamentable tragedy of the Camden Town duel, the community has been kept in a state of uncertainty by the conflicting reports as to whether Lieutenant Munro would surrender to take his trial for murder or not, the verdict of a coroner's jury being registered against him. He fled from justice; that was to be expected; most men in his dreadful position do so. But the remarkable feature is that justice took no steps to follow him. As a soldier, twenty-four hours absence without leave was sufficient to subject him to punishment; yet months passed and there appeared to be no notice taken of it; he defied both the criminal and military law at once, and both with impunity! At last came a report that he would surrender, that he had landed at Hull for that purpose,—that he had paid a visit to his father on his way to the metropolis—and various other rumours, which proved that he was both in the country and that his movements were known to somebody. The days fixed the Attorney-General prepared—the jury summoned—and then it was announced that a fever had supervened and necessarily stopped the Majesty of British justice in its enquiry. No sort of proof was given, offered, or, which is rather strange, even asked for; all were satisfied with the assurance of a counsel.

Another session has passed, and there is "no surrender." But the person implicated is living and moving; apparently some of the papers are in his confidence, for they intimate one day that he certainly will take his trial; another day, that he probably will not, but that he will prefer going abroad again and entering, as a volunteer we presume, in the Prussian service. This was followed up by an announcement of the sale of his furniture and effects, as a preparatory step it is to be supposed to his departure. This has re-opened the whole question, for on Monday the Coroner of Middlesex formally interfered, and forbad the sale. But still the great question remains unsettled; will the object of the coroner's warrant condescend to be tried or will he not? The unaccountable part of the affair is, that it should be left to his free will and pleasure at all; what is the "strong arm of the law" about? Does not the warrant exist, and are there not abundance of policemen—detective and other—besides officers of old Bow-street experience, who, if reports are true, have hunted down criminals who exhausted the skill acquired by years of knavery in expedients for concealment? For the sake of the moral influence of the law generally, this farce—for it is absolutely becoming one—ought to be put an end to. Lieutenant Munro either is guilty or he is not; if public opinion will not condemn a man for murder who has deprived another of life, according to all the forms prescribed by the Code of Honour—let the acquittal be given, let the prisoner be discharged from the bar, and left with the crime on his conscience, to be expiated we trust by a life of Christian repentance. We are not vindictive, nor do we clamour for a punishment that the general feeling of society will not sanction. But we contend that this continued, almost insolent, defiance of the law, by an individual, ought to be stopped; it has a bad effect; there is a conviction widely felt that such forbearance would not be exercised for a moment towards a man in humble life, or of limited means. The glaring difference in the operation of the law towards the poor and weak, and the rich and privileged classes of society, is placed in a still more glaring light. When a man in a sudden fit of uncontrollable passion slays his fellow—a crime which the law itself distinguishes from murder—or when he deprives another of his life by accident, such a defiance and contempt of the law is never heard of; in either case the criminal is subjected to the trial that justice demands. Why should that trial be suffered to be evaded now? Why should the laws of the land be made the playthings of an individual will? Why should the public be continually offended by announcements that are a disgrace to a country calling itself civilised, and boasting an expensive legal machinery? Is not one of all this tenderness and forbearance mean? Is it to be an understood thing that any man is to control the operation of the criminal code by his ipse dixit—I will be tried, or I will not? We have always thought that there was a way of enforcing obedience to the laws against any one, no matter what his station. Let Lieut. Munro leave the country—there seems no disposition to stop him—and become an exile, thus openly defeating the law; or let him be compelled to appear and abide the verdict of a jury of his countrymen; but at all events let there be an end to this trifling, from day to day and session to session, for it is producing a bad effect, and if permitted by the authorities will go far to sap the foundation of the laws, and bring the administration of justice into contempt.

THE MESMERIC MANIA.

It has been truly said that "man is an imitative animal, and makes strange use of his nature," and never was this fact more strikingly developed than during the past week, by a number of mesmeric exhibitions in various quarters of the metropolis, which in some of the cases have led to almost fatal results. What inducement people can have for indulging in epileptic fits we are quite at a loss to conjecture, but it appears that several pot-boys (a race of persons who, whether the objects be reticide or suicide, are equally ardent in the pursuit, and au general) have been making experiments which have led to consequences of a most dangerous nature. In one case, at Dunhill-row, the victim, an intelligent boy of 10 years, lost his eyesight, which has only finally returned by giving him a permanent squint. For some time not only his vision but his faculties were much obscured, and it was feared that complete mental fatuity would ensue. The unhappy youth was visited by Dr. Elliotson, who pronounced it a case of cross-mesmerism.

Another case occurred at the Royal Oak, Abbey-street, Bethnal-green-road, on Tuesday last. The circumstances related upon the subject of "mesmerism," when a gentleman present (Mr. Elisha Harvey, of no. 7, Ramsay-street), who has attended several lectures upon that science, offered for a trifling wager to send any person then present into a "mesmeric sleep;" upon which the pot-boy, a fine active intelligent youth, about 18 years of age, expressed a wish to be "mesmerised," and his wish was complied with. After a few minutes the lad's legs and arms began to stiffen, the muscles of the throat to be peared swell, and he gave expression to a low moaning noise expressive of great pain. After a lapse of about an hour the party became alarmed, and a medical gentleman (Mr. Vandenberg) was sent for; but notwithstanding every attention has been paid to him up to the present time, he has remained in the same state. Several other medical gentlemen have since seen the lad, but none seem to be aware what course to pursue with respect to him.

A third case occurred at Hertford, in which an apprentice named Cook was "mesmerised" by his master's son, and remained in a state of torpor for several days. It is remarkable that during the influence of the coma, this boy appeared gifted with the faculty generally denominated clear-sentience. Although he never had visited the Female Hall, at Greenwich, nor the exhibition of Madame Tussaud, in Baker-street, Portman-square, during the time he was mesmerised he accurately described the interior of both these exhibitions; and the accuracy of his detail of them was truly surprising. On Tuesday last several medical gentlemen called to see him. One looked fixedly at the lad, and after conversing for a few minutes with him, the symptoms of sleep returned, and he fell upon the sofa in a paroxysmic manner, and remained in that state without rigidity. In this state he did not long continue, his natural state returning directly after the surgeon had left the room. He expresses a strong desire to be mesmerised again by Mr. Taylor, the inventor of this mesmerism, at Deptford, and his master, acting upon the advice of Dr. Elliotson, will permit the lad's wishes in this respect to be gratified, if the police do not interfere in the meantime. What is the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals about?

THE COURT AND HAUT TON.

WINDSOR, Sunday.—Her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert, with the whole of the Court, attended divine service within the Castle. The Hon. and Rev. C. Courtenay officiated, and preached from the 1st chapter of the First Epistle of St. Paul to the Corinthians, the 28th verse. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent attended divine service in the parish church. On Saturday his Royal Highness Prince Albert was riding out, when he terminated to present to his Royal Highness a petition. The Prince directed it to be given to his Equerry in attendance.

MONDAY.—In consequence of the unfavourable state of the weather the royal family were not taken out. His Royal Highness Prince Albert hunted with his harriers, accompanied by his Serene Highness Prince Edward of Saxe Weimar, and attended by the Earl of Morton, Colonel Bouverie, Mr Brand, and Mr. Anson. The royal party met at Sake-park, belonging to Mr. Granville Penn. Lord Melbourne, and Lord and Lady Beauvale took their departure from the Castle.

TUESDAY.—This morning her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert took their accustomed walking exercise in the royal pleasure grounds, and afterwards took exercise in the riding-school. The royal family did not leave the Castle to-day, in consequence of the unfavourable state of the weather. The Earl of Aberdeen arrived on a visit to her Majesty.

WEDNESDAY.—After the usual walking exercise, his Royal Highness Prince Albert, attended by Lord Rivers, Mr. G. E. Anson, Mr. Brand, and Colonel Bouverie, went to enjoy the sport of shooting in the royal preserves. After good sport, the royal party returned to the Castle to lunch. The party of Ojibbeway Indians arrived at Windsor, conducted by Mr Catlin, and were presented to her Majesty and Prince Albert, the Duchess of Kent, and the ladies and gentlemen of the suite. The chief made a speech, in which he described the loyalty of his tribe, and the great gratification himself and his countrymen felt in beholding her Majesty. The party then performed several of their national dances, after whim they partook of some refreshment, and returned to town. Their costume was the grotesque dress of their country. The party consisted of seven—four men and three women. In the evening her Majesty and Prince Albert, and many of the ladies and gentlemen of the royal suite, dined with her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, at Frogmore Lodge.

Her Majesty's royal charities of 3s. each to upwards of 800 persons, aged from 60 to 100 years—many of whom are blind, disabled, paralysed, and lame; also, the Royal Gate Alms, of 13s. each, to 168 poor persons, so called from its having formerly been distributed at the gate of the Royal Palace at Whitehall, were paid on merly been distributed at the gate of the Royal Palace at Whitehall, were paid on Monday and Tuesday last, under the immediate orders of his Grace the Archbishop of York, as Lord High Almoner in the Sovereign, by Joseph Hanby, Esq., secretary and yeoman of the Almonry.

THE DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER.—Her Royal Highness is so far recovered from her recent inspassition that no more bulletins of her Royal Highness's health will be issued, the Royal Duchess being considered convalescent.

BELVOIR CASTLE.—The accounts of the health of the Duke of Rutland are very unfavourable. His Grace's sufferings are principally in the right arm.

A large party of supporters of the Church will assemble this week at Woburn Abbey, for the purpose of settling turf matters

THE DUC DE BORDEAUX.—His Royal Highness the Duc de Bordeaux, accompanied by his suite, arrived in Birmingham on Monday afternoon by the Liverpool and Birmingham Railway. His Royal Highness's arrival did not appear to have excited any popular interest. Dr. Wiseman, the Catholic bishop of the diocese, the Rev Dr. Weedall, and several Catholic priests were in attendance to receive the distinguished party, who, on their arrival, proceeded in carriages which were in waiting to Gaunt College. On Tuesday his Royal Highness visited the principal manufactories at Birmingham, and among others, the manufactory of Messrs. Gillott, pen-manufacturers; Mr. Winfield; the Messrs Elkington; Mr Gillott, the celebrated steel pen manufacturer; the Messrs. Sergeant; the Messrs. Mount; the Messrs. Bacchus; and the Proofhouse. He afterwards returned to Dudley House.

MARRIAGES IN HIGH LIFE.—The contemplated matrimonial alliance between Lady Elizabeth Sackville West, eldest daughter of Earl Delaware, and Mr. Francis Hastings Russell, eldest son of Lord George William Russell, is not expected to be solemnised until the second week in January. Lord Newport's marriage with the Hon. Miss Fermor-Hesketh will take place early in the new year.

THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY.—Monday being the fête day of the Emperor Nicholas of Russia his Excellency Baron Brunow and Baroness Brunow gave a sumptuous entertainment at Ashburnham-house to a circle of the leading Russian nobility, now sojourning in this capital, in celebration of the auspicious day.

M. Dedel, the Netherlands Minister, arrived in Willington-crescent, from the Hague, on Sunday. His Excellency left on the day that the news of the death at Berlin, of his Majesty William Frederick, the late King of the Netherlands, was received at the Hague

The Queen Dowager was in danger of a serious accident last week, in driving from Gopsall-hall to Leicester. When the carriage containing Her Majesty was near Newbold-bridge two of the four horses were thrown upon their knees, and the post boy was precipitated several yards forward. One of the horses was so much wounded in the shoulder by the pole of the carriage, as to be unfit to proceed; and the post-boy's head was cut so severely that the blood flowed from it in large quantities.

The Earl of Cardigan arrived in Portman-square on Monday from the Cavalry Barracks, Dublin, and will remain in town until after the approaching trial, in which the noble earl is defendant.

APPROPRIATE REBUKE.—A Paris letter states, that at Lady Cowley's soirée, on Wednesday night last, occurred an incident which will make all the guests there laugh for months. The guests were a Mr. L——, who believing that none but a friend whom he addressed, was within hearing, said, 'and they call this a party! Why I never saw anything so dull in my life. It is not even as fashionable as one of those fine old-fashioned routs where the grooms are so intolerably hot.' Unfortunately, the noble hostess was standing near, and overheard them, and immediately said—'Mr. Lewis, there, [pointing to the ante-room] has a cooler room and beyond (the hall) one still cooler.' This prompt and significant rebuke and hint was felt, understood, and taken.

ACCIDENT TO THE HON. CAPTAIN ROUS, M.P.—Intelligence was received in town during the week from Herdlesham Hall, Suffolk, that the Hon. Captain Rous, the hon. member for Westminster, met with a severe accident while out shooting with Lord Rendlesham in the morning of Tuesday, by the capsize of a gun of his lordship at the above seat. It appears, the hon. gentleman's gun burst, and that one of his hands was lacerated to a very considerable extent, so as to cause apprehension that it would be necessary to have it amputated. By the latest accounts we learn that the hon and gal ant gentleman has had his finger amputated, and in that respect is going on well; but we regret to add that it is feared he will lose the sight of one of his eyes.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

PROROGATION OF PARLIAMENT.—Tuesday being the day to which Parliament stood prorogued, the Lords and Commons met in the House, pro formâ, to hear the Royal Commission read for its further prorogation to Thursday, 1st of February, when, according to the Queen's proclamation, it will meet for the despatch of public business.

LIEUT. MUNRO AND THE CORONER FOR MIDDLESEX.—Some interest has been recently excited by an announcement that the furniture and effects belonging to Lieutenant Munro would be sold by auction, at his late residence in Brompton-square, on Monday, and the following days. At twelve o'clock, on Monday, the drawing-rooms of the house were filled by a very numerous and highly respectable assemblage of company, when considerable disappointment was occasioned by the entry of Mr. Wakley, the coroner for West Middlesex, accompanied by his son, and supported by Mr. Superintendent Lowry and Mr. Inspector Bardsley, with a body of officers of the D division of police. Mr. Wakley, it appeared, had not arrived at this time, but, from a few hurried remarks made by Mr Wakley, the company soon became aware that to his official capacity he forbade the auctioneer to proceed with the sale. Mr. Kirke's apparent having been explained to the coroner, that functionary left the house, and proceeded towards the residence of the auctioneer, in Brompton-row. The parties, however, overtook Mr. Kirke with which he had been served; but, in deference to the office which the party who had signed it held, he felt it most desirable to delay the intended auction until the highest legal opinion on the subject could be taken. Mr. Kirke subsequently had a conference with the brother of Lieutenant Munro, who accompanied Mr. Kirke to a solicitor; and it was understood that a notice will be shortly served on Mr Wakley of the intention of the parties to hold the sale, notwithstanding the coroner's DISTRESS AT GRAVESEND.—On Friday night the Dublin Steam Navigation Company's steamer packet Royal William, Captain Swainson, arrived at her moorings off the Alderman-stairs, Lower Gravesend, having on board a full complement of the Alderman-stairs, Lower Gravesend, having on board a full complement of the London-bridge, with cargoes of various kinds. The Royal William left Dublin on Saturday morning in the metropolis on Tuesday and during the week brought very large quantities of geese, turkeys, hares, &c.

ST PAUL'S SCHOOL.—The reopening of what is called the speeches, by which the breaking-up of this seaool is preceded, took place on Tuesday. The senior pupils of the establishment pronounced them to an audience not numerous though it might be select. The principal scholars, as usual, were chiefly the sons of the parents and relations of those who play the principal parts, but are very dull times to mere au itors and to those who go to hear good specimens of elocution.

RESTITUTION IN THE METROPOLIS.—The Rev. Sydney Smith, one of the Canons of Dauas have formed themselves into committees to visit and help such of the poor as are in distress from want of work. The reports of these committees are most harrowing. They discribe the families as unable to attend to divine worship, or look or work, in consequence of their not having clothes to cover their emaciated forms. About £100 has been already subscribed in aid of those objects of charity.

THE LUMLEY TROOP.—On Tuesday evening the annual winter dinner of this ancient and honourable body took place at the Falcon Tavern, Fetter-lane, when about seventy gentlemen, members of the Troop, sat down to a very recherché banquet, which was served up in a manner that did great credit to the taste and style of Mr Ireland, the cutter to the Troop. Amongst the gentlemen present we observed Sir J. Key, Bart., M.P., Alderman Wire, M.P., Mr. Moxon, of Broadstairs, Mr. Charles, My Harding, Mr. Stokes, and Mr. Williams, Common Councilmen of the ward of Farringdon Without, &c. Col. Goodman presided, and on the occasion, and great, promoted the hilarity of the evening by his affability and close their shops at eight o clock during the winter months.

CORPORATION REFORM.—On Monday last a Court of Common Council was held for the purpose of proceeding to the adoption of a petition upon the report from the Committee on the Election Act of the 11th of George I., delivered in on the 9th of November, 1843, for the introduction of a bill into parliament for amending the said Act. The court was crowded from the commencement by aldermen and commoners, and the greatest interest was excited. Alderman Brown proposed an amendment (the original motion being, "That this Court do agree with the report delivered in their presence"—That it is the bounden duty of this Court to protect the freemen of the City of London in the full enjoyment of their elective franchise, as secured to them by law; and that to accomplish that object this Court do proceed to the adoption of a petition in the franchise without becoming free, would be a dereliction of such duty, and an act of great and manifest injustice to our constituents and fellow citizens; and that this Court do therefore resolve to apply to Parliament for a reform of evils, whether real or supp sed, in the municipal institutions of this City, unless it shall hereafter appear that the powers of the corporation are insufficient to effect all such reforms as are deemed necessary." Sir Peter Laurie seconded the amendment, and after a long discussion, in which Mr. Wise, at great length, defended the report, a division took place, when there appeared 113 in favour of the amendment, and fifty-seven against it, 54. This decision has the effect of throwing out the bill.

EAST INDIA HOUSE.—On Wednesday a quarterly general court of the proprietors of stock in this corporation was held at the India House pursuant to the terms of the charter. The chair was taken at the usual time by Mr. John Cotton, and the minutes of the last court were read. The Chairman acquainted the court that a letter had been received from the Board of Control, and the Earl of Ripon had replied that "additional papers relating to Scinde will be laid before the Court of Directors at the earliest period at which, in the judgment of the Governor-General, they can be prepared without inconvenience to the public interest." Mr. Poynder's motion, with regard to the annual payment of £9000 to the Temple of Juggernaut, was postponed until March, and the court adjourned.

CHEMISTRY TO ITALIAN BOYS IN LONDON.—On Tuesday evening a meeting was held at the residence of the Rev. Dr J. D. Morris, Bedford-street, Bedford-row, in furtherance of a plan for establishing an institution for the care and protection of destitute Italian boys. The meeting was numerously attended by Italian and English gentlemen of influence, and several affecting statements were made, detailing various acts of gross cruelty, alleged to have been committed on young boys by their "masters." A committee was formed, and a resolution was adopted that a deputation should wait on Lords Ashley and Dudley Stuart, to solicit their patronage of the institution; and Lord Ashley has consented to preside on the occasion. A liberal subscription was then entered into, and the meeting separated.

WESTMINSTER SCHOOL is, probably, the most ancient in the metropolis, having been founded towards the close of the eleventh century. The school-room is one of the most ancient portions of the precincts of the Abbey, in the Saxon style, and such as have been built by the Confessor is still to be seen in Rochester, and here Dunstar, and is there beneath is kept the standard-money. The school-room upper story; in the room beneath is kept the standard-money. The schoolroom was restored by Elizabeth; among its most illustrious scholars were Camden, Ben Jonson, Dr. Busby (pupils of the master), Dryden, Lord Rosebery, the actor Ben Jonson, Dr. Busby (pupils of the master), Dryden, Lord Rosebery, the actor Lord Mansfield, and Cowper. The walls of the school-room bear many autographs of eminent "boys;" and, in the library, is Dryden's autograph, on vellum, a piece of a form, glazed and ornamented with gold and diamonds! Every year, in December, classic plays are acted here by the scholars; last year, in No. 3 of our journal, we illustrated the performance of the Adelphi of Terence. Next year, we shall engrave the subject more in detail.

YOUNG IRELAND.—Mr. William Bridges, of the New Zealand Journal, lectured at the Egyptian Hall on Monday evening, proposing a scheme for establishing the relation of landlord and tenant on a wiser and more permanent basis, principally with the view of improving Ireland.

Braham gives a grand sacred concert this evening at the St. James's Theatre.

FIRE IN ST. JOHN-STREET ROAD.—On Thursday night last, about half-past nine o'clock, a fire broke out in Mr Turner's floor-cloth manufactory, in St. John-street road, which, for a time, threatened the whole of the surrounding buildings the premises being completely enclosed by small tenements. The premises are entirely consumed, and indeed the same was the case about four years ago; we under stand they are insured, but whether for the full amount or not we could not ascertain.

ST. THOMAS'S DAY.—MUNICIPAL ELECTION.

WARD OF FARRINGDON WITHOUT.—At a meeting of Farringdon Without, held at Farringdon Hall, in New Bridge-street, Old Bailey, for the election of Common Councilmen for the year ensuing. Sir James Duke, the Alderman of the Ward, who presided on the occasion, took his seat on the bench as a few minutes after eleven o'clock. The attendance of inhabitants was unusually thin The annual address from the Lord Mayor to the Aldermen, several acts of Common Council, and the returns of several free nets having been read by Mr Deputy Leaver, Sir James Duke, said, he hoped that he should have the support of the Christmas; but he now believed there would be a contest, and that all should have to sit there three days. (Laughter.)—He then begged to call upon all gentlemen present to give each other an impartial hearing, and in their speeches to confine themselves, as much as possible, to the business before them. (Hear) Mr. Harding, Mr. Prendergrast, Mr Samuel Wells, and Mr. Charles Wells were then proposed in addition to the seven names submitted by the various parochial authorities within the ward. After which, a poll was demanded, and appointed to take place on the following day. During yesterday the polling was carried on briskly, and at four o'clock the four lowest were Messrs. Burn, Skinner, Walker, and Wells.

LIME-STREET WARD.—A wardmote was held on Thursday morning for the election of a member of the Court of Common Council. The following were returned above ward, Alderman O Farrebrother presided. The following were returned members of the Court of Common Council for the ensuing year.—Messrs. Thomas Mitchell, R Corser, D. Cork, T. B. Simpson; the latter gentleman was elected in the room of Mr. Deputy Bate, resigned.

CORNHILL WARD.—A wardmote held on Thursday morning for the vestry [illegible] Peter Laurie, Esq., in the chair. Mr. Samuel Wells, and Mr. Charles Were returned for the ensuing year:—Mr. Samuel Thomas, Mr. Edward Harrison, Mr. Thomas Lund, Mr. John Carter, Mr. Richard Rundall, Mr. James Wardlow

Thus marked are new members

BISHOPSGATE WARD.—The same Common Councilmen are returned who filled the office last year.

QUEENHITHE.—The following are the gentlemen who have been returned members of the Court of Common Council for the year ensuing:—Mr. Deputy Lewis, Mr. Peter, Upton, Sykes, Acocks and Curtis.

PORTSOKEN WARD.—A wardmote was held same day in the school-room, Cock and Hoop-yard, Houndsditch.—Alderman Thomas Wood in the chair. The following gentlemen were proposed to serve as members for the ensuing year:—Mr. George Wright (deputy) Mr. William Christie, Mr. John Parker, Mr. Thomas Lowe, Mr. Samuel Jutsen, Mr. John Dowell, Mr. George M'Ensale, [illegible] Mr. George Parker. The first eight gentlemen were returned

WALBROOK WARD.—Thursday being St. Thomas's Day, a wardmote was held in the School Room, Walbrook, to elect Common Councilmen for the ward, for the year ensuing. At eleven o'clock Mr. Alderman Gibbs took the chair, and briefly stated the object of the meeting The usual preliminaries having been gone through, Mr. Alderman Gibbs said, their first duty was to elect six gentlemen to represent the ward in the Court of Common Council. A parishioner complained that the old members should join in the nomination, stating the votes of the inhabitants. Mr. Deputy Lake said, he was in a position. Mr. Wire: I did not know of that circular until one was put into my hands this morning. (Hear). The other candidates made a similar declaration. Mr. Woodward: I did it without the knowledge of any one [Loud cries of "Hear, hear," and hisses].—A Voice: It almost amounts to a fog gery. (Hear, hear). The names of Mr. I. Watkins, Mr. Ford Hall, Mr. David Wire, Mr. Edward Corder, Mr. William Dawson, and Mr. Thomas Rowley, the five new men, having been put in nomination, Mr. Wilson proposed Mr. W. Frederick Rock as a fit and proper person to represent the ward in the Court of Common Council. Mr. John Travers seconded the nomination of Mr Rock Mr. Alderman Gibbs then put the names of the candidates seriatim. Mr. Rock. Mr. Alderman Gibbs then put the names of the candidates seriatim. Mr. Rock. was elected by a show of hands. He said, he was it from his work to attend to address a few words to the meeting. He said, he was it from his work to attend to address a few words to the meeting. He said, he was it from his work to attend to address a few words to the meeting

HER MAJESTY'S POULTRY HOUSE, HOME PARK, WINDSOR

THE QUEEN'S POULTRY, WINDSOR.

A "good capon" and a "fatted cock" are, proverbially, the "graces" of the Christmas table; and, accordingly, the London markets have through the week teemed with the products of the country poultry-yards, and in many cases, such has been the demand, they have been overwhelmed with consignments from the French markets. The skins and hides of Leadenhall have fled before the "favourite article;" and even the umbrageous stalls of Covent-garden have, in one instance, assumed the alias of a poultry shop. The subject, since we are taught, "with reason," "to eat" as well as "to admire," is, therefore, a popular one. The ready-to-be-roasted chicken forms an apt prelude, and by forethought a very savoury one, to the profitable mysteries of the POULTRY-YARD; and, as we were some time since favoured by her Majesty with an inspection of her elegant new poultry-house and its unique collection of fowls, and were at the same time honoured with permission to make such sketches as might be necessary for their adequate illustration, we are tempted to anticipate the vernal season, when we had intended to publish them, and now, at a season when the "thrice crowing cock" himself is wearied in summoning his family to daylight, we have resolved to show to our readers a fair and seasonable picture of our gracious and nature-loving Queen, and of

The habitations and the little jo. s

of her winged favourites in the royal poultry yards of Windsor.

In a secluded nook on the boundaries of the Home Park, sheltered from the prevailing winds by stately clumps of elm trees, stands the HOME FARM—or the farm attached to Windsor Castle—the private farm of her Majesty. In this establishment, which was founded by George III., is situated the royal owl-house and poultry-yards, which we have engraved at the head of this article, but of which, notwithstanding their great interest, the public know nothing, save the mere fact of their existence. Here her Majesty, retiring from the fatigues of state, finds a grateful relief in the simple pursuits of a country life; and here, too, it may be, like Louis XVI. in the Jardin Anglaise of the Petite Trianon, she seeks the renovation of those higher powers which find their best, if not their only home, in nature, or its God. In cultivating the homely recreations of a farm, her Majesty has exhibited great industry and much good taste. The buildings and the farm routine which sufficed for the clumsy management of 1793, have been discovered by her Majesty to be totally unsuited to the more enlightened system of 1843, and hence, under the direction of her Majesty and Prince Albert, assisted by Major-General

HER MAJESTY'S COCHIN CHINA FOWLS.

Wemyss, Lord Lincoln, and Mr. Rugall, her Majesty's intelligent and respected bailiff, an entire re-organization of the establishment has been determined, and is now in progress. In these pursuits, and in her continued prosecution of them, the Queen has, in our opinion, exhibited sound judgment and a healthy taste. There are some, we know, who would have the Queen to be "every inch a Queen"—even to the forsaking of her humanity. But, no! the Queen both thinks and acts after a very different fashion; and it has resulted that in all the royal arrangements of the present reign, there is to be found that love of neighbourhood, and that affectionate interest in the every day furniture of life, which is so truthfully depicted in the following lines of a Scottish poet; and in which, we may be allowed to say, we most heartily acquiesce:—

> I love the neighbourhood of man and beast:
> I would not place my stable out of sight.
> No! close behind my dwelling, it should form
> A fence, on one side, to my garden plot.
> What beauty equals shelter, in a clime
> Where wintry blasts with summer breezes blend,
> Chilling the day? How pleasant 'tis to hear
> Dreamier winds, amid surrounding trees,
> Raging aloud! How grateful 'tis to wake
> While raves the midnight storm, and hear the sound
> Of busy grinders at the well-filled rack;
> Or flapping wing and crow of chanticleer,
> Long ere the lingering morn; or bouncing flails,
> That tell the dawn is near! Pleasant the path
> By sunny garden wall, when all the fields
> Are chill and comfortless; or barn-yard spur,
> Where flocking birds, of various plume, and chirp
> Discordant, cluster on the leaning stack,
> From whence the thresher draws the rustling sheaves.

We may be allowed, then, to agree with her Majesty in thinking that the farm, the dairy, and even the kennel of the Home Park, are amongst the best embellishments of the royal domain of Windsor.

The fowl-house, designed and built by Messrs. Bedborough and Jenner, of Sheet-street, Windsor, is a semi-gothic building of simple and appropriate beauty. It consists, as our engraving shows, of a central pavilion, used for inspecting the fowls—crowned on the top by an elegant dove-cot, and on the sides, of wings capable of symmetric extension, in which are placed the model roosting houses, and laying and breeding nests of the fowls. The ground, in front, slopes towards the park, and is enclosed and divided by light wire fences, into separate wards, for the "run" or daily exercise of the birds.

HER MAJESTY'S WHITE JAVA BANTAMS.

TIER OF NESTS IN HER MAJESTY'S FOWL-HOUSE.

by repeated pecks, to tear open the ovarium, and eat the shelles eggs. To subdue this extraordinary propensity, her Majesty's keeper gave the cocks, first a hard-boiled egg, and then a marble one to fight with, taking care at the same time to keep them from any access to a real egg. No sooner was this done, than an attack on the false egg was commenced, which lasted for weeks, till at last, wearied with their fruitless labour, they gradually gave up all notice of them, and with that abandonment, as was anticipated, they ceased from their accustomed destruction of the eggs, and have never been known to attack them since. Another remarkable propensity is found in their love of each other's blood. This exhibits itself during the moult, at which time they have been known to peck each other naked, and by plucking out the bulbs of the new-made feathers, to gratify their thirst, in squeezing the blood from the vessels at their base. But this destructive habit being a source of annoyance to her Majesty, has likewise been cured. The keeper, noticing that these birds were subject to great heat of skin, and that occasionally its surface became hard and tightened, bethought himself, that in such cases, the hard roots of the feather, being drawn by the tension into a situation more at right angles with the body than at other times, the action of them on the superficial muscles would become of an irritating and painful nature; and that perhaps the habit of the bird in pecking out the feathers was, after all, nothing more than a provision of nature to save the race from greater evils likely to accrue from a feverish action of the integuments. It then occurred to him, that if these birds were regularly washed in warm water, and their skins well moistened with pomatum, the trouble and its rough treatment would altogether cease. The experiment was tried, and their plumage has never since been disturbed.

It may have been inferred by a zoological reader, that these habits would be associated with a custom of secret laying on the part of the hen. The case is so. No hen is more secluded in her maternal instincts than the Java bantam. In the hour of her solicitude, she seeks the deepest retirement, and frequently, in her nest, covers herself entirely from sight. This habit has led to the accidental discovery of another very useful regulation in the management of the poultry-house. The laying nests at Windsor are composed of dry twigs of heather—the Erica tetralix of our heaths—and small brambles of hawthorn, covered over with the lichen ramiferinus—the white lichen of our hedges, barn-doors, and park palings. These materials, rubbed together by the motion and pressure of the hen, emitted a light powder, the produce of the crushed leaves; and this, finding its way, between the feathers, to the skin, was found to have the immediate effect of discharging the bird of every description of parasite. The Java bantam, which, in a greater degree than other fowl, used the conveniences of the nest, being then found to be the cleanest bird, the cause was, in a short while, attributed to the dust of the nest; and from that time forward all her Majesty's fowls were accommodated with the bed furniture we have described.

The Java bantams are wonderful layers; and in proper season their fondness for offspring is so strong, that on a trial of its capacity, a hen in her Majesty's possession, sat a period of nine weeks on three successive sets of eggs.

The remainder of her Majesty's fancy fowls consist chiefly of some splendid bantams of Sir John Sebright's breed, a cock of which—remarkable for his martial bearing—is a great favourite with Prince Albert; a fine collection of Scotch bantams, including some curious "crosses" with grouse birds; and several frizzle fowl, remarkable for their white, silky, hair-like feather, and their black skins.

JAMES WALTER, AND HER MAJESTY'S FAVOURITE PIGEONS.

The pigeons in her Majesty's dovecot call for no remark, save one of admiration at the cleanliness and very social disposition which they every one exhibit. They comprise the usual varieties of the Columbia livia; the C. tremula latecanda, of which there are several magnificent examples; the C. cucullata Jacobina; the black-hooded monk, one of which—a most graceful creature—is much attached to her Majesty, and is accustomed to acknowledge her gratuities by many elegant gambols: the C. gutturosa sububicunda; the C. turcira; and numerous beautiful specimens of the Roman crested, narrow-tailed shaker, tumbler, smiter, and tambour varieties.

The dove-cot, beyond the beauty of its form and situation, and the completeness of its fittings, is only remarkable for its linings of looking-glass. This is, we believe, a very novel addition to the comforts of a pigeon-house, but being found a very useful one, its permanent adoption has been determined. The pigeons stand for hours at the glass panels bowing and cooing to the reciprocating compliments of their own images, and seem to be vastly pleased with the extreme polish of their manners.

The feeder of this heterogeneous family—honest James Walter—demands a passing notice. To the chickens he is a most important personage; he is their vigilant guardian, protecting them from all enemies, their constant friend, supplying them with every necessary of life, and their faithful arbitrator, settling their quarrels, and in due accordance with gallinaceous law, adjudicating their disputes. He understands their language, their dispositions, their diseases; he knows their appetites, their hours of laying, and the little assistances required by the hens in the season of domestic anxiety. He knows, also, the difference between a red comb and a purple one—a fat fowl and a lean one, and he accordingly becomes, in due time, their unsparing executioner. Cleanly, careful, mild, patient, clever and attentive, his example commends itself to the emulation of the fowl-keepers of Britain. Our engraving represents him in the act of feeding her Majesty's favourites.

The Commissioners of Woods and Forests are about to make considerable additions to this very interesting establishment.

Inside these wards, gravel walks, bordered by grass plats, lead to the entrances of the fowl house. In the proportions, distribution, and fittings of the apartments of this house, considerable knowledge of the habits, with a corresponding and most commendable regard to the conveniences of their graminivorous tenants, has been displayed; the chambers are spacious, airy, and of an equal and rather warm temperature, which accords with their original habits, and their nests are made as far as possible to resemble the dark bramble covered recesses of their original jungles. In this particular her Majesty has set a good example to the farmers of this country, who too often follow the false routine of their fathers, rather than consult the habits and obey the natural instincts of the animals about them.

Her Majesty's collection of fowls is very considerable, occupying half-a-dozen very extensive yards, several small fields, and numerous feeding-houses, laying-sheds, hospitals, winter courts, &c. It is, however, in the new fowl-house that the more rare and curious birds are kept, and to these—as the common sorts are well known—we shall confine our attention. The Cochin-China fowls claim the first consideration. These extraordinary birds are, as our group shows, of gigantic size, and in their proportions very nearly allied to the family of bustards, to which, in all probability, they are proximately related in fact, they have already acquired the name of the "ostrich fowl." In general colour they are of a rich glossy brown; tail black, and on the breast a horse-shoe marking of black: the comb cleanly and neatly formed, with shallow serrations; the wattles double. Two characters appear to be peculiar to them—one, the arrangement of the feathers on the back of the cock's neck, which are turned upwards; and the other, the form of the wing, which is jointed, to fold together, so that, on occasion, the bird may double up its posterior half and bring it forward between the anterior half and the body. The eggs are of a deep mahogany colour, and of a delicious flavour. These birds are very healthy, quiet, attached to home, and in every respect suited to the English climate. They are fed, like most of the other fowls, on a mixture of boiled rice, potatoes, and milk.

Next in interest are the Java bantams, of which her Majesty has twenty-eight beautiful specimens. These birds are perfectly white, but present no popular peculiarities of form or structure to call for description; their habits, however, are in some respects so singular as to demand especial notice. The cocks are so extremely fond of the hens' eggs, that they constantly break and suck them; so strong indeed, is the appetite, they have been known to attack the hen, and

THE CHRISTMAS WAITS.

THE CHRISTMAS WAITS.

The name waits is now applied only to those itinerant musicians who, in most of the large towns of England, go through the principal streets at night, for some time before Christmas, play two or three tunes, call the hour, then remove to a distance, where they go through the same ceremony, and so on, till four or five o'clock in the morning. For this nocturnal concert, the players expect a trifling gratuity from those whom they have serenaded.

Would-be-wits have often said these modern minstrels ought to be termed waites, from their disturbing many a midnight slumber; and with this, without knowing it, they panned "like truth." The word, which was formerly spelled waighte or waighte, is common to all the Teutonic languages (German, wacht; Dutch, wagt; Danish, vagt; Swedish, vakt;) and the root is the same as the Anglo-Saxon wecgan, to wake, and wecian (pronounced wakian), to watch, and the English wake and watch.

Others, however, derive the term from waughtes, or bauthoys; the signification being, after a time, transferred from the instrument to the performers themselves. Todd derives the name from waits nocturnal itinerant musicians. Beaumont and Fletcher, Bayles, on account of their waiting on masquerades, &c., or of gait, a watch; or from the French guetter, to watch; because, anciently, they kept a sort of watch all night. We give the several derivations, as the origin of the term has been much disputed. However this may be, the waighte, or wayte, was originally a minstrel watchman; and the Kings of England, as well as the mayors of large corporate cities and towns, seem to have employed them in preference to common watchmen. They were generally furnished with superb dresses, or splendid cloaks, for festivals. They were in the service of the court in the reign of Edward IV., and had their regular allowance of coals, candles bread, ale, &c. It is not improbable that the office of the king's cock-crower took its rise from these early watchmen, and formed a regular system of watching. At Exeter, waites were set up with a regular salary, in 1400; and although suppressed by the Puritans, were reinstated in 1660.

The Waits seem to have been always distinct from the common watch, which was confined the Dutch Watch, and never, we believe, the Waits. At later period, the term Waits seems to have been restricted to the band of minstrels kept by the city of London, and other large cities and towns. We read of the City Waits frequently, from their attendance on the city pageants, and of the Waits of Southwark and other places. In the Tritler, No 222, a writer from Nottingham complains that the young men of fashion there "make love with the tenor music;" and that "the Waits often help him through his courtship." The Waits, or stipendiary town musicians, have for many years, we believe, ceased to exist in every corporate city and town in England We have referred to the mode by which the Waits of our days, or rather nights, are remunerated for their minstrelsy.

LITERATURE.

A CHRISTMAS CAROL, in Prose. Being a GHOST STORY of CHRISTMAS. By CHARLES DICKENS.

How shall we convey to our readers the surpassing beauty with which the accomplished author of this remarkable little volume has worked out, as he sportively terms it, raised—"the Ghost of an Idea?" By selecting some of its wertliest yet substantial truths—its impressive eloquence, or its unfeigned lightness of heart—its playful and sparkling humour, or its under currents of thought—its gems of world knowledge, or its gentle spirit of humanity—all which light up every page, and, of a truth, put us in good humour with ourselves, with each other, with the season, and with the author?

The framework of the book is simple enough. Marley, a miser, is "dead as a door nail." Scrooge, his partner, in liberality as in ledger, is not so dreadfully cut up by the sad event but that he is an excellent man of business on the very day of the funeral, and solemnizes it with an undoubted bargain: he is "a tight-fisted hand at the grindstone"—a squeezing, wrenching, grasping, scraping, clutching, covetous old sinner! He lives his office in the dog-days, and does not thaw it one degree at Christmas. But here is a scene:—

CHRISTMAS EVE.

Once upon a time—of all the good days in the year, on Christmas Eve—old Scrooge sat busy in his counting house. It was cold, bleak, biting weather: foggy withal: and he could hear the people in the court outside go wheezing up and down, beating their hands upon their breasts, and stamping their feet upon the pavement stones to warm them. The city clocks had only just gone three, but it was quite dark already: it had not been light all day: and candles were flaring in the windows of the neighbouring offices, like ruddy smears upon the palpable brown air. The fog came pouring in at every chink and keyhole, and was driving wirbout that although the court was of immense extent, it could also scarce see the opposite houses, which were mere phantoms. To see the dreary cloud come drooping down, obscuring everything, one might have thought that Nature lived hard by, and was brewing on a large scale. The door of Scrooge's counting house was open that he might keep his eye upon his clerk, who, in a dismal little cell beyond, was copying letters. Scrooge had a very small fire, but the clerk's fire was so very much smaller that it looked like one coal. But he couldn't replenish it, for Scrooge kept the coal box in his own room; and so surely as the clerk came in with the shovel, the master predicted that it would be necessary for them to part. Wherefore the clerk put on his white comforter and tried to warm himself at the candle; in which effort, not being a man of a strong imagination, he failed.

"A merry Christmas, uncle! God save you!" cried a cheerful voice. It was the voice of Scrooge's nephew, who came upon him so quickly that this was the first intimation he had of his approach. "Bah!" said Scrooge, "Humbug!" He had so heated himself with rapid walking in the fog and frost, this nephew of Scrooge's, that he was all in a glow; his face was ruddy and handsome; his eyes sparkled and his breath smoked again. "Christmas a humbug, uncle!" said Scrooge's nephew. "You don't mean that, I'm sure."

"I do," said Scrooge. "Merry Christmas! What right have you to be merry? What reason have you to be merry? You're poor enough." "Come, then," returned the nephew gaily. "What right have you to be dismal? what reason have you to be morose? You're rich enough."

Scrooge having no better answer ready on the spur of the moment, said "Bah!" again; and followed it up with "Humbug." "Don't be cross, uncle," said the nephew.

"What else can I be," returned the uncle, "when I live in such a world of fools as this? Merry Christmas! Out upon merry Christmas! What's Christmas time to you but a time for paying bills without money; a time for finding yourself a year older, and not an hour richer; a time for balancing your books and having every item in 'em through a round dozen of months presenting itself before you? If I had my will, every idiot who goes about with 'Merry Christmas' on his lips should be boiled with his own pudding, and buried with a stake of holly through his heart. He should."

"Uncle," pleaded the nephew.

"Nephew," returned the uncle, sternly, "keep Christmas in your own way, and let me keep it in mine." "Keep it!" repeated Scrooge's nephew. "But you don't keep it."

"Let me leave it alone, then," said Scrooge. "Much good may it do you! Much good it has ever done you!" "There are many things from which I might have derived good, by which I have not profited, I dare say," returned the nephew: "Christmas among the rest. But I am sure I have always thought of Christmas time, when it has come round—apart from the veneration due to its sacred name and origin, if anything belonging to it can be apart from that—as a good time; a kind, forgiving, charitable, pleasant time; the only time I know of, in the long calendar of the year, when men and women seem by one consent to open their shut-up hearts freely, and to think of people below them as if they really were fellow passengers to the grave, and not another race of creatures, bound on other journeys. And therefore, uncle, though it has never put a scrap of gold or silver in my pocket, I believe that it has done me good, and will do me good; and I say, God bless it!"

The clerk in the tank involuntarily applauded: becoming immediately sensible of the impropriety, he poked the fire, and extinguished the last frail spark for ever.

* * * * *

Meanwhile the fog and darkness thickened so that people ran about with flaring links and carried their way with linkmen before it. It crept into the mouth of the yawning old gateway, and its old cannon, into its deepest gloom, and brooded on the iron spikes of the wall, became more and more dense, until the brawny gentleman in the chains, was heard to rattle his fetters in the cold. Implacable fog, as dense without as within, it made fast and warm the houses of the poor. In the main street, at the corner of the court, some labourers were repairing the gas-pipes, and had lighted a great fire in a brazier round which a party of ragged men and boys were gathered: warming their hands and winking their eyes before the blaze in rapture. The water-plug being left in solitude, its overflowings sullenly congealed, and turned to misanthropic ice. The brightness of the shops where holly sprigs and berries crackled in the lamp-heat of the windows, made pale faces ruddy as they passed. Poulterers' and grocers' trades became a splendid joke: a glorious pageant, with which it was next to impossible to believe that such dull principles as bargain and sale had anything to do. The Lord Mayor, in the stronghold of the mighty Mansion-house, gave orders to his fifty cooks and butlers to keep Christmas as a Lord Mayor's house should; and even the little tailor, whom he had fined five shillings on the previous Monday for being drunk and blood-thirsty in the streets, stirred up tomorrow's pudding in his garret, while his lean wife and the baby sallied out to buy the beef.

* * * * *

Scrooge took his melancholy dinner in his usual melancholy tavern; and having read all the newspapers, and begulled the rest of the evening with his banker's book, went home to bed. He lived in chambers which had once belonged to his deceased partner. They were a gloomy suite of rooms, in a dreadful pile of building up a yard, where it had so little business to be that one fancied it must have run there when it was young house, playing at hide-and-seek with other houses, and have forgotten the way out again. It was old enough now, and drearily enough, for Scrooge had no relish for anything which was not money. The yard was as dark that even Scrooge, who knew its every stone, was fain to grope with his hands. The fog and frost so hung about the black old gateway of the house, that it seemed as if the Genius of the Weather sat in mournful meditation on the threshold.

On his return home, Scrooge sees Marley's ghost in the knocker; but he goes up stairs, double locks himself in, and we come to—

THE MISER'S FIRESIDE.

It was a very low fire indeed; nothing on such a bitter night. He was obliged to sit close to it, and hood over it, before he could extract the least sensation of warmth from such a handful of fuel. The fire place was an old one, built by some Dutch merchant long ago, and paved all round with quaint Dutch tiles, designed to illustrate the Scriptures. There were Cains and Abels; Pharaoh's daughters, Queens of Sheba, Angelic Messengers descending through the air on clouds like feather-beds, Abrahams, Belshazzars, Apostles putting off to sea in butter-boats, hundreds of figures, to attract his thoughts; and yet that face of Marley, seven years dead, came like the ancient Prophet's rod, and swallowed up the whole. If each smooth tile had been a blank at first, with power to shape some picture on its surface from the dreary mind fragments of his thoughts, there would have been a copy of old Marley's head on every one.

The phantom, however, pursues him through the heavy door, and enter

MARLEY'S GHOST.

Upon its coming in, the dying flame leaped up, as though it cried, "I know him; Marley's Ghost!" and fell again. The same face: the very same. Marley in his pigtail, usual waistcoat, tights and boots; the tassels on the latter bristling, like his pigtail, and his coat-skirts, and the hair upon his head. The chain he drew was clasped about his middle. It was long, and wound about him like a tail; and it was made (for Scrooge observed it closely) of cash-boxes, keys, padlocks, ledgers, deeds, and heavy purses wrought in steel. His body was transparent: so that Scrooge, observing him, and looking through his waistcoat, could see the two buttons on his coat behind. Scrooge had often heard it said that Marley had no bowels, but he had never believed it until now.

A colloquy ensues, and here is

THE PHANTOM'S REBUKE.

"Oh! captive, bound, and double-ironed," cried the phantom, "not to know, that ages of incessant labour by immortal creatures, for this earth must pass into eternity before the good of which it is susceptible is all developed. Not to know that any Christian spirit working kindly in its little sphere, whatever it may be, will find its mortal life too short for its vast means of usefulness. Not to know that no space of regret can make amends for one life opportunity misused! Yet such was I! Oh! such was I!" "But you were always a good man of business, Jacob," faltered Scrooge, who now began to apply this to himself. "Business!" cried the Ghost, wringing its hands again. "Mankind was my business. The common welfare was my business; charity, mercy, forbearance, and benevolence, were all my business. The dealings of my trade were but a drop of water in the comprehensive ocean of my business!"

The narrative then resolves itself into Scrooge's visitations from three spirits—the Ghosts of Christmas Past—Christmas Present—and Christmas yet to Come. The wretched miser is led about by the phantoms through many a joyous scene; and, rather than pursue the narrative, we shall quote a few of the exquisite sketches:—

A DANCE AT FEZZIWIG'S.

In came a fiddler with a music-book, and went up to the lofty desk, and made an orchestra of it, and tuned like fifty stomach-aches. In came Mrs. Fezziwig, one vast [illegible] In came the three Miss Fezziwigs, beautiful and lovable. In came the six young followers whose hearts they broke. In came all the young men and women employed in the business. In came the housemaid with her cousin, the baker. In came the cook, with her brother's particular friend, the milkman. In came the boy from over the way, who was suspected of not having board enough from his master; trying to hide himself behind the girl from number [illegible] In came [illegible] In they all came, one after another; some shyly, some boldly, some [illegible] fully, some awkwardly, some pushing, some pulling; in they all came, anyhow and everyhow. Away they all went, twenty couple at once; hands across, and back again the other way; down the middle and up again, round and round in various stages of affectionate grouping; old top couple always turning up in the wrong place; new top couple starting off again, as soon as they got there; all top couples at last, and not a bottom one to help them! When this result was brought about, old Fezziwig, clapping his hands to stop the dance, cried out, "Well done!" and the fiddler plunged his hot face into a pot of porter, especially provided for that purpose. But scorning rest upon his reappearance, he instantly began again, though there were no dancers yet, as if the other fiddler had been carried home, exhausted, on a shutter; and he were a brand new man resolved to beat him out of sight, or perish.

There were more dances, and there were forfeits, and more dances, and there was cake, and there was negus, and there was a great piece of cold roast, and there was a great piece of cold boiled, and there were mince-pies, and plenty of beer. But the great effect of the evening came after the roast and boiled, when the fiddler an artful dog, mind! the sort of man who knew his business better than you or I could have told him) struck up "Sir Roger de Coverley." Then old Fezziwig stood out to dance with Mrs. Fezziwig. Top couple too; with a good stiff piece of work cut out for them; three or four and twenty pair of partners; people who were not to be trifled with; people who would dance, and had no notion of walking.

But if they had been twice as many—ah, four times—old Fezziwig would have been a match for them, and so would Mrs. Fezziwig. As to her, she was worthy to be his partner in every sense of the term. If that's not high praise, let's hear a better. And I'll use it. A positive light appeared to issue from Fezziwig's calves. They shone in every part of the dance like moons. You couldn't have predicted, at any given time, what would become of 'em next. And when old Fezziwig and Mrs. Fezziwig had gone all through the dance; advance and retire, hold hands with your partner; bow and curtsey; corkscrew; thread-the-needle, and back again to your place; Fezziwig "cut"—cut so deftly, that he appeared to wink with his legs, and come upon his feet again without a stagger.

When the clock struck eleven, this domestic ball broke up. Mr. and Mrs. Fezziwig took their stations, one on either side the door, and shaking hands with every person individually as he or she went out, wished him or her a Merry Christmas. When everybody had retired but the two prentices, they did the same to them; and thus the cheerful voices died away, and the lads were left to their beds, which were under a counter in the back-shop.

CHRISTMAS MORNING.

They stood in the city streets on Christmas morning, where (for the weather was severe) the people made a rough, but hearty and not unpleasant kind of music, in scraping the snow from the pavement in front of their dwellings, and from the tops of their houses: whence it was usual delight to the boys to see it come plump-ing down into the road below, and splinter into artificial little mountains [illegible] The house fronts looked black enough, and the windows blacker, contrasting with the smooth white sheet of snow upon the roofs, and with the dirtier snow upon the ground; which last deposit had been trampled and [illegible] by thousands of feet after its fall. There was [illegible] of [illegible] channels, hard to trace, in the thick yellow mud and icy water.

The sky was gloomy, and the shortest streets were choked up with dingy mist, half thawed, half frozen, whose heavier particles descended in showers of sooty atoms, as if all the chimneys in Great Britain had, by one consent, caught fire, and were blazing away to their hearts' content. There was [illegible] of air without temperature to warm anybody or dry anything. But the wild delight was in the clearer summer air and brightest summer sun might have endeavoured to diffuse in vain.

For the people who were shovelling away on the housetops were jovial and full of glee; calling out to one another from the parapet and now and then exchanging a facetious snowball—better-natured missile far than many a wordy jest—laughing thereat, as it well might, and roaring out lustily with it. The [illegible] were very fat; and on every post and pump and lamp-iron, it [illegible] there were [illegible] of [illegible] Boys were [illegible] with their fathers' money, and [illegible] with their own fresh faces. The very [illegible] were [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] and "I will live in the Past, the Present, and the Future!" Scrooge repeated, as he scrambled out of bed. "The Spirits of all Three shall strive within me. Oh, Jacob Marley! Heaven, and the Christmas Time be praised for this! I say it on my knees, old Jacob; on my knees!"

"I don't know what to do!" cried Scrooge, laughing and crying in the same breath; and making a perfect Laocoon of himself with his stockings. "I am as light as a feather, I am as happy as an angel, I am as merry as a schoolboy. I am as giddy as a drunken man. A merry Christmas to everybody! A happy New Year to all the world. Hallo here! Whoop! hallo!"

He had no further intercourse with Spirits, but lived upon the total abstinence principle ever afterwards; and it was always said of him, that he knew how to keep Christmas well, if any man alive possessed the knowledge. May that be truly said of us, and all of us. And so, as Tiny Tim observed, God bless us every one

The volume is illustrated with some admirable engravings on steel and wood, by Leech: the former are tastefully coloured, and the latter have the delicacy of fine etchings. Altogether, this is an exquisite work, such as we trust the author will produce many seasons to come.

THE ILLUMINATED MAGAZINE.

This months Number opens promisingly with a spirited story entitled "The Maiden of the Rose," or in less romantic parlance, a Cambridge row in 1261. "The Last Glass; or, the Metempsychosis of a Wine Irishman, by Piers Shafton, Esq., Ent.," is another uproarious jeu d'esprit of a fellow who, in his "tipsy mirth and jollity," fancies himself, by turns, a recreant politician, a first-rate singer, a grave poet, and a "ministering angel of philanthropy." The humour is broad and extravagant, but quite in keeping with a "sixteenth tumbler." Next is a continuation of Dr. Roden's "England Sixty Years Ago," extending to ten pages; and a very rattling and mingled yarn about mountebanks, newspapers, duels, cheesy living, children's books, &c. &c., in this same olio, to be continued "in the next number." Miss Costello has contributed a legend of the Burdett family, "Robanne with the long hair," a very pretty tale; and one G. D. has sketched, with considerable point, "The Use of Dress and the Man of Verse:" although we prefer the annexed epigrammatic illustration from the fertile fancy of Kenny Meadows.

"A Visit to the Great St. Bernard," by Mrs. Postans, is alike fluent and minute in its narrative. Our quotation is onward.:

A CHRISTMAS CANTICLE.

Now does old Father Christmas, with a reverend yet joyous mien, heralding a goodly train of wassailers and gleeman, proclaim through all the realms of Christendom a high and hearty festival, bidding mankind to rest them for a space from toil, and yield without reserve to wholesome joy and unbounded revelry; and, at his bidding, mirth and hospitality arise, and exercise benevolent sway reigning in undisputed sovereignty and welcomed universally with loud and fervent acclamation.

Now do the spells of home revive in their ancient weight, within the breasts of many and many a household band, long sundered from the hearths round which they clustered in their early childhood; and the young wife, who had well-nigh forgotten the innocent gambols of her girlhood, feels her Heart quicken at the music-sounds of her hoyden sister's voice; and the brother, who in the struggles and the turmoil of selfish world, had seldom the free fair spirit of his youth, regains some portion of the frankness and sincerity that were his pride of old, among familiar faces and the well remembered haunts of happy boyhood. Now are the dark and shreckless homes of penury lightened for a season by the angel wiles of smiling charity: and want forgets to pine, and grief forbears to weep, as benevolence, with open hand and gentle voice, pours forth her store of alms and consolation; and beneath the lofty and beautiful influences of the period, men's hearts are touched with compassionate and kindly feelings towards their fellows; and the ties of common fellowship and brotherhood are recognised and felt by men of all classes and persuasions, and the clear strong light of no universal favour shines equally upon all on the dwellings of the peasant and the peer—on the palace and the poor house;—and even gleams with a tempered ray upon the inmates of the gloomy prison! Now does the mystic mistletoe depend from porch and ceiling in many a stately home and many a lowly cottage throughout the length and breadth of "merrie England;" and now does the peachy cheek of gentle maiden, caught by surprise beneath its licence-giving sprinkles, glow with a rich rose blush, raised tumultuously by the hearty impress of the startling kiss. Now is the waits starlit visit "the dead of night" with their harmonious discord, and chorale of old gentlemen, aroused from their first sleep, to the complaints of Egypt as rain on all such sonorous nuisances, and once more, in every clerk's garret shivering with yielding pillow, to woo old Somnus to his drowsy eyelids. Now do postmen, coachmen, watchmen, beadles, pew-openers, shoeblacks, tailkmen, scavengers, waiters, and errand-boys, grow supplicatively and ornamentally civil, to the innocent amusement of yourself, until honey-day arrives, and then the mystery is solved—the reason manifest. Now the small green-coated boys, with swollen red hands, blue cheeks, and frozen noses, looking all drunk and shivering, with their tin-can ringing and pictured scrawls of delights upon your notice, and crave, with "a hated breath," some numismatic token of your approbation. Now is a walk upon a breezy common, with wind due east, the snow knee-deep, and the thermometer below freezing point, a feat of valorous daring. Now is a blacksmith's forge, on a frosty night, a comfortable and cheery thing to look upon. Now is a breakfast of strawberries, a moonlide sesnin upon the greensward, a bather by twilight in the "freshet brook," to be numbered among the "Pleasures of Memory;" and violets, green leaves, the plant of nightingales, veal-fruit, and gipsy parties, to be ranked with those of Hope. Now are the butchers prodigal of their sus and gas, lavish in fair white calves and berried holly, and rivals in the display of huge and over-fed carcases, especially in beeves. Now do grocers alluringly set forth a rich array of spices and fruits, candies and conserves, proud of "India, East or West, or Middle Shore,

In Pontus, or the Punic Coast, or where Alcinous reigned."

Now is a confectioner's shop a tempting thing to holiday boys, whose store of silver coin is burning in their pockets; and greasy looks are turned towards the ice within, from snow and ice without; and many conjectures formed as to the relative worth of the sugared cakes—sprinkled with ornaments and imagery—until at length the accomplished problem is effected, and fruit, ice, and cake, or rather cake forestalled, by craving and impatient appetite. Now do old aldermen, who have outlived their kindred and generation, resort for warmth and converse to the rude and sooty hearths of London fires, and bring and pictured scrawls of delights upon your notice, and crave, with "a hated breath," some numismatic token of your approbation. Now is a walk upon a breezy common, with wind due

MEETING OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY, AT SOMERSET HOUSE.

MEETING OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY, AT SOMERSET HOUSE.

The commencement of the ordinary Thursday evening meetings of the Royal Society is a fit opportunity for introducing our readers to this valuable depository of science.

The Royal Society, we should premise, consists of a number of persons associated together, for the purpose of promoting mathematical and physical science. At its formation, the more particular object of the members was to assist each other in extending their knowledge of natural and experimental philosophy. The Society originated about 1645, in the weekly conferences of a club, in which, purposely excluding politics and theology, they agreed to communicate to each other the results of their researches in chemistry, medicine, geometry, astronomy, mechanics, magnetism, navigation, and experimental philosophy in general. They usually met at one of the member's lodgings, but occasionally in Gresham College, upon the site of the present Excise Office, between Old Broad-street and Bishopsgate-street. This is supposed to be the club which Mr. Boyle, in 1646, designated the Invisible or Philosophical Society. The civil war interrupted these pacific pursuits; and, in consequence of the troubles which ensued on the resignation of the Protectorship by Richard Cromwell, the apartments at Gresham College, which had been occupied for scientific purposes, were converted into quarters for soldiers, and the members of the Society were compelled to disperse.

Upon the Restoration in 1660, however, the meetings were revived; and in 1662, the Society was incorporated by a charter from Charles II., who is, therefore, regarded as the founder. The Fellows then met every Wednesday, from 3 to 5 o'clock in the afternoon, at Gresham College, or at a Fellow's chambers in the Temple. Charles II. made several visits to the Society between 1661 and 1664; bestowed upon them a mace in 1663; and in 1664, signed himself in the charter book, the founder; at the same time, the Duke of York (afterwards James II.) signed himself a Fellow. Thus, the Royal Society of London must be considered as the oldest of its kind in Europe, if we except the Academy of the Lyncei, at Rome.

After the great fire, which laid nearly all London in ashes, the city authorities took possession of the Society's Rooms at Gresham College; and the latter gratefully accepted the offer of apartments in Arundel House, in the Strand, the munificent owner, Mr. Henry Howard, of Norfolk, presenting the Society with his grandfather's valuable library. In 1674, they returned to Gresham College, now the Royal Exchange, where they continued to meet till 1701, when they purchased the house at the top of Crane-court (a cul-de-sac), in Fleet-street, and removed thither. The Society remained here until 1782, when the Government assigned to them the apartments which they now occupy in Somerset House.

Our engraving shows the Society's meeting-room, a spacious apartment upon the second floor, looking into the great quadrangle of Somerset House; the entrance to the same being in the eastern part of the Strand front. The room has one of Chambers's enriched ceilings, and the floor is carpeted, and covered with backed seats; but the eye soon rests upon the busts and paintings of the presidents and most distinguished Fellows of the Society. Upon the chimney-piece, at the upper end, is a bust of Charles II.; and upon pedestals, one on each side, a bust of Newton and another philosopher. Immediately above are portraits of Newton, Davy, and Wollaston. Upon the chimney-piece, at the opposite end of the room, is a bust of George III., and above it a large portrait of Sir Joseph Banks. Among the portraits lately placed here are Drs. Young and Dalton, Davies, Gilbert, and the Duke of Sussex; and among the oldest portraits are those of Evelyn and Pepys. It is altogether a most interesting collection.

At the upper end of the room is the President's seat, an antique chair, surmounted by the arms of the Society; before this seat is a crimson velvet cushion. Beneath is a long table, whereon, at a meeting, such as is represented in the engraving, are placed three crowns, and the Society's mace. The chair on either side of the President's is occupied by a Secretary.

The mace is of silver, about four feet in length, and very massive; it was, a few years since, gilded at the expense of £20. It is the same which was in use, time out of mind, in the House of Commons, and tolwhich Cromwell, when he dissolved the Long Parliament, alluded in the words "Take away that bauble!" Shortly after, it was presented to the Royal Society by Charles II.; being superseded at the House of Commons by the one now borne by the Sergeant-at-Arms.

In the Charter-book is the signature of every Fellow, commencing with Charles II. This is, indeed, a rare autographic treasure. Among the signatures are those of all the British sovereigns subsequent to the founder; the latest royal signatures are those of Prince Albert and the King of Prussia. The book is a thick folio of parchment. In the ante-room we were much struck with a colossal marble bust (by Baily) of Doilond, the celebrated philosophical instrument maker. In the library, too, is an admirable bust of Mrs. Somerville, celebrated for her high attainments in mathematics. For a few of these details we are indebted to the courtesy of Mr. C. R. Weld, the newly-elected assistant-secretary.

THE VILLAGE OF EDENSOR.

THE VILLAGE OF EDENSOR.

Amidst the princely festivities of Chatsworth, in honour of her Majesty's recent visit, the pretty village of Edensor, doubtless, attracted many an admirer. The tourist having attained the lofty ground, gains the first full view of the "palace of the Peak," finely embosomed in

> Majestic woods of ever vigorous green,
> Stage above stage, high waving o'er the hills.—THOMSON.

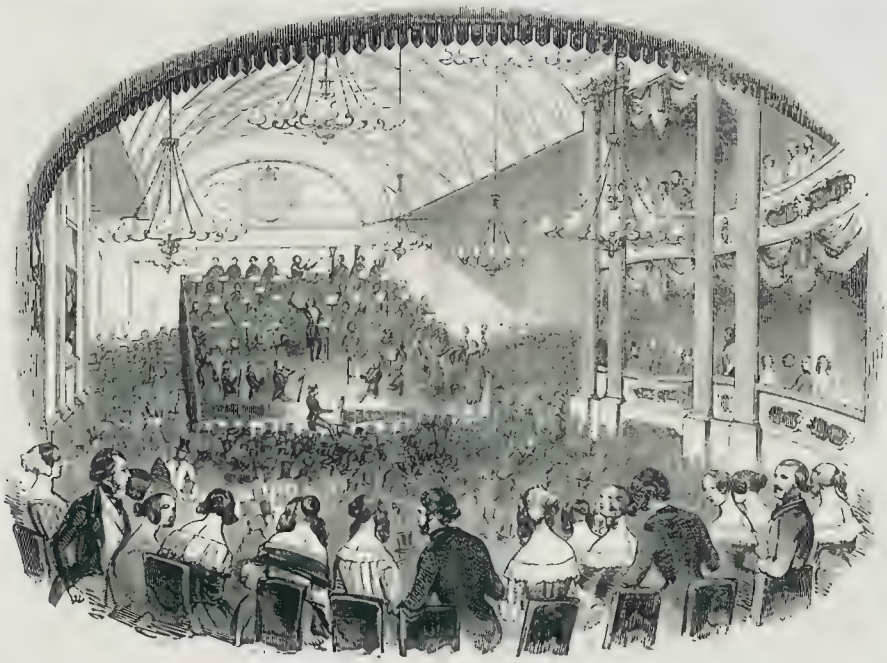
The road from hence takes a gentle sweep towards the mansion; but you first reach Edensor, which is situated in the park; and, with its old church, and its beautiful cottages, in the Tudor, Elizabethan, and Swiss styles, gives an air of rural beauty and artless simplicity to the scene.

Mr. Adam in his excellent guide-book, "The Gem of the Peak," informs us that "this spot once presented a far different feature—unsightly houses, and ragged children generally appearing to open the gate for the passage of a carriage; but the Duke of Devonshire had most of these removed, and built the poor cottagers better and more substantial houses, with good gardens attached, on an eminence by the road-side, about a mile distant; and those that remain are made more ornamental. Thus, while his grace consulted his good taste, in making this part of his domain more beautiful, he exhibited those rarer qualities, for which his grace is remarkable—a noble, kind, and liberal disposition."

Edensor Church merits a visit. In the chancel is a very costly and splendid alabaster monument, to the memory of the first Earl of Devonshire, which is composed of several figures of life-size, sculptured in relief, and elaborately finished. There are several other monuments worth inspection. There is a well-appointed inn at Edensor, for the accommodation of tourists. The whole of the place has been most materially altered and beautified, by removing old buildings, planting trees, and throwing the fine old church open to the park; as well as by putting up handsome iron gates and ornamental lodges; in short, everything, for finish and completeness, is in admirable keeping with the magnificent features of the domain.

Northward of the elegant bridge at Edensor, is a small tower, darkly shaded with trees, encompassed by a moat, and approached by a flight of steps. This is called "The Bower of Mary Queen of Scots," from a garden which formerly occupied its summit, and wherein that unhappy and beauteous princess passed many tedious hours of her captivity. Here, as may be gathered from one of the royal attendants, "All day she (the Queen) wrought with her nydill, and the diversity of the colours made the work seem less tedious, and consequed so long at it till very payne made her give it over." This gave the earliest celebrity of Chatsworth a melancholy interest. Mary resided here for some months in 1570, and was here also in the years 1573-77-78 and 81; the house of this period being a quadrangular building, with turrets.

QUEEN MARY'S BOWER, CHATSWORTH.



JULLIEN'S CONCERT—THE ORCHESTRA.

Now—reader—before Beau Jullien stays the pretty palpitation of his potent wand before he sets Christmas in musical mourning for his delicious concerts—before he grieves all persons without the English Opera House by admitting no persons within—before he gives society—what society, in its slang, designates a closer—here we—artist in chief, or if you will, painter and engraver in ordinary to that great conductor, who not only conducts himself, but other people so uncommonly well—present the living interior of that unrivalled orchestral promenade, wherein sweet sounds walk about with the people, and spirit-thralling melodies do incontinently abound. So do not start, reader, if on a sudden a burst of music should come rollicking forth out of that most faithful picture: leap not from your chair, good creature, if you find these very letters silting to Scotch bagpipes—your spectacles drunk with an Hibernian jig, or your snuff-box dancing an English quadrille. Jullien is the boy that does it, that is enough for you—you have only to listen to be enchanted—and when enchanted you are much in the case of the company who could not cease from waltzing as long as the squire in "Oberon" blew the fairy horn.

Badinage apart, these Promenade Concerts have been really delightful—and for pipes of all denominations Jullien has we suppose the best band in the world. His season, too, has been an unprecedentedly successful one; and he has the supreme felicity of making a fast fortune while the ink is running from our pen.

SCENE FROM BALFE'S OPERA OF "THE BOHEMIAN GIRL," AT DRURY-LANE THEATRE.

As we have before given an outline of the plot of this charming opera, it is needless to say much more at present than will serve to point out the situation in it which has been selected for our illustration. But, perhaps, it will be as well to quote the entire incident of the scene. After the festival of St. Stephen, which takes place on the Grand Plaats of Presburg, with a gorgeous procession of the different trades, bearing their descriptive banners and emblems, the fair Queen's jealousy begins to manifest itself in open revenge, for she, by a lucky coincidence of occurrences, contrives to make Arline appear guilty of theft, and have her rudely dragged before the chief magistrate of the district, Count Arnheim. In the course of the examination of the innocent gipsy girl, the count discovers, by a certain mark on her arm, that she is his long-lost daughter—on which a most delightful quartet and chorus are sung, and the act terminates, to the joy of everybody present, if we may except the disappointed fair Queen. We have already spoken in just terms of praise with regard to this native opera, the liberal splendour of its production, and, in fact, of the tout ensemble. We will here take an opportunity to particularize some of its beauties, and defend Balfe from most envious and unfounded accusations. The beauties of this composer's partition are clearness of design or appositeness to the scene—occasional new thoughts in melody, but by no means ever a servile sequence of predecessors or contemporaries—a thorough knowledge of orchestral effects, and a constructiveness of a whole, which, although it does not astound us by its magnitude or colossal dimensions, exhibits all the nicer delicacies of art. We are quite sick of hearing this most deserving artist accused of plagiarism by those who know and revere the wholesale robberies of their idols. It has been said that a trio in Balfe's opera has been copied from Rossini's "Zitti Zitti." No resemblance whatever by the musician can be found; but "Zitti Zitti" is, or ought to be, well known to have been shamefully pillered from the husbandman's song, in Haydn's Seasons—Mozart's "La ci darem" is similar to the duet of Adam and Eve in Haydn's Creation—his overture to Zauberflöte was written and varied on a subject of Clementi's, and hundreds of people now sing the canon of "Non nobis" in Handel's celebrated Hallelujah without knowing it. It is high time we should allow that—

"Garth wrote his own dispensary."

Bacon has said, "Imitation is an indication of genius;" and other lower philosophers contend that it is a proof of the want of it; but we will steer a middle course, and say—

"Truth may lie (if she ever do so) between."

A gleaner cannot be expected to get as much corn as a reaper—and the man who can cull flowers that his predecessors overlooked, or who can even pick up those which they have carelessly dropped from their garlands, and like Glycera of old made them into new shapes of beauty and grace, deserves th epraise of originality or something akin to it.

SCENE FROM BALFE'S OPERA OF "THE BOHEMIAN GIRL," AT DRURY LANE THEATRE.

ENGLAND AND FRANCE.

OR

THE SISTERS.

A ROMANCE OF REAL LIFE

BY HENRY COCKTON,

AUTHOR OF "VALENTINE VOX," "STANLEY THORN," ETC.

CHAPTER XXXV.

THE CONCLUSION.

[illegible] and another at Bath [illegible] was [illegible] to be attended [illegible] for [illegible] He [illegible] people by exclaiming "I'd [illegible] banker [illegible] and [illegible] with her in vain did she entreat—ay, even intreat him to remain six other week. Neither her prohibitions, nor her commands, nor her intreaties, had the slightest effect upon him then. He resolved to return, and did return, leaving her in possession of his house; and the fact of his having acted upon this resolution, in some degree opened his eyes.

He was then, however, too far gone to see clearly at a glance. He entertained doubts on the subject still. Even the resolution upon which he had acted might have been pre-ordained! Who could tell? He couldn't! Nevertheless, a few more instances of this kind very soon brought him to his senses.

Well, the honeymoon passed off joyously; and all, with the exception of Caroline, who could not be prevailed upon to leave, returned to town. Charles had ... to the with him and Laurece at his late uncle's residence, but ... for obvious reasons ... Fred and A ... provided, but ... about the desired ... Grandison Ward ... with him as he meant was then in ... of the house, with every prospect ... remaining ... Caroline's ... ceremony, ... the neighbouring poor in ... proceeds ... Caroline from Charles's ... reflection, and penitence, prompted her ... to ... ... which she was able to derive lasting consolation ... ...

PUNCH'S ALMANACK!

MR. PUNCH will have the pleasure of bringing before the Public, on the 30th inst., HIS ALMANACK FOR THE NEW YEAR, whereof the events of each Month will be graphically illustrated in PUNCH'S most approved fashion. The wit of the Joke—several hundreds are reared by the same hand—the exuberant, Shakspearian street-life, and the wonderful cheapness of PUNCH'S Almanack, (which will be published at the low price of one penny, plain, and twopence coloured,) will render it the most popular publication of the season. Punch's Almanack will be published at the Office, 195, Strand. Price 3d.; and Stamped, to go by Post, 4d.

A NEW WORK FOR THE YOUNG.

Just ready, price 3s. 6d., with beautiful illustrations, from designs by Gilbert,

HAPPY HOURS; or the Home Story Book. By MARY CHERWELL.—London: Bowdery and Kerby, 150, Oxford-street.

THE WARM WATER REMEDY.

Just published, price One Shilling,

A TREATISE ON THE WARM, VAPOUR, AND MEDICATED BATHS, designed for popular use. By HENRY WEEKES, M.R.C.S., &c. &c.—London: Edwards and Hughes, 12, Ave-Maria-lane, Barnstaple: W. Avery, Journal Office.

Just ready, in foolscap 8vo., price 5s. 6d.,

THE SABBATH COMPANION; being Essays on First Principles of Christian Faith and Practice. Designed especially for the use of Young People. By HAMLET DALLY, Minister of St. Peter, and Vicar of St. Bride's, London. Edinburgh: OLIVER & BOYD; and HAMILTON, ADAMS, & Co., London.

A BOOK FOR THE HOLIDAYS.

Now ready, 7s. cloth and gilt, with illustrated wrapper, or bound by W. & R. Scott, royal morocco 8s. 6d.,

NURSERY RHYMES OF ENGLAND, collected chiefly from oral tradition. Edited by J. O. HALLIWELL, Esq., F.S.A.

NOW COMPLETE, IN FOUR PARTS, 18mo. cloth, 4s.,

THE WRONGS OF WOMAN. By CHARLOTTE ELIZABETH. Part 1 Milliners and Dressmakers, 2s.—Part 2. The Forsaken Child, 2s. 6d.—Part 3: The Latter Day Heathers, 2s. 6d.—Part 4: The Lace Runners, 2s. 6d. W. H. DALTON, Chancery-lane, Coloured Coating cases.

Price Six Shillings,

SEARLE'S TREATISE on AFFECTIONS of the STOMACH and LIVER, showing the Indigestion and Impairment of the Constitution which originate in the Nervousness, Morbid Excitation of the Brain, Epilepsy, Paralysis, Apoplexy and Insanity, originate in an impaired state of the brain, and and an determined flow of blood to the head. 6 and 7 Princes, Bee hive court, Fleet-street.

THE MEDICAL WORLD will continue, during the Session, to be conducted by Mr. Guthrie, F.R.S., on the Eye, by Sir B. Brodie, on Surgery, by Ranpall, on Animal Physiology; a Medico. Letter from Dr. De Beauvoir, of Paris; the Index of the Medical Science, with 20 other valuable articles. Price 4d.; Stamped, 5d.—The Medical Almanack will be ready December 30, price 6d., stamped 8d. The Lancet, Medical Times (New Series) will commence Jan 6—4 A Caveman, Office, Essex street, Strand.

TO DEALERS IN PERIODICALS

Publishing, in Penny Weekly Numbers, and Monthly Parts at Fourpence,

THE BRITISH VOCAL MISCELLANY, by JOHN BARNETT.—No. V., now ready, contains among numerous other articles, the following: [illegible] Song—The Summer Moon—Farmer Ma-thew (Song with Coloured Engravings)—Roy my Dragon—The Ivy Green (Song)—Cupid's Garden (Song)—Sweet Lady Mine (Song with Sole and Double Bass Obligato Accompaniments)—The Gipsy Maid—A Lyttle Tr. enfield-street, Marylebone.

This day is published,

FINDEN'S ROYAL GALLERY OF BRITISH ART, Part V., containing Proofs before Letters of Engravings from Pictures by Sir D. Wilkie, R.A., and the late Sir Thomas Lawrence, P.R.A., executed by T. G. Mabch, J. Haconer-street, Hoxton. Proofs, 10s. 6d.; Prints, 5s. London: 20, Threadneedle-street, and R. Ackermann and Co., Strand.

NEW COLONIAL MAGAZINE.

On the 1st of January will be published, price 2s. 6d., to be continued monthly, No. I. of SIMMONDS'S COLONIAL MAGAZINE and FOREIGN MISCELLANY. A Journal of Literature, Art, Science, Commerce, and Finance. Edited by P. L. SIMMONDS, Esq., F.R.S.S., Hon. and Corr. Member of the Geographical and Statistical Societies of Paris, of the Literary and Historical Societies of Quebec and Barbadoes, &c. &c.

Parties desirous of receiving the First Number are requested to be addressed.

Bankers—Messrs. Coutts and Co., 59, Strand.

Publishing Office—No. 14, M. MAXWELL, ESQ.

WANDERINGS in the HIGHLANDS and ISLES of the NORTH, with Sketches taken on the Scotch Border; being a Sequel to "Wild Sports in the West." By the Author of "Rural Sports."

Orders for January Parts will be given.

MAXWELL'S IRISH REBELLION in 1798. Plates by George Cruikshank, and Splendid Portraits by Finn.—Part II.

London: A. H. Baily and Co., Cornhill.

BY THE LATE MRS. RADCLIFFE.

In a very large Volume, Octavo, closely printed and illustrated by upwards of 20 Woodcuts, price 16s. cloth,

RECREATIONS in SCIENCE and NATURAL PHILOSOPHY; or, the Ingenious Philosopher's Complete Guide to Recreation. The present New Edition of this celebrated Work is revised by EDWARD RIDDLE, Master of the Mathematical School, Royal Hospital, Greenwich, who has corrected it to the present time, and made numerous additions.

 A most useful Table Present for the Holidays.

London: Printed for Thomas Tegg, 73, Cheapside, and sold by all other Booksellers.

Just published, in 1 vol. 8vo., price 18s., with 24 Plates, and Woodcuts in the Text,

A CRITICAL COMMENTARY and PARAPHRASE on the OLD and NEW TESTAMENTS and the APOCRYPHA. By PATRICK LOWTH, ARNALD, WHITBY, and LOWMAN. With the Text at large, forming Four Volumes, Imperial Octavo. Prospectuses may be had gratis of every respectable Book seller in the kingdom.

London: Printed for Thomas Tegg, Cheapside, and may be procured by order of every Dealer in Books in the United Kingdom.

 Wanted active Canvassing Agents for this Work.

ANNUALS FOR CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

Just published, handsomely bound, gilt edges, suitable for the drawing-room table, each volume illustrated with 500 engravings by eminent artists,

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, Volume I., price 18s., and Volume II., price 18s., Illustrating and describing the Historical and Passing Events of the present day, and forming the most attractive and instructive reading for the Family Circle. Each of these volumes has cost the proprietors, in Illustrations alone, upwards of £5,000, independent of a very heavy expenditure for Literary assistance, and is by no means to be put on a par with the numerous works of an ephemeral nature published by certain artists and British enterprise. Each volume is complete in itself, and may be purchased separately. Vol. III., price 18s., will be completed in January, 1844.—To persons desirous of presenting their young friends with a Christmas Gift, these volumes are strongly recommended as far superior, in every respect, to the ephemeral works published under the name of Annuals.

Published by W. Lloyd, 135, Strand, and Whittaker and Co., London.—Sold by all Booksellers and Newsvenders.

THE FARMER'S MAGAZINE, for December, price 1s. 6d., contains:—Part I. Agriculture. Reported by Mr Hudson, of the Duke of Bedford's Home Farm—Agricultural Chemistry—Sea-weed, and Salt and Soot, as Manures, By Cuthbert W. Johnson, Esq., F.R.S.—Great Oakley Farmers' Club—Gloucester Farmers' Club—Stamford Agricultural Farmers' Club—Isle of Sheppy Agricultural Association Guano. By "An Eye witness to the Effects of Guano" Richmond Agricultural Association—Chelmsford Farmers' Club—Ipswich Farmers' Club—Tenantry of Ketteen. Stowupney Agricultural Society—Warefield Farmers' Club—Farmers' Meeting at Mr Towers. Flowering the leaves of the Hooded Arum—Farmers' Meeting at Mr Lewis's—Farmers' Meeting at Mr Hobbs's—Farmers' Meeting at Mr Hobbs's—Farmers' Meeting at Mr Hobbs

A CHRISTMAS "AT HOME."

THE YULE-BLOCK.*

A CHRISTMAS CAROL.

"A cross-grain'd block of elm we'll take
And by his light hold merry wake!"—OLD BALLAD.

When holly leaves and ivy green,
With berries bright and dark between,
Around the cottage room are seen,
The simple place adorning—
What joy before the cheerful blaze,
The almost conscious fire displays,
To sit in Christmas' merry days
Ay! sit up till the morning!

And hear the early carillon
Of village bells—while old and young
Are mingled in that festal throng,
Through Life we aye remember!
To feel the heat of Summer's glow,
In frosty depth of Winter's snow
And think we're Maying it, although
'Tis flowerless December!

To join the hearty laugh around,
When some coy damsel's feet are found
To thoughtless tread the fairy-ground
The Mistletoe that's under;
And see some longing lover steal
A kiss from cheeks that ill conceal
The secret joy they inward feel,
'Neath frowns and blushing wonder!

What face with summer's sun embrown'd
Was ever half so joyous found
As those in ruddy gladness 'round
The YULE-BLOCK's† cheerful gleaming!
Romance may seek wild solitudes,
By waterfalls in lonely woods—
But Mirth and Love, with happier moods,
O'er Christmas hearth are beaming!

W.

* Yule, from the Saxon yeol or yehul, the Christmas time.

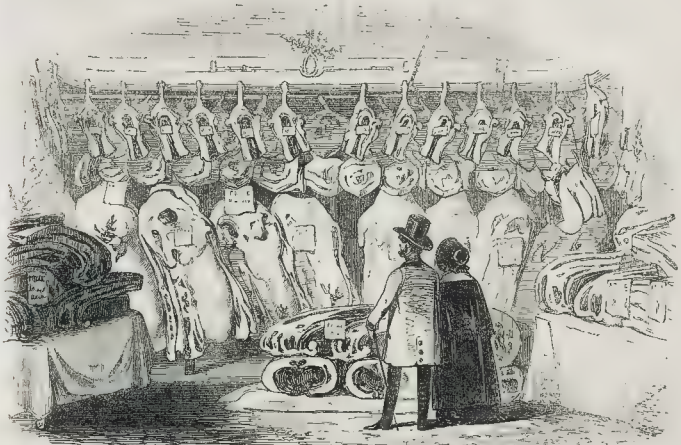
† In many parts of the country it was a practice to preserve a portion of the yule block to the next year in order to light the new Christmas log.



BUTCHER'S SHOP—PRIZE MEAT AT CHRISTMAS.

How can the politician pass this shop,
Where the thick fat doth so much lean anoint,
And grumble at the times: he ought to stop!
How dares he say "the times are out of joint?"

Can't he be satisfied—its meet he should;
Butchers have traits of good like other men.
Why would he cut them, pray—or if he would—
Why not as follows—"Cut and come again."

Has mutton ever done him any harm,
That he casts on it such a sheepish eye?
Has beef e'er done him any legal wrong,
And does he wish to sue it, by the bye?

No! grumbler cease—be happy; Christmas fare;
It's most unfair to quarrel with, and so,
If, without more palaver—I declare.
Yo do not go, sir—then you are "no go."

THE "MUSIC IN THE HALL."

(A fire upon the wide hearth-stone: an oaken table, with a goodly company: closed doors; the mistletoe aloft, upon a mighty beam garlands of evergreens abundant; the "Minstrels" in the tapestried gallery; quaint figures of "Mummers" drolly attired, peep from behind the half-drawn curtains dependent before the recess o the deep bay window.)

Silence!
Silence! my boys! not a sound!
Whilst the flagon of liquor moves steadily round,
Tilting so gay, let the "Minstrels" play
In "welcome and joy" to the holy day!

THE "MINSTRELS."

A thousand voices welcome thee from every English home,
And the high-sounding harp is tuned to songs of ancient glee;
The merry bells, with cheerful round, from every moonlit dome,
Surge forth a pleasant music, like a chorus on the sea.
Listen! listen!
Remember the strain—
"Home again! home again!"
"Home! home!"
"Again!"
The breathing of angels, who wander through space,
To summon all hearts to a gathering place.
A gift to the poor,
A song at the door,
Thus hand in hand, and side by side,
We welcome holy Christmas Tide!

"MASTER OF CEREMONIES."

A revel! a revel! a rout! a rout!
"A wassail!" before the year goes out!
Honour the bowl! well wreathed around
With the green life, that doth abound
In dismal forests, when the trees
Shiver before the northern breeze;
And Greybeard Winter, frozen sire,
Cuddles the woodman by the fire,
Gather "the poor" th' accustom'd dole!
Then for a song, and the "Wassail-Bowl!"

(The "dole" being collected, is distributed at the aperture in the hall-doors; the "Poor" hurrah without.)

"MINSTRELS."

Old years have been—New years have been—and fleeted fast away,
Since first brave "Father Christmas" came, and caroll'd at the door;
He always found a cheerful cup, and a jesting word to say,
And a thousand fervent wishes—he deserves a thousand more.
The student in the chamber, the herdsman poor and lowly,
The hermit in the wilderness, the baron proud and high,
Are mindful of the "swaddling" Babe—the "Virgin, pure and holy,"
And the "Shepherds" listening to the "Hymns of Angels" in the sky!
"Old Christmas," he loves innocence—he loves brown vulgar faces
Good wine—good company—good sport—he is a wondrous soul!
He loves to see old comrades round, in their accustomed places,
And kindred kindly meeting:—He deserves the Wassail-Bowl
So follow the rule—
Sing Yule! yule! yule!
And bring the Wassail-bowl!

OLD CHRISTMAS, BY CROWQUILL.

(A general shouting of "Yule, Yule, Yule!" and enter the Wassail-Bowl, wreathed with ivy and artificial flowers, the matronage draping, the cymbals clashing, and the "kitchen boys" "cock-a-hooping" vociferously, and with deafening energy).

Silence!
Silence! my boys! not a sound!
As the wassail-bowl goes round and round;
Only so gay, let "the Minstrels" play,
In welcome and joy, to the holy day!

"THE MINSTRELS."

God rest, rest ye! merry gentlemen! and send you hearty cheer!
Whilst "Father Christmas" trims a bowl to rouse the drooping year;
Be merry and wise, when sports arise—the old year seasons away,
Full soon to lie in lullaby! where the Autumn leaves decay.
May Gladness, Unity, and Love, descend upon us all;
And when green boughs adorn the house, and glisten from the wall,
Read well the emblematic leaves—"Since human life hath been,
Virtue survives cold wintery age," and "truth is evergreen."
The nut brown bowl for the jolly old soul—the mistletoe for maids;
Dance and song for the youthful throng, and jests for jocund blades.
"The moon shines bright, and the stars give a light"—we hear the midnight bell!
Remember the poor, who sing at your door, and fee the minstrels well!

"MASTER OF CEREMONIES."

Thanks, my good minstrels, for your strain!
So now (drinking) befal
Merry Christmas to all!
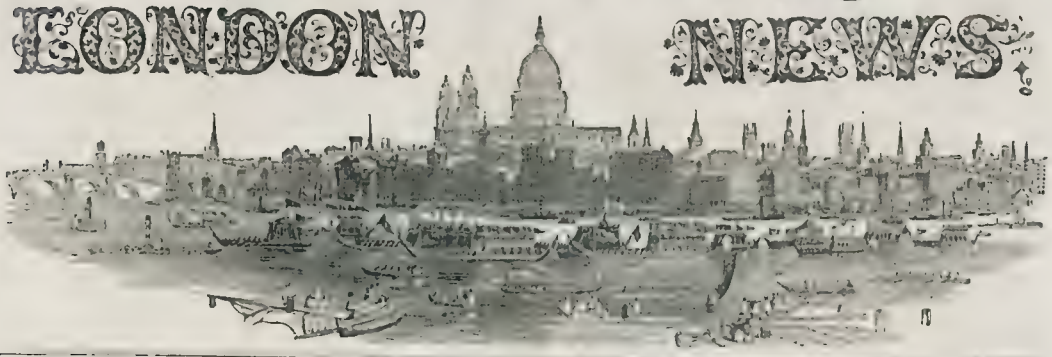
The same when the season comes again.

(Exit Wassail-Bowl—Exeunt "Minstrels"—Tankards of spiced ale are laid upon the sideboards, and the "Mummers," with a shout, rush from concealment, dressed as the "Months of the Year." They bear torches in the left hand, and the usual cudgel, or "Play-stick," in the right. They dance a "Morrice" (double six.) The Master of Ceremonies, and the company seated around the yule log, attend the successive pastimes. The ladies occupy the gallery vacated by the minstrels, which is now brilliantly illuminated.

London: Printed and published by WILLIAM LITTLE, at 198, Strand, where all communications for the Editor are requested to be addressed.—SATURDAY DECEMBER 23, 1843.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.



No. 87.—Vol. III.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1843. [Sixpence.

OFFICE, 198, STRAND.

THE OLD YEAR AND THE NEW.

A few more hours and the old year will have departed—Time will have sped another arrow from his quiver, and dropt another feather from his wing. His glass will be full of new sand and his scythe busy over fresh reaping, and life and death will bear him company as gallantly, or as grimly, as they have done through ages gone. But as the world, with sure progress, thus wends its way towards eternity, its living crowds can neither afford to neglect the future nor to forget the past; and nations—like the heathen Janus—must have two faces—looking back upon what is buried—forward upon what is to spring forth.

In discussing for our land—the far-spread Empire of Queen Victoria—the chances of adversity or prosperity for the year that is before us, it is pleasant enough to be able fairly to anticipate a brighter phase and a more hilarious countenance than has been worn by the "gentleman defunct," of whose contributions towards the general peace of the world, and the welfare of this country in particular, we cannot speak, politically, in terms of very wild or enthusiastic eulogium. The old year saw Spain mystified amid a confusion of revolutions—her best minister and most honest patriot deposed, and the usual tide of blood and treachery desolating her domestic life—leaving her heart barren of every virtue and tenanted by passion and by crime. The new year speaks better promise. It places no great faith, perhaps, in the self-direction of a kingdom of feuds, under the sway of a mere child, and still within the grasp of the rudeness of military despotism; but it points to the moderated ambition of France, and the careful solicitude of England—and regarding, on the one hand, the judicious appointment of Mr. Bulwer to mind our own diplomacy, and on the other, the emphatic paragraph in the speech of Louis Philippe on the opening of the French Chamber,—pre-supposes that the two great powers of Europe have half agreed to throw the shield of their protection over the opening reign of the young Queen, and to direct their influences to the restoration of peace and civilization in her distracted realms May the bad daring and unfaithful purpose of conflicting parties in Spain fail to mar the happiness of such a consummation.

Greece is another disturbed country, to which the new year promises to open a new tranquillity. The old one saw her through a category of internal miseries—her people smarting under tyranny—her King under humiliation—until the balance of power was in some measure restored by a battle without slaughter, and a victory without blood. The result of that victory is the promise which lies in the bosom of the year to come.

France and England will form the great arena of political operations for 1844. The old year did something bad and something good for both countries: but for Great Britain the future seems more pregnant than for the land of the Gaul. France had, all through 1843, her old parties at work, and her old grievances to complain of. She was at her Spanish diplomacy, which was defeated, and broke down: she had her Algeria conquests for glory or disaster—her fortification question—her bugbear of a commercial treaty—and her tenacity over the mock-palace of Bourbon-redivivus in our British Belgrave-square;—as though Berenger had been a prophet, when, in his song of the "Muzzled Lion," he said, speaking of Henry of France—

> May be—long e er the flight of twenty years,
> On to her frontiers proudly march away,
> Leading a lion that no muzzle wears.

France has all these topics for forty-four, as she had for forty-three. But Louis Philippe is her real lion after all, and the Ministry of Guizot has endurance far beyond what some clever people imagine. Let us add too,—that the speech of the King confirms the happy relations between France and Great Britain, and the personal friendship publicly expressed by his Majesty towards our gracious Sovereign, while it gives pleasing earnest of the bland and winning effect of Victoria's visit to Chateau d'Eu, opens to us the prospect of returning those glorious hospitalities, for the benefit of trade at home, and of maintaining that international amity by which all trade flourishes.

From the new year Great Britain hopes every thing—for the old one she can have no regrets—unless, indeed, for the events which it brought with it.

Ireland was the victim of a monster agitation—a fearful gathering of wrongs was heaped upon the spirit of the people by their leader, who accumulated them from every nook and crevice of misleglislation—and adding every species of wicked fuel to the dreadful pile—it was fired—aye fired—in the very hearts of the sufferers, and he who set it blazing had to come in and quench the flames. There were two parties wrong: the succession of Governments which had forgotten to look into the real nature of Irish grievances, and to legislate for them;—(so that the grievances remained)—and next, and worse, the man who brought them together with such an appalling presence, and added to their confusion so many imaginary crimes. That man was Daniel O'Connell; and while Government is seeking to read him a lesson of rebuke, some hope for Ireland appears to glimmer in the practical measure of appointing a Commission to enquire into the relations of landlord and tenant in that disturbed country, and in the promise held out by legislators that the meeting of Parliament shall bring with it fruits of conciliation for the land of the shamrock and the harp. Fervently shall we bless the year forty-four should it be found to bless Ireland with even a comparative tranquillity, although we heartily pray for her a profound peace.

[COUNTRY EDITION.]

REFUGE FOR THE DESTITUTE—WARD FOR FEMALES.

For Wales the old year only imported a "Rebecca among the turnpikes," and a "Miss Cromwell among the workhouses;" but these "wolves in petticoats" required soldiers to hunt them down—and enquiry has proved that they did not "howl for want of wrong." As in Ireland, there were some imaginary grievances, but the foul tyranny of the turnpike extortion—the system of high rents and low wages, and the fearful oppression of the new Poor-laws became prominent as evils, to be remedied—we ardently desire—in the Parliamentary Session of 1844.

In Scotland may the old year so far settle the non-intrusion question that it may not intrude far into the new one, but rather that, spiritually, the land of the thistle may be left at peace, to pursue avocations of industry and perseverance without disturbance of social harmonies leading to general bitterness and to domestic regrets.

To our colonies the old year carried its share of fluctuating adventure—bearing battle or fire, treachery or victory, disease or prosperity, riches or death. We have some sort of glory in the East, but it is not unalloyed, for it is not all recognizant with the purer principles of Christianity. Let us hope that while we preserve our honour and dignity, the prowess of our arms, and the courage of our troops, the year forty-four may substitute health for vengeance, bringing with it no new conquests, and reviving no old wars.

Lastly, we have to speak of merry old England herself—the fair home and bosom of the rose—land of bravery and beauty—with all history for her escutcheon, and all nations for her friends. We will not say what the old year has done for England—little enough, we know. She had a lazy, litigating Parliament, with very little business in its proceedings, whatever it might boast of brains. But we will say what we hope for 1844.

May it continue the happiness of the Queen, and of all around her—and may her Majesty follow out heartily that kind communion with her people, which has prompted visits of pride and condescension to the halls of her Aristocracy, and stirred the enthusiasm of loyalty in every bosom in the land! God bless her!

May it bring strength, toleration, and holy influences to the Church—increasing the respect and love (if that be possible) of the people for their clergy, and only promoting the power of that clergy through the goodness of their acts!

May it cause to grow stronger the interchange of confidence between rich and poor—may it extend the cause of charity and national provision for the needy and destitute—may it see the annihilation of the principles which constitute the New Poor-laws, and set up humane legislation in their stead!

May Parliament accomplish in it the establishment of a system of general Education in a truly national spirit!

May every party be weakened, and every prosperity increased in it. May morality advance, profligacy diminish, and integrity thrive. May it witness the improvement of magisterial and criminal law—the protection of the liberty of subjects only under accusation—the total extinction of factory and coal-mine slavery—and the abolition of imprisonment for debt!

Last, not least, may it be the last year of the Income Tax!

Let the good new year give us but these results, and we promise that when it draws towards its final destiny, its events shall be illuminated in glory in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS—and that all England shall confess them to be typical of a truly happy year!

THE REFUGE FOR THE DESTITUTE.

In our leading columns will be found some remarks upon the present frightful extent of destitution in the metropolis, in alleviation of which the establishment above named is now in full operation.

The Refuge for the Destitute and Houseless Poor is situate in Playhouse-yard, Whitecross-street. It consists of three rooms, lighted with gas, and 110 feet in length, besides other smaller rooms. Its object is to provide the poor with "a night's lodging," £50 of whom have been so accommodated in one night. The men and women sleep in separate rooms, or wards, and the children with the latter. Each person, on entering the Refuge for the night, is required to wash him or herself, for which purpose, soap, towels, and warm water are provided. The accommodation for sleeping is clean straw placed upon the floor, and such is the attention paid to cleanliness, that the cost of the straw has reached £18 in one week. The parties retire to rest with their clothes on; previously to which, and in the morning, half a pound of bread is given to each person: cheese is added on Sundays, when they may remain in the Refuge the whole day. A clergyman attends twice a-day, and a medical man nightly. The place is well ventilated; and the sewerage and supply of water excellent; and fires are kept up during the night. Such is the necessity of an establishment of this kind in the metropolis—where extremes of wealth and want are truly appalling—that within twelve months there have been nine thousand applicants at "the Refuge;" and this is not the only institution of its kind in London. It is supported by the contributions of the affluent, and well merits the patronage of all "who enjoy the luxury of doing good."

On Christmas-day last, the poor inmates of the Refuge, in addition to the customary allowance of bread and cheese, were supplied, by order of the gentlemen forming the committee of management, with a bountiful supply of plumcake. The Messrs. Whitbread and Co., the extensive brewers, Chiswell-street, also forwarded a hogshead of beer. At one o'clock, each individual was provided with a pound of cake, bread, and beer, and the gentlemen of Mr. William Edwards, chairman of the institution. The number in the asylum of men, women, and children, was 501. In the evening, the women and children, of whom there were nearly 100, received a supply of cake and coffee. The chairman also gave directions that any stranger who might call should partake of the cake and beer. There have been admitted into the central asylum, Playhouse-yard, since it was opened, 3713 applicants. The institution have another asylum in Glasshouse-yard, St. George's-in-the-East, where cake and coffee were given. At the two asylums, near 4000 individuals have obtained shelter, and during the period that they have been opened, almost 30,000 have been provided with nightly lodgings.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, DECEMBER 27.

SPAIN.

Our latest accounts from Spain are to the 19th. Little or nothing of importance has occurred since my last. On the 17th the motion for a message to the Queen, relative to the affair of Olozaga, was carried by a majority of 101 to 46. The friends of M. Olozaga asserted in the Chamber that he could not have offended the Queen in his interview with her on the evening of the 28th ult., for, on leaving her, her Majesty made him some lobling presents for his daughter. General Serrano, on the same occasion, declared that the Queen, after having given to him the account of the interview, denied the giving of the presents. On the 18th there was no sitting of the Deputies. It was reported that General Serrano was expected to come an opponent of the Government, unless means could be found to provide him in the Cabinet. The message was to be presented to the Queen on the 20th; and it was thought that her Majesty, after thanking the Deputies for their loyal kindness, would express a wish that all further agitation of the question, as regarded M. Olozaga, should be prevented. By this course he would be left under the imputation of guilt, and his escape from punishment be ascribed to the magnanimity of the Queen. M. Olozaga did not attend the Chamber, and it was generally believed that he had either escaped to France or Portugal.

M. Martinez de la Rosa is definitively appointed Ambassador to Louis Philippe. Aguilera, brother of the Marquis de Caravlaca, is nominated his first secretary, and replaces M. Hernandez as Chargé d'Affaires, till the arrival of the Ambassador.

The whole of the personnel is changed, with the exception of M. Ones, the son of the President of the Senate.

The situation of Figueras had not changed on the 19th. On the 15th General Prim boldly entered on his duties as political Chief of Barcelona. A serenade was given him in the evening, and a great crowd was collected before his hotel, crying out "Long live the Queen."

Letters from Malaga says that M. Du Bouzet, the French Consul, having been informed that a pirate of Greek build was marauding in those seas, hastened to adopt every measure for preventing it committing injury. The news was conveyed to Captain Roque Maurel, by the man-of-war Cassard, which, at the request of the Consul, went out immediately in chase of the pirate, and thus quieted the apprehensions of the captains of several trading vessels on the point of sailing.

GERMANY

A letter from Munich, dated the 19th, says that the mission of Prince Oettingen Wallerstein has terminated in complete success. The Cabinets of London and Paris have granted the Greek Government a delay of five years for the payment of the arrears due. It was not positively known whether the RUSSIAN Government would consent to this arrangement.

Letters from Aix la Chapelle confirm the report that Prince Gustavus, son of the late King of Sweden, had applied for a divorce from his wife, Princess Stephanie of Baden, after fifteen years' marriage.

The last accounts from Stuttgard, dated the 15th, state that the Governor had ordered that from January 1st every offence liable to more than six months' imprisonment is to be tried publicly in the presence of the person accused, and with oral pleading.

The Grand Council of the Canton of Geneva has adopted, by a great majority, the system of trial by jury for every kind of offence.

M. de Haber, the surviving principal in the late duel, has left Frankfort for France.

FRANCE.

OPENING OF THE FRENCH CHAMBERS.—THE KING'S SPEECH.

The Legislative Session was opened this day by the King in person. His Majesty left the Tuileries at 10 o'clock precisely, preceded by the Queen and several members of the illustrious house of Orleans, the whole composing a cortége of twelve carriages. The Princes at present in Paris—the Duke de Nemours, Montpensier, and the Prince de Joinville—accompanied their royal father. The infant Count de Paris and his amiable and interesting mother, and the Princess Clementine of Coburg, were seated by the Queen in the place reserved for them. The King appeared in excellent health, and read the following speech with a firm, collected, and confiding voice:—

"GENTLEMEN PEERS AND DEPUTIES,

"The perfect harmony between the Powers of the State, and the loyal support which you have afforded to my government, have yielded their fruit. Amidst the order maintained without effort and under the sway of the law, France displays with confidence her fertile activity. The situation of all classes of citizens is improving and advancing. The effects of this prosperity will enable us to restore between the expenditure and the revenue of the State, in the law of finance which will be shortly presented to you, a justly desired equalization.

"We can enjoy with security these blessings of peace, for it never was better secured. My relations with all Powers are pacific and friendly.

"Serious events have occurred in Spain and in Greece. Queen Isabella II., called so young to the cares of state, is at this moment the object of all my solicitude and of my most affectionate interest. I trust that the issue of these events will be most favourable to two nations well disposed towards France, and that in Greece as well as in Spain monarchy will strengthen itself by the mutual respect of the rights of the Throne and of public liberty. The sincere friendship which unites me to the Queen of Great Britain, and the cordial understanding existing between my Government and hers, confirm me in that confidence.

"I have concluded with the King of Sardinia and the republic of the Equator and Venezuela treaties of commerce, and I am negotiating with other States in several parts of the world treaties which, while protecting our national industry and manufactures in the security to which they are entitled, will open a new career to their intelligent activity.

"I have had the satisfaction of seeing the circle of my family enlarged by the marriage of my son, the Prince of Joinville, with the Princess Francisca, the sister of the Emperor of Brazil and the Queen of Portugal. This union, by insuring the happiness of my son, adds a consolation more to those which God has reserved to me.

"Our dominion in Algeria will soon be universal and tranquil under the command of experienced leaders, amongst whom I am proud to reckon one of my sons. Our brave soldiers combine with admirable constancy the fatigues of war with the labour of peace.

"The necessary measures for the execution of the general system of railroads, and for various enterprises of national utility, shall be submitted to your deliberation. A full reliance to secondary legislation will satisfy the wish of the charter for the freedom of instruction by maintaining the authority and action of the state over public education.

"I behold, gentlemen, with profound gratitude to Providence, the honourable position as well as the increasing prosperity which our country enjoys. Always guided by our devotedness and our fidelity to France, I and my family have never had any other ambition than that of serving her well. It is the certainty of accomplishing that duty which has given me strength during the trials of my life, and which will to the end be my consolation and firm support."

The Prince de Joinville then took the oath in favour of France.

On his Majesty's departure from the Tuileries the guns of the Invalids fired a salute, which was repeated when he left the Chamber. The number of people collected at various points was large, and the most respectful order was maintained. The demonstrations of feeling which were evinced must have been gratifying in the highest degree to his Majesty, who received them with his usual affectionate salute. The Council of Ministers followed the King and followed the royal cortége, supported by the troops of the line. All passed off peacefully and joyously, which augurs well for the future prosperity of France.

Louis Philippe has sent £50 to the French Society of Bienfaisance in London.

The Legitimists are acting very inconsiderately. I am most credibly informed that their indiscreet agents are actively at work on the Rhone and Saone, and that in some villages placards have been posted at the doors, bearing the following intreat:—"Henri the V. or Death."

Liszt, after stopping a few days, incognito, in Paris, has returned to Wiemar, to enter on his functions as Maestro de Chapelle to the Grand Duke.

A suit, in which Madame Catalani is plaintiff and M. Gerard de Maley, defendant, came before the Tribunal of the Seine on Saturday last. The plaintiff was separated from her husband in June, 1832. The application called on the court to order a division of the property which had hitherto existed in common between her and M. de Meley, no marriage settlement having been originally drawn up to fix the manner in which the property of either party was to be disposed of. Madame de Catalani made the demands, M. de Meley brought forward, as a subsidiary action for an authorisation from the court to resume possession of the chateau of Vaucresson, which she purchased previously to her marriage from General Count Gerard. In opposition to these demands, M. de Meley brought forward Art. 1469 of the civil code, which declares that every wife separated from her husband, who has not within five months after the separation made her right to the common property available, and brought forward her claims for a decision, must be considered as having given up her rights altogether. The court considered the objection to be fatal to the application, and non-suited the plaintiff with all costs.

Madame Catalani died at Rome on the 19th, at her villa near Sinigaglia, in the Roman States, after a short illness, aged 59 years. She made her first appearance before the public at Venice, when only fifteen years old, and retired into private life in 1831. She married M. de Valabrègue, a Frenchman, who died in 1839, and by whom she had three children. Madame Catalani is said to have left a fortune of upwards of £300,000.

The following letter appeared for the first time in print a few days since.—

"Du Camp de Boulogne, le 2 Thermidor.

"Madame et chère femme, depuis quatre jour je suis loin de vous, j'ai toujours été à cheval et en voiture, aussi suis-je bien fatigué; mais me voilà en route pour Paris.

"M. Maret m'a instruit du projet on vous etiez de partir lundi. En voyageant à petites journées, vous aurez le temps d'arriver aux eaux sans vous fatiguer.

"Le vent a changé, et nous pouvons tenter une descente; mais, qui pourrait on rade, à chassé et a été engagée sur des rochers au milieu de Boulogne. J'ai tout cru perdu, corps et bien: nous sommes parvenus a tout sauver. Ce specifiale était grand: des coups de canon tiré, le signal de détresse a été donné, mais en vain. Le mât de misaisaité, toute la nuit dans l'anxiété de sauver ou de voir perir ces malheureux; l'ancre était entre l'étreinté, l'ocean et la nuit. A cinq heures du matin, tout a été calme, tout a été sauvé, et je me suis couché avec la certitude d'un rêve romanesque.

"NAPOLEON."

We have nothing fresh either at the Italian or the Grand Opera. A three act opera, the libretto by Scribe, and the music by Auber, called "Les Syrènes," is in rehearsal at the Opera Comique.

Donizetti left us, on Wednesday last, for Vienna; Meyerbeer has also quitted Paris. The director of the Grand Opera, Monsieur Pelet, has gone on a recreating expedition to Italy. Our grand balls at the different operas commence on the 6th of January, under the direction of the Musards, father and son. Lablache, and part of his family, have returned to France.

The 19th, Masuto Pacini brought out, at the Theatre "Nuovo," his opera-buffa "Luisella." It was received with the greatest enthusiasm. An opera by Sarmento completely failed at San Carlo. The son of Lablache makes his début at the Theatre Nuovo, in the "Puritani."

Fanny Elssler débuted at Vienna, on the 6th, with the greatest success.

BELGIUM.

BRUSSELS, Dec. 23.—The Chamber of Representatives, in its sitting to-day after the presentation of several petitions, proceeded to the debate on the project of law for granting to the Government an extraordinary vote of credit for 2,902,524f., which was agreed to unanimously by the 59 members present, without any debate.

The Chamber then continued the debate on the project of law relative to the excise duty on salt. Several amendments were proposed and adopted, and the law passed by a majority of 75 to 6. The principal of these amendments is one by which salt used in the manufacture of sulphate of soda is exempt from excise duty.

The Chamber then resumed the debate on the budget of the department of justice. The general debate was closed, and the discussion of the articles adjourned till the 9th of January.

The Chamber resolved that the vacation should be till the 9th of January, and appointed the members of a deputation to compliment the King and Queen on New Year's Day.

Count de Baillet, treasurer of the Bank at Antwerp, died suddenly in that city on the 22nd inst.

Letters from London say that the ex-Regent Espartero is preparing to leave that city, and, in fact, one of his aides de-camp has arrived at Brussels, and is negociating with the proprietor of one of our hotels.

AMERICA.

The packet-ship Independence, Captain Nye, which sailed from New York on the 6th inst., arrived at Liverpool at noon on Wednesday, after a fine passage of 18½ days.

The British and North American Royal mail steam-ship Acadia, Captain Hyde, arrived out at Boston on the 6th, and would leave again for Liverpool on the 16th inst.

We have received by the Independence the Message of the President of the United States, which was delivered on the 5th instant, the question of the right of the members for New Hampshire, Missouri, Georgia, and Mississippi, to seats in the House, they having been elected by general ticket, contrary to the act of Congress passed last session, having been waved for the time being, with the understanding, however, that it would be brought up on some future occasion. The Seminole war has been waged against Texas, and endeavours to show that it may be necessary for the United States to end the war in some effectual manner. The Treasury receipts for the fiscal year ending July 1, are stated at 18,000,000 dollars; the expenditure, exclusive of public debt, at 23,000,000 dollars. There are not-standing Treasury notes to the amount of 4,000,000 do lars. The loan of 1841, of over 5,500,000 dollars, falls due Jan. 1, 1845, and, unless the resources be increased, a deficiency is apprehended at the close of 1845 of above 4,000 000 dollars. The Message states that the financial and business condition of the country has greatly improved.

The public lands the President regards as the fountain of the public credit; and, by preserving the credit of the General Government untarnished, he thinks that of the States will be best supported. In regard to the tariff, the Message intimates, that in a subject so intimately connected with all the great interests of the country permanency and stability of legislation are much to be desired. Mr. Tyler repeals his recommendation to issue Treasury notes, of denominations not less than 5 dollars and not more than 100 dollars, to be employed in paying the obligations of Government, in lieu of gold and silver, at the option of the public creditor, to an amount not exceeding 15,000,000 dollars. The war expenses had been reduced, and the navy is commended to attention, and Congress advised to reimburse the losses sustained by the officers and crew of the steam ship Missouri. The Message then concludes by expressing a desire "to leave the country prosperous, and its institutions unimpaired."

The choice of Speaker fell upon Mr. J. W. Jones Denn, of Virginia.

The Boston Daily Advertiser's correspondent at the Rockaway Resort states that Governor Sir Charles Metcalfe, upon the occurrence of a contingency which his instructions did not contemplate, assumed the responsibility of dismissing his Ministers, and, from some letters which he has received, he has every reason to believe that his conduct is approved of," he adds, "his resignation will not be accepted. But, if the Home Government disapprove of his course, another Governor will be sent out, and Lafontaine will again be called upon to form a responsible system of Government on a temporary suspended, and the removal of the seat of Government is settled in favour of Kingston, if the conduct of the Governor is approved of by the Home Government.

CANADA.

It appears by the British Whig of the 20th ult., that Sir Charles Metcalfe has appointed the Hon. John Beverley Robinson to be Deputy-Governor of the provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, the Hon. James Buchanan Macaulay and the Hon. Jonas Jones to be members of her Majesty's Executive Council for the province of Canada.

SYDNEY.

Sydney papers to the 15th of August were received on Wednesday at the Jerusalem Coffee house. The news was not of the least interest. The markets continued flat. The Julia, arrived from Tahiti, left on the 28th of May, where her Majesty's ship Vindictive and a French ship of war, the Bucsoole, were in port. The French Admiral had not then arrived, but was daily expected. On the 24th of May (which being the birthday was celebrated with due honour, Commodore Nicolas entertaining a large party on board the Vindictive, consisting of Queen Pomare, her suite, the French Commander, his officers, the English and American Consuls, and the leading residents. It is stated that Queen Pomare still looks with confidence for protection from England, and has urgently requested Commodore Nicolas not to leave the port, lest she should suffer from French aggression.

THE MEMNON.—A letter from Aden of the 29th ult mentions that the Memnon "has gone to pieces, with the exception of the larboard paddle-wheel with the boat on the top of it. Some of the machinery and the boilers are visible above the water. The starboard side is broken up into four or five large pieces and floated on shore, while the larboard, or shore side, has come away entire from stern to stem, just above the bilge, and lies its whole length. The spot of the wreck is about 2 miles to the westward of a very remarkable 350 yards broad shoal three miles south-east of Ras Assafr. It was remarkably fortunate that the ship struck at this exact spot, otherwise I fear not a life could have been saved, for even at the distance of 300 yards, either north or south from where the wreck now is, the rocks, which are so sharp that it is difficult to walk upon them, rise abruptly from the sea about eight feet high, and being hollow underneath to the depth of 10, and in some places 15 feet, any person dashed up in the surf must inevitably have perished. The ground above the shore was literally one field of letters and papers, the boxes having been opened by the natives in expectation of finding valuables. We recovered about 3000 letters, but many of them damaged. Bills of exchange were in the market to any amount, it being a common occurrence to pick up £5000 under a bush, or to see a bag speeding steadily before the wind."

THE INTERMEDIATE INDIA MAIL.

MALTA, Dec 16.

By the Egyptus, which arrived this morning from Alexandria, we received the Friend of India of the 9th of November, from which we extract the following important news:—

"WEDNESDAY, Nov. 8.—The intelligence given in the papers of this morning is unfavourable to the hopes of Dost Mahomed. His influence has been seized by troops without bloodshed, and his reign at an end. It is supposed that this event will render the advance of an army unnecessary. The Star says that Lord Auckland's policy has already received the sanction of Runjeet Singh. Dost Mahomed has been shot dead at Cabul by order of the Prince of Belfeera, the Khan of Bokhara. It is said that the Khan sent several papers with his own seal to Cabul, in which he stated that whoever killed Dost Mahomed would go to heaven. This event will probably lead to a suspension of any effort on the part of the Afghans to occupy Peshawur; but this upshot will probably be that Cabul itself will fall a prey to Bokhara, an event which does not promise well with the state of affairs in that region have contemplated as not improbable. The accounts from Sukker are more distressing than ever. It appears that of the troops there 1371 are in hospital, and only 153 well. Every officer but one in each corps is inefficient from illness."

From Loodiana there has been received news of the probable existence of Col. Stoddart, but Captain Conolly, it is feared, has been executed.

GWALIOR.—The whole Lushkur since the 20th has been in a state of riot, the Maharaja having again revolted, and the troops of the Grand Junee having joined. It is tranquil in the Upper and Lower Soinde. A few depredations are committed by the Beloochies.

Disturbances continue in Scheksawale, and are likely to prove very serious, Ram Singh having been expelled from his appointment (the Khamdar, on behalf of the minor Sovereign of Khetree), and his place occupied by Dhabye, supported by a very large assemblage of insurgents.

The report of Heer Singh's murder is positively contradicted. He is conducting affairs at Lahore conjointly with Leena Singh.

The Marwar succession has been settled in favour of Ahmednuggur, Tukhi Sihji, the nearest unanimously elected King of Marwar, and his son accompanies him as Prince Royal.

MR. JAMES THOMASON has been appointed Lieutenant-Governor of the North West Provinces.

Lord Ellenborough has resolved on re-visiting the North Western Provinces.

(From the Friend of India.)

GWALIOR AND PUNJAUB.—The public journals are filled with notices of the march of regiments, European and native, to the banks of the Jumna and Sutlej, to watch the progress of events in the territories of Soindia, and in the Punjaub. It appears to be a matter of very serious importance whether either army will be called into action, though it is difficult to imagine how the present disorganization in these frontier states can be extinguished, and such a degree of tranquil ity restored as may offer security to our own territories, without the active intervention of the paramount power in Hindostan. In the prospect of hostilities it is confidently said, that all furloughs will be suspended and that those who had quitted the corps in the hope of visiting England will be required to rejoin them.

The Star informs us that terms have been offered to the Regent at Gwalior, and that if they are not complied with hostilities will immediately commence. The terms are the following by our contemporary:—That the Khasgee who has usurped the office and power of Prime Minister be dismissed, and Mama Sahb be restored to that post; that certain tracts of territory, which inconveniently protrude themselves into Scindia's dominions, and other districts in the provinces, be exchanged for tracts more convenient to the Durbar and to ourselves; that the present refractory army be dismissed, and a large contingent force under British officers be substituted in its place; that the Gwalior treasury pay the expense incurred by the present assemblage of troops. These terms are extremely moderate, and refute the assertion that the present movement of our troops arises from an itch for territorial aggrandisement. The restoration of Mama Sahb, the Prime Minister, whose appointment our Government had sanctioned, is due to the dignified position it sustains in India. To plead the principle of non-interference in the face of danger, after we had interfered with our own subjects in the appointment of a Premier, would be worse than affectation—it would be to subscribe to our own disgrace. The exchange of territories is rendered necessary by the state of things in Bundelkund, the undetected and treasury of which province find effectual shelter in districts nominally under the sway of Gwalior, which we cannot enter; while the substitution of a stipendiary force, under our own officers, for the present army, though it will greatly extinguish the independence of the State, appears indispensable from a regard to the security of our provinces. The demand for the expenses of the war is, in fact, nothing more than the time-honoured rule that those who have provoked hostilities should pay for the rod which corrects them, and every treaty imposed by the strong on the weak should wind up with a similar item.

From the Punjaub we have nothing but reports, but they become daily more interesting, as they indicate the approach of the crisis which will demand our interference. Goh Singh, it is said, warily keeps himself to the hills, curbing his mountain subjects. Heer Singh and Leena Singh rule at Lahore, with the permission of their soldiers, who are mutinous for increase of pay, and are said to be gradually quelling their ranks. The authority of the Sekh Government over the army is described as likely to test all the resources of empire, after which—but we must not anticipate events. How far the[illegible]nts are to be depended on we cannot say, but a reference to the past history of Russia renders it highly probable that they are sufficient; for it is thus the Asiatic monarchy after another has crumbled to dust.

As soon as there ceases to be any Government at Lahore capable of maintaining its pacific relations with us, the duty and the wisdom of the humanity of our own provinces will supersede every other consideration and all existing treaties, and we shall be constrained to take possession of the administration in self-defence. Meanwhile, we are informed that the Cabul troops who had been left to occupy Peshawur had deserted their post and fled to the Indus, plundering the inhabitants on the route. If they have not done so already, it must be evident that in the confusion which reigns in the Punjaub, they will do so ere long. It is indeed not probable, therefore, that the province of Peshawur has by this time been dismembered from the Punjaub, of which it was an integral part at the time when we guaranteed to Runjeet and his family the security of his dominions by a treaty offensive and defensive. Most probably Heer Singh, distressed by the demands of an insolent soldiery, will be unable to despatch troops for the recovery of that province. Most probable he will class that assistance from the British Government which it solemnly engaged to afford. We do not see how our Government can[illegible]k out of its engagements, or refuse to march an army across the[illegible]s in the field. We have not been able to get[illegible]1838, but the Sim sh proclamation of the 1st of October of that[illegible] that tripartite treaty by which Runjeet Singh is guaranteed[illegible]ossessions—including Peshawur—and that the friends and enemies of on[illegible]contracting parties have been declared to be the friends and enemies of all[illegible]ough of this treaty we called upon Runjeet Singh's successor, Sheer Singh, to assist us, with a contingent of his troops, in the Khyber Pass and fighting the Affghans. If his successor should call upon us to afford the same assistance in repelling the assaults of the same foe in the same locality, how are our Government to resist the requisition? And then will be fulfilled the prediction of one of the chiefs of Cabul, who, on the retirement of our troops, said to an eminent officer, "We shall meet again before three years have passed."

THE INAUGURAL ADDRESS OF THE TRINITY COLLEGE HISTORICAL SOCIETY,

RECENTLY DELIVERED ON THE OCCASION OF ITS RESTORATION, AT THE DUBLIN UNIVERSITY.

(From the Irish Barrister's Sketch Book, and Continued from our number of December 2nd.)

Mr. Magee, the auditor of the society, whom we have already introduced to the public as the speaker of this address, having dwelt for some time, in his exordium, and with considerable eloquence, on the glories of the Old Historical Society, recalled the memories of some of its distinguished members. Then, stimulating his fellow-students to imitate the bright example held forth for their imitation, he said

Here, in the very scene of all their triumphs, it is my privilege to call on you, gentlemen, by the glorious fame they have won, by the fame they have left, by all the solemn thoughts by which you raise upon the relics of departed worth, by the proud feelings with which you recall the traditions of the past, by all the bright hopes with which you look forward to the future, to call upon them, and by their deeds, to seek, like them, to win a name which shall adorn the university and your country when you are gone, and through the lapse of years shall still have power upon the hearts of those who hear it.

But, while we thus proudly and hopefully contemplate our position, I must not forget that there are those amongst us this evening, in whose pleasurable emotions may mingle some softer feelings of regret, for they behold in the peculiar light of memory scenes which we behold in the bright light of history To them the name of the Historical Society is linked with associations painful and yet pleasing —reminding them of days long vanished—of voices long since silent. To them each glorious name is as a spell word, waking strange echoes in the halls of memory, and causing the shadows of the past to start from their slumber, and crowd around them in vivid distinctness: one more they see the friends whom they loved—they prized—whose loss they have mourned—the chosen companions of their youth—with whom they have shared their griefs and their pleasures—their joys and their sorrows—with whom, hand in hand, they roamed through the rosy paths of literature, the flowery fields of poesy—whose friendship lent its charm to the best and brightest hours of their existence—the morning of life; when with unclouded eye they looked forward to snare together the glorious rewards of manhood—the mild sunset of declining years; doubtless, their aspirations for our success are mingled with sighs for the memories of those who are gone; and while the[illegible]s of[illegible]ir[illegible]ir[illegible]ir

VIEW IN THE NEW PLYMOUTH SETTLEMENT, NEW ZEALAND.

NEW ZEALAND.

The recent intelligence from this infant colony renders every illustration of its progressive civilization of interest to our readers. The engraving shows one of the latest settlements of the New Zealand Company, the site of New Plymouth, taken from a drawing made on the spot by one of the Company's Surveyors. It lies upon Cook's Straits, in the vast and fertile district of Taranaki, and thirty miles distant from Mount Egmont, seen in the distance of the view: in the foreground are shown the description of houses built by the natives in anticipation of the arrival of emigrants; and the Surveyor-General of the Plymouth Company, with assistants, employed in marking out the site of the future town.

New Plymouth lies considerably northward of Port Nicholson and Cloudy Bay, at which point the lamentable massacre took place a short time since. The reports of various officers of the Company, who had walked to the neighbourhood of the Sugar Loaf Islands, where the settlement of New Plymouth has commenced, left no doubt that the way from the latter place to Wanganui was as easy as that from Wanganui to Port Nicholson. The number of persons who had emigrated, early last year, directly from England to New Plymouth, was 534. It may be considered, therefore, that the whole of the coast from Port Nicholson to New Plymouth, has been opened for settlement. In anticipation, too, of a large coasting trade, numerous small vessels are now building in the various harbours and inlets on both sides of Cook's Straits.

Cloudy Bay, the scene of the late massacre, is in the Nelson settlement, a scene from which has been engraved in our 82nd number.

MONTE VIDEO.

Monte Video, the capital of the republic of Uruguay, has of late been the scene of some of the most important movements in South America. From the intelligence received on Wednesday by the Independence, from New York, the Brazilian Minister at Monte Video had refused to recognise the blockade of that port by Admiral Brown. It was expected that this would lead to serious difficulties between Brazil and the Argentine republic, of which Buenos Ayres is the capital, lying higher on the opposite bank of the La Plata.

At Monte Video, the Government was enlisting men for the squadron, giving 50 silver dollars each bounty. It was supposed that if the Brazilian force at Monte Video should oppose Admiral Brown in enforcing the blockade, he would attack them, and war ensue.

It is reported that a heavy skirmish took place in front of Monte Video on the 13th of September. The Riveristas, 1000 in number, were repulsed by a few companies of the besieging troops, and suffered very severely, chiefly in wounded. Rivera had crossed the Yt, and was proceeding in the direction of Cerro Largo, pursued by Urquiza.

Monte Video is the best harbour on the broad estuary of the La Plata river; and, by its position, is destined to become a great maritime entrepôt: it is already frequented by a great number of vessels from all countries of the world. The town is, in general, well built, the streets being wide and straight, and intersecting each other at right angles; they are paved, and have narrow footways. The houses are built with taste, and have flat roofs with parapets. The cathedral has but slight architectural pretensions, nor are there any other public buildings of note.

The population, before 1810, is stated to have amounted to 30,000, or even 36,000, souls; but they were reduced by war and a siege, which the town had to sustain against the Brazilians, to 15,000 souls. The number has, however, since considerably increased, and is now stated at 33,000, a change brought about by the recent blockade of Buenos-Ayres by the French, which drove the tide of European emigration to Monte Video. The emigrants have mostly been of laborious habits, employing themselves in paving the town, building houses, keeping shops, cultivating gardens, or in coasting trade. Upon the house-roofs, or terraces, children play, and the families assemble to enjoy the evening air. Hence, the town has, at first sight, a gay appearance; but nothing can be less inviting or more unpicturesque than the interior, or the coast. Altogether the town is a cosmopolitan beehive, where every one thinks but of working, and getting rich as fast as possible. The trade is fast increasing; the principal articles of export are the produce of the numerous herds of the country, as hides, salted and jerked beef, tallow, and hams, to a very considerable amount.

Extract from a letter received at Lloyd's from their agent at Gibraltar, under date the 16th instant:—"Her Majesty's steamer Locust returned to this port on the 12th instant, after an unsuccessful search after the piratical brig alluded to in last week's report. The French brig-of-war Cassard, Lieut. S. E. Morel, having drifted during the gale of the 10th instant, into three fathoms water, off the King's Bastion, was assisted out of her dangerous position by her Majesty's steamer Locust."

TURKEY

The house of a French merchant having been invaded by Turks, and himself ill treated, at Aleppo, M. de Bourqueney has been very busy in demanding satisfaction for the outrage. A tatar has just been sent off for that city, with instructions from the Government for the severe punishment of the culpable parties, with other satisfaction requisite for the honour and local consideration of the French Consul there.

The French are about to withdraw from the ruins of Nineveh, situate about three hours' journey from Mousoul, with a fine harvest of antiquities; and I understand a person is to be sent by the Porte to deliver them to the agents of the French Government appointed to receive them. No individual has yet been named by the Turkish Ministers for that purpose, but they appear to have no disinclination to oblige France in that way.

It is stated that Sir Stratford Canning cannot obtain permission to build the British palace on the hill dominating Dolmabaktchi, although he has bought the land, and paid for it. The fact is that the site commands a Turkish barracks, and on that plea the Divan refuses to let a foreign edifice be run up there, though the barracks, instead of being a fortress, are but a pile of open buildings totally incapable of defence. By this excuse the Turks, it is supposed, get rid of what they call the nuisance of an ambassador's hotel overlooking the Sultan's palace.

The negociations at Erzeroum go on more briskly, and it is possible that, in the course of a few years, some progress will be made in them. Joking apart, they are likely to be interminable.

Rumour says, that Admiral Walker and the Capudan Pacha are not by any means agreeing. The former is desirous of quitting the Ottoman service, which he cannot, however, do without the concurrence of his own Government; little or no use is, in the meantime, made of his services. The Turkish vice-admiral (Captana), Osman Pacha, died a few days ago. He accompanied the late Achmed Pacha, when he made over the fleet to Mehemet Ali; and the part he took in that affair so troubled his conscience, that he took to drink, and fell a victim to his mortification and excesses.

THE BRAZILS.

THE EMPEROR'S SPEECH ON CLOSING THE CHAMBERS, OCTOBER 24.—"Worthy and Honourable Gentlemen Representatives of the nation—I continue to maintain unaltered amicable relations with foreign Powers. The civil war in the province of Rio Grande do Sul appears at length to be near its long-wished-for termination. Although several important matters introduced into both Chambers have not been brought to the desired close, I experience the most cordial satisfaction in having to congratulate you on the zeal and devotion you have displayed in promoting the welfare of the country, of which you have given the most convincing proofs on the occasion of imposing new taxes, to make good, in some measure, the deficit in the public revenue. The proofs, too, which you afforded me, and the felicitations I have received from all parts of the Empire, on the celebration of my marriage with the Princess Donna Theresa Christina Maria, now Empress of Brazils, have been to me most grateful. Penetrated therefore with the most pleasing sentiments, it is with regret I am obliged to call to mind the interest and concern manifested for the prosperity of my family on all occasions by all my subjects, and of which I witnessed very recently fresh testimony in the public sympathies on my august sister's, the Imperial Princess's, late illness. Worthy and Honourable Gentlemen Representatives of the nation—I thank you for the co-operation you have given to my government, and I hope from your loyalty and patriotism, you will continue to act in concert with me to place the political system established by the constitution on a firm and lasting foundation. The session is closed."

MALTA, Dec. 18.—DISTRIBUTION OF THE MEDITERRANEAN FLEET.—In Malta Harbour: The Queen, 110, bearing the flag of Vice-Admiral Sir E. W. C. R. Owen, the Commander-in-chief; Ceylon, receiving-ship, bearing the flag of Rear-Admiral Sir Lucius Curtis, second in command, and Superintendent of the Malta Dockyard; Formidable, 84; Malabar, 72; Vernon, 50; Orestes, 18; Virago, war-steamer; Acheron steam-packet; and Beacon and Magpie, surveying vessels. At Gibraltar: The Belvidera, 36; and Locust steam-tender on her way from Malta to Gibraltar, the Polyphemus, steam-packet. At Barcelona: The Savage, 10, and Scout, 18. At Corfu: The H. Aigle, 24. On her way from Malta to Patras and the Ionian Islands: The Hecla, war-steamer. At Athens The Indus, 78; Snake, 16; and Vesuvius, war-steamer. At Constantinople: The Devastation, war-steamer. At Alexandria: The Geyser, war-steamer, and on her way thither, from Malta, the steam-packet Alecto. At Beyrout. The Tyne, 28, and at Mesr, the Medea, war-steamer.

NAVAL INTELLIGENCE AND MOVEMENTS AT MALTA (SINCE THE 5TH OF DECEMBER).—The Hecla, which was sent away to Tunis on the 8th, returned on the 12th, bringing accounts that extensive warlike preparations are being made thereat, to resist a threatened naval expedition from the Sardinian Government, which demands the free exportation of grain, the unlooked for suspension of which has caused heavy damages to the trade of Genoa. The Orestes arrived from Lemnos on the 9th, and the Beacon and Magpie, from Athens and Corfu on the 11th. The Beacon passes the winter here, but the Magpie is ordered to England. The Great Liverpool steam-ship, belonging to the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, bringing the London mails of Nov. 30, reached this on the 15th inst., having on the 13th idem., between Cape Serrat and Galita, had the misfortune to suffer the breakage in two of the intermediate shaft of the engines, which stopped her progress for several hours, not altogether without endangering her safety, being at the time too close, under such circumstances, to the Tunisian coast, the boisterous weather prevailing. On her return from Alexandria she will have to lay up until a new shaft be sent out from England. The Polyphemus arrived on the 14th, with the London Overland mails of the 6th inst., and was sent away to Gibraltar with the intermediate mails for England on the 16th; the Hecla left with the mails for the Ionian Islands and Greece on the 15th, and the Malabar arrived from Gibraltar and Tunis on the 16th. No letters or papers have been received at Malta, but a report prevails that Dost Mehomed has been shot dead by order of the Khan of Bokhara, and that the Rasges of Gwalior has been seized by the troops, which render the advance of the British army unnecessary.

SANTA ANNA.

Some interesting intelligence of "The Provisional President of Mexico" has just been received by the packet-ship Independence, from New York.

The advices from Vera Cruz are to the 16th ult. It was announced that Santa Anna had been re-elected President of the Republic. The papers are engaged in a warm discussion respecting the law prohibiting foreigners from carrying on the retail trade, and also as to the policy Santa Anna has adopted of ordering foreigners for the interior. Santa Anna, having in view the colonisation of the province of Tamaulipas, has granted the wild lands to one Alexander de Grot, on condition that he introduces, within ten years, at least 10,000 families, either Germans, Belgians, or Swiss; the lands to be divided among the colonists, who are to devote themselves to their cultivation and the improvement of agriculture.

PORTRAIT OF SANTA ANNA.

The New Orleans papers contain later dates from Yucatan, and have copies of the correspondence between the Commissioners of that State and Mexico. It has evidently been Santa Anna's object to gain time for more effectual hostilities. It is said that it would not require much to produce civil war amongst the Yucatecos, in consequence of the disagreement between the two races who form her population.

A sketch of Santa Anna, and his aide-de-camp, Arista, will be found in No. 81 of our Journal: we now annex the reputed President's portrait, from an accredited source.

VIEW OF MONTE VIDEO.

THE HIGHLANDS OF ÆTHIOPIA.

In a recent number of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS we announced to our readers that Major Harris, the well-known author of "Wild Sports in Southern Africa," who lately returned from the heather-clad mountains of Abyssinia, with presents from the King of Shoa for her Britannic Majesty, was about to publish a detail of his proceedings in that interesting and little-known country. We have just had the satisfaction to peruse the work, and may safely say that it even eclipses the expectations we had built upon the author's previous reputation. We never read three volumes of travels with greater zest, and we feel convinced that whether following the adventurous party through hair-breadth 'scapes among the direst of savages, or participating in the conquest of the giant among quadrupeds —whether listening to the follies of the cowled monk in the monastery of Aferbeine, or contemplating the Christian monarch during his annual crusade against the persecuted heathen, —the reader will find himself hurried irresistibly along, and will lament with us that there are only three volumes to read.

We formerly adverted to the singular climate of the Abyssinian Alps, to the character of their inhabitants, and to the gratifying ascendancy gained over the evil passions of the despotic savage. Our limits will not permit us to add more, nor is it necessary; but, before turning to our extracts, we must repeat the words of Major Harris's appropriate motto, "Excitet Dominus optimus maximus principum nostrorum animos, ut pervetustæ huic Christianæ nationi opem ferant, Christianismo in tam remotis mundi partibus proferendo utilem, sibique omni ævo gloriosum futuram."

THE MONASTERY OF AFERBEINE.

Whether in Europe or in half-civilised Abyssinia, monastic establishments are invariably seated in spots the most romantic. Deep in the recesses of Aferbeine stands the church and monastery dedicated to Tekla Haimanot, an ecclesiastic of extraordinary abilities, who flourished during the thirteenth century, and rescued the greater portion of the empire from the yoke of usurpation, restored it to the hands of the lineal descendant of the ancient Æthiopic dynasty. Subsequently canonised for his successful exertions in the cause both of Church and State, the monk, whose history is obscured with numberless superstitious traditions, is to the present day held in the highest odour and veneration. Twice during the year is a festival held in celebration of his birth, death, and ascension, and by the entire Christian population he is regarded as the patron saint of Abyssinia.

THE MONASTERY OF AFERBEINE.

The narrow path wound through a forest of venerable trees. Cedar-like junipers, scarred by the unsparing hand of time, and many dried up by the wrath of centuries, rearing towards the cold sky their tall withered barkless trunks and skeleton arms, rocked to every breeze. Younger scions of the stock, clothed in a somore cypress garb, flourished in vigour among the drooping and silvery woira, of which the pensive branches were hoary with ancient moss, hanging in fanciful festoons; and saving when the zephyr sighed through the foliage, or a bird whistled from the topmost branch, silence reigned throughout the sylvan scene. Large bands of the brotherhood, lounging away their hours of idleness, were for once aroused from listless apathy by the passing cavalcade of white strangers. The land swarms with friars, monks, and anchorites, who are habited in yellow dresses, as the badge of poverty, or in the prepared skin of the anteilope. Usually licentious in their manners, they roam through the country a perfect pest and plague to society. Men become monks at any period of life. Those who are afflicted with grievous sickness vow that in event of recovery they will abandon the world, and transfer all their moveables to the church. The rich often deliver over their property to their children, who are bound to support them until death. The poor subsist upon the bounty of the King and of the community; and many never enter the cells of the monastery, but with their wives reside at ease in their own homes, having assumed the counterfeit piety of the order solely for the sake of defrauding their creditors—since, however deeply involved, the "putting on angel's clothing" clears off all former scores with the ease and rapidity of the most indulgent court of insolvency.

The skin of the Aigazin is usually adopted as the garb of humiliation; and this emblem, together with the unwashed person, is intended to commemorate the legend of their great founder Eustathius, who boasted of having performed no ablution during a long term of existence, and who miraculously crossed the river Jordan floating secure upon his greasy cloak. The prophet Samuel is also sometimes referred to as affording another notable example of the advantage extended by the mantle of hide, in the asserted fact of his having sailed seven days across a great sea, borne in safety, with his disciples, upon the leathern robes which in those ancient days formed the only attire.

The road was lined with pilgrims clothed in yellow garments, and having each a cross of blue clay upon his forehead. They had been to perform their vows, or redeem their pledges left, at the sanctuary of Debra Libanos (Mount Lebanon), chief seat of learning in Shoa, and the renowned scene of the miracles of Tekla Haimanot, its founder. Hard pressed by his enemies, the patron and lawgiver of Æthiopia is said to have leapt through the trunk of a venerable tree, a seam in which yet vouches for the truth of the legend that it spontaneously clave asunder at his holy bidding, but closed to fill the sacrilegious assailants who sought his life. Being athirst, he prayed unto God, whereupon the archangel Michael, who was his mediator, caused a fountain to rise at his feet, supplied by the stream of the river Jordan. A cross which he carried in his hand had been swept away during the passage of a neighbouring torrent but no sooner had he cursed the waters, than they were dried up, and have never since flowed above the channel.

THE TRIUMPH.

The remains of the saint still cast a halo over the spot in which they lie interred, and the pool which he blessed, retains to this day the property of cleansing the leper, and healing the patient, however diseased, who shall immerse on either of the three days annually devoted to the commemoration of his birth, death, and ascension. Famous as the most holy of shrines throughout Southern Abyssinia, men of every rank, from the monarch to the meanest peasant, if unable to repair thither in person, delegate their substitute with offerings according to their wealth. Having on his way bathed in the "Segga Wadum," or "river of flesh and blood," a tributary to the Nile formed by the confluence of the Sana Robi and the Sana Reka, the pilgrim quaffs the waters of the mineral well, prescribes upon his forehead the sacred emblem of Christianity, and after kissing at the adjacent church of St. Mary, across which is asserted by the priesthood to have fallen from heaven, he is secure against sickness and witchcraft. The very earth from Debra Libanos is carried away as an antidote to maladies, and all who meet the returning pilgrim, fall prostrate upon the ground, and kiss the dust from off his feet.

DEATH OF THE ELEPHANT.

At length, about two in the afternoon, came a summons to the presence of the governor, who, being much fatigued, was seated below a spreading tree, and about to propose a return to the tents. In a long studied speech he set forth "that his followers had done their utmost also for that day, and had driven the elephants, which were countless as the forest leaves, from place to place, as though they had been village kine, but that the Europeans——" Here his harangue was cut short by the appearance of a Galla scout, who galloped furiously up, exclaiming, "They drink, they drink, in the Jow wadi!" The council instantly dissolved. Inspired by a new ray of hope, the hunters leaped again into the saddle, and, carrying their rifles across their shoulders, made at full speed for the river.

A gallop of three miles through a dense covert, consisting of strong elastic wands, interlaced with prickly weeds and coarse spear grass, left the crowd far in the rear; and, arriving at the spot where animals had been viewed, "Yellow Horse," with half a score of his wild riders, was alone present. The deep holes left by the feet of the monstrous animals in the wet sand at the water's edge were still bubbling from below, and from the summit of a tree, the broad backs of a herd being presently identified at some distance by the measured flapping of their huge ears, it was resolved that the native allies should tarry where they were, whilst two of the party proceeded quietly to the attack on foot, before the governor, with his noisy retinue, should arrive from the rear.

After much opposition on the part of old Horse, who vowed that the despot would hold him responsible for the accident which the rash measure was certain to entail, the arrangement was finally carried. A stealthy advance up the wind, under cover of the copse wood, soon revealed a small open area which had been trampled completely bare, and in its centre, beneath the scanty shade of a venerable camel thorn, which had been well polished by continual rubbing, stood a gigantic bull, surrounded by four of his seraglio.

British credit was now completely at stake. Creeping, therefore, to the extreme verge of the covert, in order to render certainty more sure, a two-ounce ball, planted in the only small fatal spot presented by the huge target, laid low the mighty patriarch of the herd, whose fall made the earth to tremble. One of the survivors, rushing towards the ambush, received a volley of hard bullets in her broad forehead, which turned the attack, and brought her also to the ground, after a fight with her companions of fifty yards. She, however, rose after some minutes and escaped into the thick forest to die, attention being meanwhile entirely engrossed by the tusker, the noblest quarry, who, although prostrate on his side like a fallen tower, manifested in his dying moments, by sundry portentous noises and smooth struggles, an inclination to resume an erect position. His destruction was speedily completed; but it was still impossible to leave the spot, from a conviction that the braggart Ambára rabble would not fail to claim the honour and the credit of having slain the prize with their powerless spears, should any person-chase find the carcase during the night. The painful mystery came to an end, which was fully confirmed by the appropriation of the tail as a trophy, by the very first man who made his appearance.

DEATH OF THE ELEPHANT.

The death of this lordly monster, to which so little importance would have been attached in those parts of the African continent where the event is one of diurnal occurrence, created in the mind of every beholder a sensation of astonishment and admiration hardly to be described. Those who, when the storming party first entered the covert, had sought safety in trees, could now with difficulty be prevailed upon to descend, in order to approach the mountain of flesh from which life was said to have departed; and finally mustering courage to do so, in the frenzy of excitement, launched their spears and discharged their matchlocks, to the imminent peril of the bystanders and of each other. On the first intimation of the animals having, after two days' diligent search, been actually discovered, three fourths of the whole party had incontinently disappeared. The Galla horsemen, who had previously boasted the destruction of elephants with their spears, did not venture to approach for a full hour after their ears had been saluted by the reports of the rifles; and even the warrior who vaunted himself the "hereditary chieftain of all the Braves of the Ambára nation," long clung pertinaciously to his secure seat among the topmost branches.

As the fact of the downfall of the noble beast became more widely credited, and the scattered forces gradually rallied round it, chief after chief offered his hand in congratulation of the, in his eye, daring exploit, expressing his wonder and amazement that a small rifle-ball had been able to accomplish the annihilation of the bulk and life of seventy seasons, and extolling the prowess of the king's European visitors in the encounter with so formidable a monster, whose colossal strength could have carried him trampling through a whole army of their own best, dealing death and destruction wheresoever his will impelled him. Whilst dancing and howling around the carcass, amid the crimson torrent which deluged the ground, they affirmed the deed to be the work of genii, and of supernatural beings, and complimented the doers as the "bravest of the brave," under the titles of "Figá" and "Gobez;" declaring that "the mould whereof the Gyptzis were fashioned must be of a rare quality, and that if all the subjects of Shoa were but composed of the same material, the dominions of Sáhela Sélassie would know no limit."

Boroo, the brave chief of the Soops, who had with extreme difficulty been restrained from following the Abban hope at the head of his gathered retainers, and thus shaming the quarry by the noise and confusion of many hundred horsemen, was more particularly earnest and vehement in his protestations and congratulations on the victory achieved—having himself anticipated none but the most fatal results from what he termed to rash an attack upon the hitherto unsubdued monarch of the wilderness, and trembled for the royal vengeance which any accident to the party would infallibly have drawn upon his devoted head. "The world was made for you alone," concluded the old warrior in a perfect ecstasy of delight, "and no one else has any business in it."

The trunk and ear of the beast to much dreaded throughout the district having been hewn from the carcass, upon the iron folds of which neither the swords nor lances of the assembled Galla and Ambára could make the smallest impression, were [illegible] slow and [illegible] by the aid of [illegible] encampment in the hollow, the [illegible] were paid to the [illegible] to the despotic king, to inspect every other [illegible] against the leather. Horsemen galloped in every direction, despatched in pursuit of the [illegible] and announcing that "the wild beast had perished by the [illegible] and that the [illegible] had performed the most [illegible] of valour and [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] were received with [illegible] notes of praise and welcome. The heads were chanted after the cheering custom of a war song. Bullocks were instantly slaughtered for the entire of the followers. Double the daily [illegible] of every description were poured in. Sprigs of green asparagus were presented by the sons of the delighted governor, to ornament the hair in earnest of victory. The king's chorister composed a new extemporaneous song upon the occasion, which was chanted during half the night; and until the cock crew, every quarter of the village resounded with wild dancing and martial music, and war songs, in celebration of an achievement, now for the first time witnessed by the Christian population of Shoa.

THE TRIUMPH.

Before sunrise the ensuing morning the victorious troops, reduced by one third marched upon Angólala, driving exultingly before them upwards of twelve thousand head of prize cattle, the entire of which were par excellence the property of the king. Arrived within sight of the capital, bands of martial music burst from the centre division, when every throat throughout the vast army joined in one deafening chorus. Half a mile to the south of the Galla wall a tent had been erected, to which his Majesty, attending for a few minutes, arrayed his person in preparatory to a triumphal entry, and the various leaders at the head of their respective squadrons meanwhile took up the position allotted in the coming pageant.

As the state umbrellas, surmounted by the arck of St. Michael, passed through the gate of the defences, the assembled chiefs and warriors who had most distinguished themselves during the successful foray, arrayed in the glittering badges of former achievements in arms, careered in front of the royal party. One hundred gorgeously stained steeds, resplendent with trappings and brass ornaments, and fancifully caparisoned in gay cloths and chintz housings, bounded and pranced gallantly under the chosen band of grooms, and were then marched onwards, and party-coloured robes flaunting in the wind, slowly curvetted over the verdant carpet of turf, in a dazzling and many labyrinth of reticulated circles. Their glossy black hair streaming with fantastic ornaments of recent triumphs, and their shields and their variously-emblazoned shields, crowded with silver ornaments and devices, glancing brightly in the sunbeams, they rent the air with shrill whoops and yells, responded, at frequent intervals, by the arck of St. Michael, passed through the gate of the defences, the assembled chiefs and warriors who had most distinguished themselves during the successful foray, arrayed in the glittering badges of former achievements in arms, careered in front of the royal party. One hundred gorgeously stained steeds, resplendent with trappings and brass ornaments, and fancifully caparisoned in gay cloths and chintz housings, bounded and pranced gallantly under the chosen band of grooms, and were then marched onwards, and party-coloured robes flaunting in the wind, slowly curvetted over the verdant carpet of turf, in a dazzling and many labyrinth of reticulated circles. Their glossy black hair streaming with fantastic ornaments of recent triumphs, and their shields and their variously-emblazoned shields, crowded with silver ornaments and devices, glancing brightly in the sunbeams, they rent the air with shrill whoops and yells, responded, at frequent intervals, by the arck of St. Michael, passed through the gate of the palace and from all parts of the town; whilst the dense phalanx of warriors in the rear—their forest of lances partially obscured under a thick canopy of dust—pressing imminently forward, and bearing their wilder war-song from ten thousand throats, completed one of the most brilliant and savage exhibitions that can be conceived.

The king was enrobed in the ample spoils of a noble lion, richly ornamented, and half concealing, beneath their tawny folds, an embroidered green mantle of Indian manufacture. On his right shoulder he wore three chains of gold, a symbol of the Holy Trinity, and the fresh-plucked sprigs of asparagus, which decided his recent exploit, rose from the centre of an embossed coronet of silver which encircled his regal brow. His dappled war-steed, bedizened with chequered housings of blue and yellow, was led prancing beside him, and immediately in advance bounded the champion on a coal-black charger, bearing the imperial shield of massive silver, with the sacred symbol of Christianity in high relief, whilst his long plaited raven locks floated wildly behind over the spotted hide of a panther, by which his broad shoulders were graced. Abegaz Maretch and Ayto Berkie rode on either side of the crimson umbrellas, and a marshalled line of shield-bearers, under the banner of the Lyons, preceded a clear space around the royal person, until the cavalcade had gained the stockaded knoll upon the summit of which the palace is erected

Here a deputation of priests, clad in snow-white garments, received the victorious monarch with a blessing, and, under a volley of musquetry, his Majesty proceeded to ascend. The outer court was crowded with female slaves, beggars, and menials, who, on the first appearance of the umbrellas within the gate, greeted his return with the shrillest clamour, and cast themselves prostrate in the dust. Fusiliers and matchlock-men of the imperial body-guard lined the second palisaded enclosure, and, under a feu de joie, their leader, performing the war-dance before the holy ark, led the procession to the last enclosure, where the King, being met by the eunuchs of the royal household, entered the palace by a private door, and, surrounded by pages and attendants, presently took seat in a high latticed balcony fronting the inner quadrangle.

Full in the centre stood a gigantic drum, whereat three weird old hags thumped unceasingly with crossed hands, keeping time energetically with their feet, whilst, under the most frightful contortions and gesticulations, they cursed and screamed defiance to the enemies of the state. Three hundred counsellors, who were seated in a circle, their faces besmeared with red ochre and grease, and their frizzled locks white under a sort of lard, sang and clapped their hands in deafening concert. A dancing girl, flanked by two Held Horses, whirled in front of the throne, and in a series of eulogistic rhymes composed by herself, chaunted a rehearsal of the recent heroic deeds of the puissant monarch, "who, although invariably triumphant over his heathen foes, never descended his royal brow with a branch greener than that by which it was now surmounted." Each time she turned towards the crowd, a shrill clamour of united voices rang forth the chorus to her verse. The skin-clad warriors, with their bows and quivers, coronets, and silver swords, glistened in the morning sun; and as the chiefs, governors, and nobles, formed in a semicircle on either side of the imperial person, stamped and clapped their hands in savage time, the populace, crowding the carpeted yard, and lining every wall, capered, yelled, and shouted with the widest enthusiasm. The dismounted cavaliers formed fifteen deep, and filling the entire court, poised each his trophy of blood aloft upon the pointing palm of his lance, and as the whole danced, and whooped, and howled like wild beasts, warrior after warrior springing with a fiendish yell into the centre of the ring, cast his prize contemptuously upon the ground, and, kissing the dust, did abject homage at the feet of the triumphant despot.

"Behold in me the king's great warrior," now resounded from every quarter. "I it was who slew his enemy in the open field, or speared him in the burning hut. May he not ever attend his armies in the battle. May Sáhela Sélassie reign for ever!" A general shout and clashing of shields, with the sudden cessation of the wild music, announced the coming of his savage pageant. The crowd dropped before the monarch, and, as the actors dispersed rapidly to the right and to the left, the discharge of an old disconcerted iron gun, which, vertically elevated against a stone, was revealed as the battery extremely of the court, announced to the public that the tragedy of "The Royal Robber" had been performed with the most brilliant success, and would be repeated again during the season.

The Earl of Leicester attained his majority on Christmas-day, when his lordship entertained a family circle at Holkham Hall.

IMPORTANT BRITISH NAVAL MOVEMENT.—The Halifax Post, of the 28th of November, states that Vice-Admiral Sir Charles Adams departed from the port with a fleet on the 20th, for Central America, and remarks that the business the fleet is concerned in is of deep importance. Some old difficulties are alluded to, as well as the more recent contempt shown to the British flag at a party where the British Minister was present; and what is probably more prevalent than all the rest, the restrictive tariff of Santa Ana proves injurious to British trade.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK

SUNDAY, Dec. 31st.—First Sunday after Christmas
MONDAY, Jan. 1st.—Irish Union, 1801. Circumcision.
TUESDAY, 2nd.—Ovid died, 17.
WEDNESDAY, 3rd.—
THURSDAY, 4th.—Old Parr's will containing his receipt found, 1837.
FRIDAY, 5th.—
SATURDAY, 6th.—Epiphany

HIGH WATER at London-bridge, for the Week ending Jan. 5.

Monday		Tuesday.		Wednesday.		Thursday.		Friday.		Saturday.
m.	h.	m.	h.	m.	h.	m.	h.	m.	h.	m.	h.
0	11	11	12	45	0	0	0	42	1	3	1

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

COMPLETION OF VOL. III.

The present number of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS completes the Third Volume, for which a title-page, index, and chronology of events for the last six months, will be presented, gratis, to all Subscribers, with our next number. A favourable opportunity for new Subscribers commencing is now presented, with the first number of the year 1844.

 Orders received by all booksellers and newsvenders.

	£	s.	d.
Per Quarter	0	6	6
Half-year	0	13	0
One Year	1	8	0

Or by letter, addressed to our publisher, W. LITTLER, 199, Strand, inclosing a Money Order for the amount.

Vol. I., price 21s.—Vols. II. and III., price 18s. each, handsomely bound, gilt edges, may now be had

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.—We feel considerable pleasure in announcing to our numerous friends that our next number, being the first of a new volume, will contain the commencement of a new, and, we feel certain, an highly attractive feature in our Journal. Arrangements are in progress with the most distinguished writers of our time, and as several cases have been concluded, to contribute to the "ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS" a moral and interesting tale of domestic life. These tales will contain all the essence of a three volume production, and yet will not occupy more space in our columns than can be conveniently given in two or three numbers. To add to the attractiveness of this new feature, each tale will be illustrated in the highest possible style; and as in these subjects we can devote more line than can possibly be shown in the majority of our news illustrations, so will they be more beautifully drawn by the artist, and more highly finished by the engraver. The first tale in this series will appear in our next week's paper, by Thomas Miller, author of "Royston Gower," "Gideon Giles," &c. &c. &c. The illustrations by J. Gilbert.

THE ROMANCE—of "England and France"—is now reprinting in a handsome octavo volume, and will be ready for delivery in about a week.

THE FASHIONS.—In this number of our Journal appears an engraving and minute description of the fashions for January 1844. The description accompanying the engraving is brief, but it has been obtained from sources which may be relied on as the highest and best authorities. In this manner the fashions for the ensuing months will be given the last week in each month, and anticipate the whole of the Magazines.

"T. H. R. N." South Lambeth, is thanked for his good intentions, but the diagram is too scientific for our columns.

"Alan."—The song on the New Year does not reach our standard of merit.

"R. A. should send it in full name and address.

"P. S."—We think not.

"W. H." Bermondsey.—The new process will, we think, affect our correspondent's prospects but very remotely, if at all. But W. H. should provide himself with the published account of the invention in question.

"Ben Blow's' Christmas carol is declined.

"Matilda and Caroline."—The sum you upwards of £200

"An Admirer and Subscriber," Weymouth.—Messrs. Wilkinson, Ludgate-hill.

"W. W., Suffolk.—The lines in question have been too often reprinted.

"J. G., Sheerness, is thanked for his kindly offer: any batches will oblige.

"Enquirer.'—We have not room for the paragraph on population.

"A Reader and Occasional Purchaser."—We have already fully illustrated the royal visit to Belmont.

"Philologus should consult Walker's Dictionary.

"C. G. L."—Alabaster may be readily cleaned with spirits of wine or turpentine.

"J. C." Ardmore, County Waterford.—We are not aware.

"J. C." Rotherham.—The engraving shall appear.

"J. S." Preston Pans.—The idea of "Gothicising" Westminster-bridge is given up. Were we to append the prices to works reviewed, each instance would be charged with an assessment duty.

"A Shoter's-hill Farmer" is thanked; but we scarcely see how his plan of illustration could be executed.

"Tweed, Cork."—Some large work on Scottish costume, lately published in Edinburgh, would doubtless assist our correspondent.

"An Old Sea Hog," Oriental Club, is thanked. The hint may be serviceable.

"J. Z."—In Germany, Denmark, and Sweden, holly has been, for many ages considered a holy plant; and its name in England is stated, by one of our earliest writers on plants, to have been corrupted from holy. Still this heavenly emblem is worthy of being at a Christmas. Mistletoe was held sacred by the Druids; but Mr. Brand thinks it never to have been put up in churches, but by mistake or ignorance of the customs, it being a heathenish and perfidious plant, and therefor unsuited to Christian uses.

"J. W. R. T."—The present number concludes our Vol. III., title-page and index to which will be ready next week

"C. O." is thanked for the acknowledgements for his well-intentioned papers which we have not room to print: besides, we lose no opportunity of calling the attention of the benevolent to the cause our correspondent so humanely espouses.

"Caduceus.—Has our correspondent a portrait?

"A Subscriber' is thanked for the proffered loan of the old print, but we have no opportunity.

"A Subscriber,' Camborne, Cornwall.—The most sensible little book we know of is, Twelve Golden Rules for Cigar-smokers, 86, Fleet-street.

"J. C." Newbury.—When the proof appears, we will decide.

"P. G." Leeds.—We regret again to decline the enclosed contributions.

"Postage." The postmaster of Waltham Cross has invented and patented a receiving-box, for letters, which is so constructed that the identical penny put in at the same time with a certain letter, will be found upon the letter to which it belongs; thus dispensing with any person to receive the postage.

"Gertrude."—The postage of a letter to Australia is 8d. under half an ounce; of a newspaper, 1d.; postage of letter to Canada, is. 2d.; Newspaper, free.

"Ernato."—The builder of the New Royal Exchange is Mr. T. Jackson, of Pimlico, and not Henry, Grissell and Peto, as stated in our last.

"P. 404.' 2nd col.—William Wallace is not attached to the American Legation, as we were informed by the writer of the sketch of Jockoist.

"Chas. Bergh." The games will all appear in this paper, and we believe, in the January Number of "The Chess Players Chronicle.

"J. B."—The variation is good, but we have not room for it.

"A. M.—You cannot checkmate with King and Knight alone, against King —it is a draw.

"Clericus Delgovitæ," received.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1843.

On the front page of our paper will be found engravings and a description of the Central Refuge for the Destitute in Playhouse-yard. It will inform the reader of the nature of the institution—and of the charitable purposes to which it is generally applied—although it has failed, in hard seasons of inclemency and poverty, to meet the exigencies of distress and wretchedness against which it was intended benevolently to provide. Destitution has latterly grown among us, from the prevalence of commercial depression (now happily subsiding before a cheerful activity in trade) and from the painful operation of the New Poor-law; but, on the other hand, the startling pictures of it which have been thrust upon the gaze of the community, have forced the good-heartedness of mankind to take cognizance of a too-abounding misery, and have in a great measure awakened the rich to a sense of their duty to the poor. One beautiful result of the new-dawned enthusiasm to commiserate and relieve poverty and destitution, has exhibited itself in the many ready contributions to our offices of police; but another, more prominent, and still more remarkable, is displayed in the project set on foot by some philanthropic noblemen and gentlemen to erect permanent institutions of the order to which our engravings belong—to put them to more extensive uses—endow them in a more comprehensive spirit—and set them up as landmarks of the City's charity—as places of certain relief and refuge for our wandering poor. At the first blush of this benevolent design we greatly applauded it—and we greatly applaud it still. Nor do we the less admire it because we find it advocated in more phases than one, and taking several forms of charity according to the several views of its enthusiastic practitioners.

Upon this subject a letter from Lord Ranelagh has been going the round of the papers and attracting much notice and regard. Its project is that of "Permanent Places of Refuge," as we have just spoken of them. The epistle itself breathes the true Christian spirit of good intention—which there is also an ardent desire to carry out—and we are not far from the belief that the plan is nearly as good as the intention, although [illegible] by a discretionary application of circumstances to seasons and events. We, however, regard the project in that enlarged spirit only which contemplates a rural as well as a metropolitan application of its principles. The institution of places of refuge—urban and suburban—in country as well as in town—particularly in the densely populated cities of the provinces or their outskirts—so that suffering, wretchedness, and miserable want could not travel anywhere and be "a-thirst, a-hungered, and a-cold" without finding the consolation of some temporary home. But while the scheme should be on a large scale, we would not so have the institutions. No palaces of poverty—no large emporiums for the congregation of misery and vice; but scattered relief-houses, few and far between, set up by the charity of the community against times of want and trial, and not as hives for the lazy, or for those who would convert destitution into an indulgence instead of a grief. We cannot but think that the idea of confining the size of such establishments and of spreading their number through populous rural districts—and in the environs as well as the heart of the metropolis—would soon obviate the emigration of country paupers into London upon a principle of systematic abuse of a charitable system; and we would, above all things, enjoin that the regulations of the refuges should be such as to meet the sturdy insolence of imposition by the powers of closing them from time to time, according to the circumstances of the locality, and the contingencies of the moment. But with a large amount of deliberative precaution, perfecting itself by practice and experience, this management, we think, might be so organised as to obviate any nuisance to society, and to make the institutions blessings and benefits to the houseless and starving poor.

We know there is difficulty in the administration of this sort of half private, half public benevolence; but the Poor-law has proved that great also is the hazard of public legislation; and at a time when our legal system is as bad as it has proved to be, and the tendency towards private charity so strongly elicited by the palpable destitution of so many thousands of the poor, we cannot bring ourselves to rebuke measures of relief like that under consideration—propounded in a sincere spirit, by generous natures—promoted with industry, and carried out as we hope to find them all, without any very mischievous effects—none certainly sufficient to counteract the good achieved.

At the same time we are alive to the dangers which so forcibly strike a contemporary as likely to arise from a too exclusive direction of general charity to the ends proposed; as well as from a misdirection of the means of relief provided, into the formation of a permanent incubus upon the good man's heart and purse. We want no pauper Babel in London to attract all the world into its capacious maw; and we can see all the frightful consequences of making such a vortex of poverty permanent, or indeed of opening it at all unless it be spread in branches throughout the empire; to relieve everywhere, and nowhere to be abused. The sterling common sense of the observations which the Times has made upon this head deserves careful attention.

It should be borne in mind that the class of sufferers to whom Lord Ranelagh adverts so essentially want to be may call an accidental class. It does not consist of persons born in London, who have lived and worked all their days in London, but of persons congregated from every part of the empire, allured by every and by no object, engaged, in every part, in no occupation, of all modes and habits of life, of all characters and of none, the martyrs of groundless hopes and unmerited wrongs, the victims of vice, or of disease, or of mere misfortune—a community, in short, the members of which have nothing in common but the remembrance of past struggles and the sense of present woe, to whom London has been but the arena in which they might contend, or the market in which they might successful lecturer in London; none more wretched than that of him who, in addition to friendlessness and ill-success, feels the keen wound of famine or disease: but, whilst we admit this, we affirm that to collect large funds to build big houses of refuge, to be kept open through out the year, is to increase the mischief and the misery beyond all limits. Already the competition in every department of mental or mechanical skill—the emulation consequent on crowd in numbers and enlarged facilities of instruction—and the feverish restlessness which ever characterizes an age of refinement—already have these and other causes brought London with a dense and motley population of needy and dreamy adventurers. From the wide-spread causes of the "unemployable," "the dissatisfied," and "the unsteady," the metropolis receives a yearly augmentation of fresh recruits. Hence the increase of want and suffering which offends or shuns the eye of observation. Hence multiplied applications for relief, multiplied disappointments, and, alas! write it we must—multiplied deaths! This is a sad case as and, it is. It needs, however, not a prophet's gift to foresee that it would become far more multiplied, were any inducement held out, in the shape of a permanent provision to the vagabond restlessness and indefinite speculation of the whole empire—if it became known throughout England that there was a certain relief food, and shelter, prepared for all those who felt a momentary impulse to "go and try their luck in London."

But here we pause, and would remark that our suggestion of distributing the refuges would have the effect of averting from London the character of a focus for the want and beggary of the counties; while it would greatly extend the principle of Lord Ranelagh's plan, and diffuse its benevolence with a more unbounded humanity, and a less confined and corruptible effect.

A FAMILY SONG FOR THE NEW YEAR.

A happy year! Oh! father dear!
(Happy as we are now!)
To shed its sunshine o'er thy head,
Its bliss upon thy brow!
Your honoured love upon your child
Still fondly lavished be,
For that is bliss—oh! father dea.
And sunshine too to me!
And let me pour some tender strain
Of joy upon thine ear,
And wish thee, o'er and o'er again,
A happy, happy year!

A happy year! Oh! mother dear!
Happy as you are kind
My foolish eyes in that fond wish
With trembling tears grow blind!
For as the sweet past bids my heart
With grateful memories thrill,
Mother! I weep for very joy
Because I have you still!
But tears can never dim the love
I warmly cherish here
While praying for you, from above,
A happy, happy year!

A happy year! Oh! brother dear!
Happy as you are bold—
Brave heart!—bright youth!—we used to be
Glad play-fellows of old!
Now you are grown a father's hope,
Mother's and sister's pride,
And when kind Heaven may bless you
In the beauty of your bride,

May her pure, warm, enduring love,
Than outward charm more dear,
Wish thee—like me—from day to day,
A happy, happy year!

A happy year! Oh! Sister dear!
Happy as you are fair;
Take, sweetest girl, affection's gift,
Tho' neither rich nor rare.
A watch!—to tell what hours are worth
As old Time runs his tether,
All valued by the happy ones
That we have passed together!
And, Sister! let us ne'er forget,
As o'er Life's sea we steer,
To wish each other, near or far,
A happy, happy year!

A happy, happy, happy year!
To one who, though away,
Fills all my dreaming heart by night,
And all my thoughts by day!
As faithful now they cling to him
As when he came to woo,
Oh! Father dear! you gave me leave
To love him –and I do!
My lover!—speed him safely home!
Thank Heaven he is so dear!
His coming will make this indeed
A happy, happy year!

(We much regret that from Paris of Mr Balfe's music for this song in time for our present number, but hope to present it to our readers in the next.)

THE COURT AND HAUT TON.

WINDSOR, Sunday.—Her Majesty and Prince Albert, the ladies and gentlemen of the royal suite, and the household, attended Divine service in her Majesty's private chapel. The Honourable and Rev. C. Leslie Courtenay officiated, and preached from the 4th chapter of Philippians and the 5th verse. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent and her lady in waiting attended Divine service in the parish church

On Saturday his Excellency Baron Brunow and Count Nesselrode took their departure from the Castle. The Earl of Aberdeen and the Lord Bishop of London also took leave and returned to town.

MONDAY.—The Queen and Prince Albert, the ladies and gentlemen of the royal suite and the household, attended Divine service on Christmas morning in the private chapel within the Castle. The Hon. and Rev. C L. Courtenay officiated. Her Majesty and Prince Albert enjoyed their usual early walk in the precincts of the Castle. In the afternoon her Majesty and his Royal Highness left the Castle in a pony phaeton, the Prince driving, for an airing. On the return of the royal pair, her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert very unexpectedly paid a visit to the Royal Kitchen, for the purpose of inspecting several splendid joints of beef previously to their being cooked, the produce of beasts fattened upon the farm of the Prince Consort in Windsor Great Park. Several Cochin China pullets, turkeys, and other poultry intended for the Royal table, were also inspected by the Queen and the Prince, and greatly admired. The banquet took place in the grand dining-room. The following had the honour of dining with her Majesty and the Prince Consort: The Duchess of Kent, the Marchioness of Douro, Lady Fanny Howard, Hon. Eleanor Stanley, Hon. Clementina Hamilton, Dowager Lady Lyttelton, Lord Rivers, Captain Nelson Hood, Hon. Caroline Lyttelton, Maj. General Wemyss, Col. Bouverie, the Hon. and Rev. Charles Leslie Courtenay, Mr. and the Hon. Mrs. Anson, the Hon. C. A. Murray, and Dr. Pretorius. The dish of dish, according to the "good old English custom," was a splendid baron of beef, nearly five feet Long and between two and three feet in width, and weighing 180 lbs. There was likewise placed upon one of the side tables the hump of the Brahmin ox presented to her Majesty by Viscount Combermere, and slaughtered at the royal dairy in the early part of last month. The hump, weighing 28 lbs. which was cured after the most approved fashion, under the immediate superintendence of the royal purveyor, possessed a most delightful flavour, and was greatly admired by her Majesty and guests.

TUESDAY.—In consequence of the unfavourable state of the weather neither her Majesty nor the Royal Family went out. His Royal Highness Prince Albert went for the sport of shooting in the Royal preserves. His Royal Highness was attended by Lord Rivers, Colonel Bouverie, Mr G E Anson, Captain the Hon Nelson Hood, and Captain Francis Seymour. For 6-Marsha, his Grace the Duke of Wellington, was also present His Royal Highness was attended by Major General Wemyss, Colonel Bouverie, Mr G. E. Anson, and Captain F. Seymour. The game found runs, the sport finished to the satisfaction of Rodon. The royal and illustrious party then returned to the Castle. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent joined the royal circle at dinner.

THE LORD LYTTELTON.—The remains of this venerable and gallant nobleman were removed at an early hour on Wednesday morning from his lordship's late residence, in Stratton street, for interment in the family vault at Melwem, near Sandham, Surrey.

The Right Hon. George and Mrs. Dawson left town on Saturday on a visit to Sir Robert and Lady Peel, at Drayton Manor, Staffordshire Viscount and Viscountess Jocelyn are staying at Drayton Manor.

The Right Hon. W E. Gladstone left town on Saturday for Hawarden Castle, North Wales

The Chancellor of the Exchequer left town on Saturday for Cambridge University. The Hon. C. E Law, M.P., also left town on Saturday for Cambridge University.

VISIT OF THE COURT TO CLAREMONT.—It is expected that her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert will visit Claremont shortly after new year's day, where the Court will probably remain for a period of four or five days, for the purpose of enabling the Prince Consort to enjoy the sport of shooting over the well stocked preserves of his Majesty the King of the Belgians. The game upon his Majesty's manor at Claremont has been most carefully preserved during the whole of the season, and is this year more than usually plentiful, especially with reference to pheasants and hares. There are, also, immense numbers of rabbits in the immediate vicinity of Claremont, and a very fair sprinkling of wood cocks Should a favourable change take place in the weather, it is not improbable that the Royal Family will accompany her Majesty and the Prince

NORFOLK.—One of those diabolical outrages on the peace of society occurred in Neeton, on the night of the 15th, on the premises of a little occupier of but a few acres of land, and the produce of three acres of wheat, two of bar ey, and a-half of hay, were destroyed. The dastardly spirit of revenge, on the part of a neighbour, who is now in custody, is believed to be the cause of this calamity.

HERTFORDSHIRE.—A fire took place, a few days since, at Wigmo re Hall, near Luton, the property of Samuel Wortley, Esq. The house was saved, and the ricks also escaped, although both were in imminent danger. Two horses refused to yield to all the efforts made to remove them from the stable, and they perished in the flames. A fat pig and some poultry also suffered the same fate from the want of assistance to remove them in time No account can be given of the origin of this calamity, except that it was clearly not accidental. The property is insured in the County Fire Office

FIRE AT SIR W. CHATTON'S NEW MANSION.—Early last Saturday morning, as the workmen employed in Sir William Chatton's new mansion, near Croft were proceeding to their work, they observed part of the house filled with smoke, arising from fire that broke out in a back staircase. With great presence of mind, they immediately ascended to the roof, and, uncovering part of it, poured down water into the caterers in sufficient quantity to extinguish the fire before any material damage had been done. It is much to be feared that this fire originated in malice, as no carelessness can be attributed to the workmen, nor was there any fire or chimney near the spot. Some persons residing near the south heard the barking of dogs about two o'clock in the morning, when it is supposed the miscreants were engaged in their fiendlike work

THE HORNCHURCH FIRES.—Two prisoners, who had been several times remanded, on suspicion of being the incendiaries, named Wright and Lincoln, have been committed for trial at the assizes.

BUCKS.—The proclamation of a reward of £50 for the apprehension and conviction of the parties who attempted to fire Shipmeadow workhouse, about a month ago, has had its desired effect, and two young men, George Fulford and Tie mas Barber, were, on Thursday last, fully committed for trial at the assizes. Each, in his voluntary examination, charged the crime upon the other.

BRISTOL.—A special general meeting of the shareholders in the Bristol and Exeter Railway was held last week, at the White Lion Hotel, Broad street, Bristol, to take into consideration a plan for securing the completion of the railway from Exeter to Plymouth, and to determine whether the authority of the proprietors should be given thereto. A circular had been previously issued, in which the directors previously recommended the adoption of such a measure, and laid out the plan into immediate effect. The meeting was very fully attended, the large room being crowded with shareholders, many of them from a great distance. A strong opposit n to the proposed scheme was manifested, and a great deal of warmth and excitement prevailed. The sum proposed to be raised by the company was £900,000, being only one-half of the required capital. After a long and ony discussion, in which a good deal of inflammatory feeling was evinced, a show of hands was ultimately taken, when there appeared a large majority against the resolution of the directors, and the proposition was accordingly withdrawn. The thanks of the meeting were given by acclamation to Mr Richards for his impartial conduct in the chair, and the meeting separated about five o'clock.

EDINBURGH.—CIVIC OFFICIAL ATTENDANCE AT CHURCH.—The Lords of the First Division on Saturday unanimously passed the Bill of suspension and interdict against the recent resolution of the Council prohibiting any of their body from officially attending divine service. On Sunday forenoon several of the Town Council, with Bailie Urquhart, the senior Magistrate, at their head, proceeded to the High Church, their robes, and attended by the civic officers and all the usual insignia. Immediately after the interlocutor of the Court was announced, a meeting of the Town Council took place, in the Council Chamber, the Lord Provost in the Chair, when it was resolved to resume the old practice of going to church in municipal state, leaving it, as before, optional with the members to be present or not, as they felt inclined

SOUTH WALES. DEATH BY DROWNING, OF A WITNESS AGAINST REBECCAITES.—Considerable excitement has been caused by the circumstance of the finding of the body of Mr Thomas Thomas, of Cwmdwr, in the river Brecha, at Caeddi, near Brecha. It will be remembered that some time since, Mr. Thomas gave information against some neighbouring farmers' sons for a riot and assault upon him, while under the guise of Rebeccaites. On Monday their father, who was attended Carmarthen in order to give his evidence, and on his return to his home, he found it in a blaze. On Tuesday morning Mr Thomas s corpse was found in the river Brechfaedd, which is a very small stream, having a rocky bed. From the previous occurrences that had taken place, suspicion was excited that foul play had been used, and that he came to his death by unfair means. His body was in the water, which at no part was more than 14 inches deep, and the head and one of the arms did not appear to have been in the water at all. There was a severe contusion on the left side of his forehead, but this was the only mark of violence. We have heard that a blacksmith in the Brecha has two sons against both of whom warrants are out for stealing some sheep of Mr. Thomas's. These young men have absconded. On Monday their father, who was extremely ill and unable to move from his own home, in order to give evidence. On his return to come to some arrangement respecting his sons' affair Mr. Thomas called on him in the course of the day, and left his house about two o'clock in the afternoon He was never seen alive afterwards. Near the same rocky bed From the previous occurrences that had taken place, suspicion was excited that foul play had been used, and that he came to his death by unfair means. His body was in the water, which at no part was more than 14 inches deep, and the head and one of the arms did not appear to have been in the water at all. There was a severe contusion on the left side of his forehead, but this was the only mark of violence. We have heard that a blacksmith in the Brecha has two sons against both of whom warrants are out for stealing some sheep of Mr. Thomas's. These young men have absconded. On Monday their father, who was extremely ill and unable to move from his own home, in order to give evidence. On his return to his home, he found it in a blaze. On Tuesday morning Mr Thomas s corpse was found in the river Brechfaedd, which is a very small stream, having a rocky bed.

THE CHRISTMAS PANTOMIMES.

SCENE FROM "HARLEQUIN AND KING PEPIN," AT DRURY-LANE THEATRE.

THE CHRISTMAS PANTOMIMES.

Dulce est desipere in loco.

The theatrical Christmas festivities have commenced,

"Not wrapt in snow and icy cold
"As Christmas used to be of old,"

but in such a genial temperature that we might almost look for swallows and may-flies—buttercups and daisies! The joyous season of Christmas, Sir Roger de Coverley observes, "could not have been contrived to take place at a better time," but this must have been said by the good-natured knight when the annual frost paid its visit to the palace and to the cot, and chilled everything but the warm hearts that in self-defence

"Made inward mirth a shield 'gainst outward cold."

A pantomime or harlequinade, (for in England, notwithstanding the cavillings of some over-nice distinctionists the two words are synonymous) is a source of "infinite mirth;" and we envy not those who have so far forgotten the once easily excitable laughter of their childhood as to scowl or sneer contemptuously at the "illusions of the magic wand" that can

With a slight (sleight)
Convey men's interest and right
From Sules's pocket into Nokes's
As easily as Hocus Pocus!

or not admire the philosophy of poor Pantaloon under all his unmerited insults and misfortunes, which excite nobody's commiseration but his, the arch-causer of them—Master Clown,

"Whose pity after all is mockery!"

No!—no—a good pantomime well got up is an excellant thing, and is as naturally identified with Christmas revelry, as roast beef and plum pudding themselves, are to little boys and girls "just let loose from school," and by no means an unacceptable offering to "children of a larger growth." We will proceed to give as ample a sketch of the different pantomimes as our space will allow.

DRURY LANE.

After the opera of "Der Freyschütz," (which, on the occasion, was performed with additional accompaniments whose scores are too elaborate to describe), the new pantomime, entitled "Harlequin and King Pepin; or, Valentine and Orson," was produced, on Tuesday last. The plot of the original story is sufficiently well known: our business is to show how far it has been mutilated and infringed upon under pantomime license.

The subject of the opening seems to have been conceived in the shape of a parody upon Thomson's "Castle of Indolence," but is not carried out quite poetically, or even effectively. What a doughty pantomime knight Sir Industry would have made! yet we cannot but admire the idea of producing Industry from a bee-hive, and approve of the manner in which the little fairy (which, by-the-bye, she ought not to be) silences the uproar produced in the scho ol of Idleness by her magical presence.

The change of scene here is very good—the rail-ro ads, the windmills, &c., are proofs of the progress of industry, but we confess we do not understand the string of charity children with the beadle at their head.—After awhile the Geniuses make an arrangement that two babes—Valentine and Orson—are to be separately educated by them, not, however, with any view to rival the exertions of modern philanthropists,

Whose maxims are much more to sw ay than teach.

These conveniently-found babes are accordingly consigned to the care of a dry nurse, one Mr. Blandivian, who is so far neglectful of his charge as to lay them down to sleep in a forest, where a selection is made of the genius, one being carried off by a bear, and the other by Pepin. Our engraving shows the finding of the child by the king—

A hunting king, who strode that way.

On this, Old Time is introduced as chronicler or chorus, like Go wer in "Henry V.," and kindly informs us that he has been going at a quicker rate than usual, for we are to suppose the lapse of eighteen years in thirty seconds, between the former scene and the present. The modern cut of his coat, and the appendage of a Dutch clock, were extremely ludicrous, and excited much mirth.

Valentine being now full grown at court, and Orson also in the woods, the two brothers become distinguished - each a hero in his way, and in each other's way too; for the wild man having committed vast depredations on the subjects of King Pepin, is encountered by his unknown brother, and though somewhat more than a match for him vi et armis is ultimately overcome by the help of Bacchus, the wild man having been a teetotaller "from his youth upwards." A reward having been offered for his apprehension, a certain Prince Haufrey finds him, and taking advantage of "his unconscious state," brings him prisoner to court, where he does a world of funny things. In a short time he becomes tame, and so does the story,—and then comes the usual transformation, with the noisy music and incessant action.

In the harlequinade there is nothing particular to praise or censure Some changes were cleverly performed, and some cleverly imagined —for instance, an easy chair becoming a bed of thorns, a barrel organ, changed into the singing mouse, and a few others, not forgetting the, plaster figures of Queen Victoria and King Louis Philippe. The finale, representing the last glories of Nelson, with the representation of his column in Trafalgar-square, was about the most effective feature in the piece. We must not omit to give our unqualified praise to

SCENE FROM "THE FAIR ONE WITH THE GOLDEN LOCKS," AT THE HAYMARKET THEATRE.

SCENE FROM "HARLEQUIN BLUE BEARD," AT THE ADELPHI THEATRE.

Mr. W. H. Payne, who, in the part of Orson, was most admirable. His parody dance would have delighted Carlotta Grisi herself. The department in which appropriateness of design and thorough knowledge of effect were combined, was, as usual, under the unrivalled surveillance of Mr. Blanire. We regret that the house was not such as we have seen of old.

HAYMARKET.

A fairy burlesque by Mr. Planché, entitled "The Fair One with the Golden Locks," a subject taken from a comparatively unknown source, was produced at this popular house of entertainment on Tuesday last, and from its reception we cannot but augur that the golden locks will be attached to golden coffers. As in all things of this kind something out of nature is looked for, we have accordingly a haughty princess, who requires of the ambassador of the aspirant to her hand the following pleasant performances: first, to pick up a ring from the bottom of a dangerous river; next to subdue and kill a redoubtable ogre; and lastly, to fetch "the water of beauty" from a fountain that is fiercely defended by a guard of dragons.

Having been zoologically philanthropic, unlike "the hare with many friends," some of his brute acquaintances turn out to be grateful and serviceable to him. A fish finds the ring for him—a crow de-occulates a giant, to whom he is opposed, and an owl kindly supplies him with the desired magic water. The princess, as in promise bound, marries her royal suitor, but, king as he is, like some others, he proves to be but a "sorry Benedict," and at last effects his exit by a certain mistake of a lotion, making room for his young champion, who, from the first, seemed to have found favour in the fair one's eyes. Miss P. Horton made her first appearance these two years as Prince Graceful, and looked and acted, and sang most charmingly. The piece was decidedly successful, but would be much improved by a little curtailment.

ADELPHI.

The pantomime at this ever zealous house is indebted for its subject to a story familiar to most of our earliest recollections, and therefore can be simply dismissed, sans ceremonie (with the exception of some politesse due to the new adaptation), as the great Blue Beard, who has enlisted the attention of the nursery for some scores of years. But first let us do justice to the play-bill, which contains the following curiosities of literature: "characters in the poem" (Blue Beard, a great Jack Daw, in love with the soft sexes (!!) If the author of the poem meant "hard-hearted and soft-headed" as he subsequently alludes to, all right and good—we have no objection to his subdivisional classification, but really, on a prima facie view of the matter, it is rather puzzling to comprehend.

We fear that the day of pantomime (which our friend Hood would call the Dey of All-giers!), has nearly reached its evening's close. Dexterity now holds the place once occupied by Humour, and Wonder usurps

"The heart's best throne—Delight!"

THE CHRISTMAS PANTOMIMES.

Wieland, the human sprite, made his first appearance as Harlequin, but the monotony of Harlequin's business did not afford him sufficient opportunity to exhibit his Box-like quaintness and humour. Unrivalled T. Mathews, as Clown, reminded us pleasantly of old Joe, not so much by resemblance as rivalry. His singing was excellent, but the duet with that vocal eccentricity was not so good as the one we have heard ere now, betw een poor Durus et and

"An oyster crost in love!"

at Covent Garden, in its "high and palmy days!" of yore.

Miss Bullen was a most gra ceful Columbine, and Mr. Johnstone (as Pantaloon)

"Totter'd most gracefully, as far as age
Would give permission to his shaken limbs!"

(Of course, our quotation does not allude to Mr. Johnstone's time of life, but to the fidelity with which he assumed the character.)

In the last scene some lady, ambitious of representing Royalty as Elliston ever was (when in the part of George IV., he said "Bless you, my people!") appeared as Queen Victoria, and counterfeited a sovereign extremely well. The house was well attended, and no doubt will continue to be so, for—it deserves public patronage.

SCENE FROM "HARLEQUIN GRAMMAR," AT THE SURREY THEATRE.

ST LEY'S

The pantomime people at this very popular theatre chose a somewhat ticklish subject for their annual reunion on Tuesday night. "Harlequin Grammar; or, Lindley Murray and A E I O U," a title not very suggestive of the Christmas frolics of Harlequin, Clown, and Pantaloon. Nevertheless, the experiment was entirely successful—and deservedly so. The manner in which this is effected in the introduction reflects great credit on the producer of the pantomime, and also on the management. There is much simple humour in the plan and dialogue, and much brilliancy and cleverness in the getting up. In the opening we see "the magnificent Palace of Ignorance, Pride, and Vanity," where the great "demon king," Ignorance himself, is seated on his throne, surrounded by his votaries, Vice, Indolence, Folly, Envy, &c. Each individual represents a vice, and certainly the grotesque masks in which the heads of the figures were enveloped are among the best we have ever seen in entertainments of the sort. King Ignorance receives a shock in the very stronghold of his opaque security—he is to be superseded in his doctorial authority over childhood, whether first or second, by no less a person than Lindley Murray. Hereupon his majesty orders grammar to be stopped in every school. He then departs for earth in a "brilliant carriage of state," driven by Pride, as his coachman, and attended by Revenge and Scorn. From this, the dark side of the picture, we are immediately transferred to the presence of Morning, at whose appearance Night, the friend and abettor of Ignorance, sees the propriety of immediately absconding. But more brilliant even than Morning herself is the Fairy Queen "Orthography," who appears directly afterwards in a sudden burst of light. This excellent lady (personified with smiling ease by Miss E. Terry) determines "to secure the earth abundance of instructive mirth for the year ensuing." Lindley Murray is the magician through whom she is to work out this grand result of her fairy labours. Morning (who rows in the same boat with Ort h ography) also pays a visit to the same spot, and their presence awakens and arouses from their several resting-places Lindley Murray, Æs op, and old Cocker, who here come in a quaint and pleasant shape.

SCENE FROM "THE MAGIC MIRROR," AT THE PRINCESS'S THEATRE.

We have not space to detail the transformati on of the pantomime characters A, E, I, O, U. The introduction w as very well got up and well played, the scenery being new and brilli a nt, the dresses very beautiful and characteristic, and the acting of the different characters very grotesque and comic. The harlequinade itself was about as good as such things now are. Mr. Harvey was an agile harlequin, Mr. Hawkins a sufficiently senile pantaloon, and Mr. Fuller a tolerably funny clown. A Mr. Still, who played a fifth character (Splinter-spine), astonished the audience by some of his feats of strength and agility. Taken as a whole, the pantomime is one of the best we have seen at this theatre.

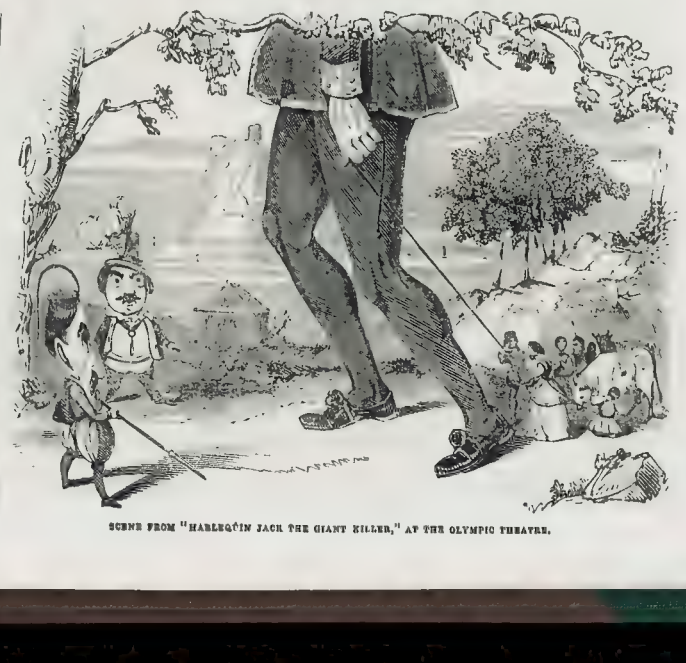
PRINCESS'S.

A new extravaganza from the punning pen of Mr. G. à Beckett, entitled "The Magic Mirror, or, the Hall of Statues," was produced at this house on Tuesday night, and met with a most favorable reception. It is not a pantomime, but a most amusing dramatic effusion sui generis;—plot it hath not, but in compensation it abounds with funny incidents and jokes, strung together most amusingly. The scene is laid in China, which affords the author ample opportunity to indulge his satirical muse in the nomenclature of his Dramatis Personæ. Bedford, as a prime minister, rejoicing in the name of Poo-poo, was in his happiest vein of drollery, and Mrs. Grattan as Sing-song, the young Emperor of China, not only acted well, but sang too. Oxberry was most amusing as a sprite named Hi-zhi-ki, and Mr. and Mde. Gilbert added considerably to the effect of the scene by some excellent dancing à la Tartare, in a ball-room fête given in the palace of a king, with the plebeian title of Tug-rag. Why did he not have an attendant of consequence distinguished by the appellative of Bob-tail?

The piece was well got up, and after not a little pruning, which it will well bear, no doubt will have a run.

OLYMPIC.

The pantomime at this house is entitled "Jack the Giant Killer," &c. It abounds with numerous jokes, practical as well as mental (if the latter word be applicable to parodies upon grace, as well as the parts of speech), and cannot fail to please all those who like to see ridiculed that which they cannot understand. The scenery—particularly the opening, representing the Golden Palace of the Gnomes,—does great credit to the artist, and the machinery, tricks, changes, &c., were very smoothly managed. Au reste, there was nothing remarkable, if we may except Hartland's Pantaloon, which was a bit of the genuine good old school. The gentlemen before the curtain were certainly a little out of order.



SCENE FROM "HARLEQUIN JACK THE GIANT KILLER," AT THE OLYMPIC THEATRE.

COVENT GARDEN.

Of a certainty M. Jullien is an extraordinary man: as manager, chef d'orchestre, solo performer, or general tactician, we doubt if we have ever seen his equal. Wherever he presides, good luck attends upon him—whatever he undertakes, flourishes most successfully—and where preceding speculators have soon made bankrupts of their hopes, he in less time has contrived, upon the very locale of their misfortunes, to amass wealth, and gain the highest popularity. As his compatriot poet says of Cæsar

Par cent chemins divers il court à la fortune:
Il nous nécessaire,

but we fear that, as Sura replies, "il nous sera fatal!" for after his Promenade Concerts, what will become of the Philharmonic, the Societa Armonica, the British Musicians, or in fact any other réunion of instrumental first-rate ability?—for the component parts, the principal features of those distinguished orchestras, are to be nightly observed in the service of M. Jullien; and how can this be supposed to attract elsewhere at eight or ten concerts during the season—some of them got up on a system which does anything but improve or encourage the musical art, and for the straight-laced enjoyment of which we are obliged to pay a thousand per cent. more than the same material costs elsewhere? The question is a difficult one to decide; but we incline to think that the system of M. Jullien will do more to familiarize the general ear with good music than those societies which, while they profess to be liberal, at the same time exhibit a narrow-mindedness (particularly in regard to national improvement) which in some instances has been disgusting. We, however, would willingly dispense with such incongruities as the "Pastorale," and the "Scotch Quadrilles"—the overture to "Der Freyschütz," and that arch-fiend of all cacophony, the Highland bagpipe, in the same programme.

The theatre has been most tastefully fitted up, and the mildness of the season permits the exhibition of many curious shrubs and plants, which under other circumstances would present

A mockery of Spring in Winter's reign.

The house on Tuesday was extremely well attended.

ROYAL RESPECT TO GENIUS.—Titian's pencil was picked up by the King of Spain, to the no small surprise of his courtiers. In our own days we have an instance of a Sovereign also taking genius really by the hand, and of feeling himself "still more ennobled" by a contact with that which had the seal of the divinity upon it. At a concert lately given at Stuttgardt by Liszt, the King of Wurtemberg, in a transport of admiration, left his seat and shook the "Briareus" of head as well as hand, by one of his hands most cordially. As is his custom, Liszt gave the profits of his second concert to a public institution.

VALEDICTORY VERSES TO THE OLD YEAR!

December, undertaker of the year,
Doth bury it fantastically—now
In snow and a sampling ice—anon
In summer mockery!—There is no charm
To bind this careless freezer to his duty! Old Poet.

Farewell! farewell—old year!
Thou'st been unkind to me—
But still,
As we shall ne'er again be near,
I feel all lingering both from thee
To part—the tear
Which my retracing eyes doth fill
Can show the pangs of "doom'd to sever"
From anything, when 'tis for ever!

Farewell! farewell, old year!
Thou'st been unkind to me—
But still
Many a blossom did'st thou rear,
Fruit—promises, on every tree
I wander'd near
And though their ripeness did not fill
I journey'd on and thought their seeming
Was truth itself in my fond dreaming!

Farewell—farewell—old year!
Thou'st been unkind to me—
But still—
Not much of murmur shalt thou hear
For I will e'er grateful be,
For something dear,
(Giv'n perhaps against thy will)—
A luxury of Love's best sweetness,
Whose only fault I found was—fleetness!

Farewell!—farewell -old year!
To part thee costs a bitter tear!

W.

LITERATURE.

OLD ENGLAND. By CHARLES KNIGHT. Part I.

In this work, Mr. Knight proposes to illustrate "the Royal, Ecclesiastical, Baronial, Municipal, and Popular Antiquities" of our country; the whole to form two splendid folio volumes. The portion before us contains upwards of 100 engravings, for the most part, assembled from works previously issued by the author; such excellent illustrations have been executed expressly for this Part, as those of the Richborough and Pevensey ruins, and the "illuminated" page view of the Coronation chair, the latter executed by Mr. Knight's patent process. The engravings have been selected with very considerable judgment, especially for the purpose of illustrating our national antiquities by analogy in the comparison of the productions of centuries long past with those of the present hour: for example, the British war-chariot placed beside the Welsh agricultural cart. Judging from the text before us, the commentary will not be merely réchauffé: on the contrary, the author has nicely blended originality with his antiquarianism, and highly poetic feeling with his love of fact: his account of Stonehenge, "the most remarkable monument of antiquity in our island, if we take into account its comparative preservation as well as its grandeur;" and of Sarum plain, "the cradle of English civilization;" is altogether the most rational and entertaining view of these celebrated remains that we have ever seen: the tact displayed, too, in rendering the engravings subsidiary to the writer's inferences, is likewise admirable: the account of Abury, too, is very attractively written; and there is an earnest eloquence in the conclusions that must carry conviction to many a doubting mind. Yet, the text is, by no means, in common parlance, "heavy;" for within the sixteen folio pages before us, we have a most complete précis of the British and Roman periods of our history, identifying the shadowy forms of the past with the substantialities of the present, interspersed with observations that occasionally rise to the philosophy of history. We could quote many a passage in proof of this eulogistic note, anxious as we are to do justice to the time evidently bestowed by the author upon his subject, that, although the majority of the engravings have already appeared, the text is essentially original, and is, altogether, a masterly performance. One of its beneficial influences will be, we trust, to clear away much of the misty ignorance about our early history, especially with regard to Cæsar's share in it: for the majority of our popular histories of England commence with the invasion of Cæsar, as if he had been the creator of the country.

IRELAND BEFORE AND AFTER THE UNION WITH GREAT BRITAIN. By MONTGOMERY MARTIN, ESQ. Parts II., III., IV.

A mass of statistical information respecting Ireland, such as this work contains, must be very acceptable at the present time. The subjects here treated of are commerce, shipping, and manufactures; population and education; internal improvement and social progress.

A VISIT TO THE WILD WEST. Nickisson.

An English traveller's sketch of the Emerald Isle, during the past autumn, and, apparently, a reprint of a magazine paper: some of the sketches are interesting enough.

THE ILLUMINATED MISCELLANY OF PROSE AND VERSE. Francis.

A collection in prose and verse, printed in red and blue, and we sup pose, on that account, termed "illuminated."

FIVE PLAYS.

These are "Gawvim Honor," a tragedy, by the author of "Waldenburg." "Marion; or The Page," a play. "The Robber's Cave, or Four-horned Moon," a drama. "Theresa, the Maid of the Tyrol," a tragedy, by W. L. Thomas. "Marguerite," a tragedy, by the author of the "Shepherd's Well." We have not space to examine these productions: there are germs of promise in each of them, and it is no condemnation to add that they belong to "the unacted drama."

GENEALOGY SIMPLIFIED. By ARCHIBALD BARRINGTON, M.D.

In this work the author has applied genealogy to the illustration of British history, in a novel and attractive manner. The volume is subsidiary to a chart, in which the genealogy and heraldry are combined with illustrations of different styles of architecture which have prevailed in England, and parallel tables of the most important events in British and general history. It is further illustrated by the introduction of the armorial bearings of each sovereign, as often as any change took place in the national escutcheon; and many of their favourite heraldic devices have been also added. "Some experience in the use of this chart," observes A. Barrington, "enables us, with confidence, to recommend it to the notice of those engaged in the instruction of youth—the simplicity of its arrangement commends itself at once to their understandings, while the explanations of the heraldic devices are found to be of the greatest use in engaging their attention, as well as in exciting their interest in the historical events, from which many of these devices have derived their origin." This we take to be one of the most useful applications of heraldry that has yet been attempted.

MY KNITTING BOOK. By MISS LAMBERT. Murray.

Miss Lambert has been induced to publish this little volume by the numerous piracies that have been committed on her popular "Handbook of Needlework." It is practical throughout; many of the examples are original, and the arrangement is well adapted for a novice.

MURRAY'S HOME AND COLONIAL LIBRARY. John Murray.

The proprietor of this miscellany is reprinting in it some of his most popular copyright works. This, Nos. 1 and 2 are selected from Borrow's "Bible in Spain," and No. 3 commences Bishop Heber's "Indian Journal," one of the most delightful works of its class. This new series is very neatly printed, and will form an elegant and economical parlour library.

THEORY OF A NEW SYSTEM OF INCREASING AND LIMITING ISSUES OF MONEY. Owen Richards.

The writer of this pamphlet maintains that his new system would be free from danger, that it would afford a new source of revenue to Governments for restricting or prohibiting importation, and that it would insure the means of keeping the current money of a nation always at an ascertained and presumed customary and due proportion to population and production. This is sought to be established in some 120 pages.

ALMANACKS FOR 1844.

The "Sporting Almanack and Quizzical Calendar of Rural Life," in its sixth year, is illustrated with twelve highly-finished engravings, from sketches painted by the Messrs. Herring, Laporte, and Huggins; and the sporting information as copious as heretofore. "Alderton's Commercial Almanack" is a début: it is well crammed with information, and the anniversaries are unusually numerous. "The National Temperance Almanack," compiled and printed by T. Cook, of Leicester, contains, besides the calendar, much "Pectoral" and "Temperance" information.

THE CRITIC: A JOURNAL OF THEATRICALS, MUSIC, AND THE EXHIBITIONS. Gilbert.

This new censor has reached the thirteenth weekly number. The criticisms are smartly written, yet they have not a tinge of vulgarity. Under the head "Gnats," are some stinging pleasantries; the "On Dits" and the "Paris Theatricals" are good. The work, too, has the right tone of propriety, and we are glad to see the editor stigmatize the immoral amusements of the metropolis most unsparingly. We wish him success.

ALISE, AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY. Darling.

The records of an author's life, the results of many studious years spent in the sincere investigation of truth.

PLANTS OF OTHER LANDS, WHICH ARE USEFUL TO MAN. Darton and Clark.

This is a pretty quarto for the play-room: it contains coloured lithographs of six plants, their growth, and services to man; they are the coffee, tea, tobacco, and India-rubber plants, the palm and the pine. The descriptions are neatly compiled, and, though brief, they are satisfactory.

THE ILLUSTRATED NATURAL PHILOSOPHY. By WILLIAM MARTIN. Darton and Clark.

A popular manual of modern science, with questions and experiments, and a host of wood-cuts. It appears to be compiled with care; and, in the selection of the illustrations, the editor has exercised considerable taste and judgment.

A TREATISE ON THE CULTURE OF THE PINE-APPLE. By THOMAS TORBSON. H. Steele.

The information here conveyed is stated to be "founded on long practice" by the author and his friends

WANDERINGS IN THE HIGHLANDS AND ISLANDS, with Sketches taken on the Scottish Border. By W. H. MAXWELL, Esq. 2 vols. [illegible]

[illegible] work, too pressed with other claimants to enable us to [illegible] very spirited volumes; they are intended as a sequel to "Stories of Waterloo," these Wanderings are clever [illegible]ter's tale, from the first page to the writer's farewell. We shall, of course, return to the work, and give our readers a spice of its quality.

THE JOURNAL OF THE ROYAL AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY OF ENGLAND. Vol. IV., Part II. Murray.

This part affords abundant evidence of the activity of the distinguished Association whence it emanates. It opens with a paper of sound, practical value, on the agricultural improvements of Lincolnshire, by Mr. Pusey, M.P. Next are the prize essays on the drainage of land, by Mr. Arkell; and on the construction of cottages, by the Rev. Copinger Hill. A paper on the cultivation of orchards, and the making of cider and perry, is full of economical details. Of higher mark is Dr. Fowner's prize essay on the food of plants. The part contains, also, an excellent report of the Society's Exhibition at Derby, copiously illustrated in our Journal in July last. Here are, likewise, the arrangements for the next meeting at Southampton, to which our artists will devote their best energies.

A VISIT TO THE EAST. By the Rev. H. FORMBY, M.A. Burns.

A neatly-written volume of the author's personal observation in Germany and on the Danube, Constantinople, Asia Minor, Egypt, and Idumea—scenes hallowed in the mind of every Christian. The pages seem to be closely packed with facts, and the rationale of travel the improvement of mankind by comparative views of their condition in different countries. The illustrations (some twenty-six in number) are engravings from the author's own sketches, and there are nearly as many picturesque vignettes.

EASTERN ROMANCE: Select Tales, from the Arabian and other Sources, adapted to Popular Reading. Burns.

This is a collection of the best tales from the "Arabian Nights' Entertainments," and other Eastern sources, divested of such objectionable passages, somewhat polished in the text, slightly annotated, and illustrated with several neat engravings. Our old friends, "Sinbad" and "Aladdin," figure among the number; and we think the volume will be welcomed by a numerous class of readers, to whom Eastern romance has been, on account of the blemishes referred to, a sealed book.

THE BOOK OF THE MONTHS, AND CIRCLE OF THE SEASONS D. Bogue.

This well-timed volume will, doubtless, attract attention by its elegant illustrations, from the graceful pencil of William Harvey. They are twenty-eight in number, and include large vignettes of the respective seasons and months, with as many pretty tail-pieces, all most delicately engraved by Smith and Linton. The designs teem with characteristic fancy, and are very pleasing compositions. The staple of the letter-press is Aikin's popular "Calendar of Nature," thickly interspersed with new quotations from our best poets. Altogether, this is just the volume for presentation to a sensible friend, and is worth a score of books of more ambitious pretensions.

THE BOOK OF FUN; or, Laugh and Learn, for Boys and Girls J. Gilbert.

The merited success of the "Comic Latin Grammar" has stimulated a host of imitators, and the "Book of Fun" is not the most fortunate of these sage speculations. It contains an Illustrated English Grammar, a Comic Speaker, Arithmetic for the Million, and a Comic History of Rome. The book is dry and poor throughout, and, biting the title, to read it is no joke; nor is it aided by the wood-cuts, which are pointless and unartistical, and occasionally offensive to good taste. These are common failings with imitators, who have rarely sufficient sense to follow the line chalked out for them by originators.

A LITTLE BATCH OF POEMS.

Here are five Parnassian trifles, which may find favour in all but utilitarian eyes; for each of them the indications of promise of better things. 1. "My Sonnets" (printed at Greenwich), are the productions of one ardently attached to this species of rhyme, who has penned nearly a hundred sonnets within half the number of weeks. 2. "Auld Gudlum," a poem, has been suggested by the recent theatrical execution of an aged felon at Stirling. 3. "Flowers and Fruits," by James Emslie Duncan, consists of elegiac lines, sonnets, songs, &c.; an attempt at the philosophical novel, and a vigorous defence of the use of vegetable diet—all occupying about some six dozen pages. 4. "Gawvim Honor," a tragedy, by the author of "Waldenberg," will add another to "the unacted." 5. "Cain, a sacred drama," by F. East, aims at a high moral—that uncertainty in matters of religion is dangerous to virtue; that a want of reliance upon God is the soul's poison in this life, and is peculiarly fatal to the sanity of minds susceptible of deep and moral impressions: how far this has been worked out by the author we have not space to examine.

A LITTLE BATCH OF JUVENILE BOOKS. Burns.

1. "Popular Tales and Legends" is a selection from Child's Fairy Tales—Ancient Traditions of the North—Irish Legends—Tales of Chivalry—Popular Household Stories, as told at the firesides of England, Germany, and Scotland. 2. "Legends and Traditionary Stories" is a sort of continuation of the Tales and Legends, and of kindred nationality. 3. "Elements of Knowledge," by C. M. A., is a little compendium of information for children, as a Scriptural Catechism, and Catechisms on Time, Food, Clothing, Minerals, Astronomy, Geography, and History, and articles of general utility and ornament; the object being to convey to children some knowledge of the objects with which they are by sight and use familiar, but otherwise ignorant. 4. "Scripture History," is, for the most part, a translation of the Bible History of Christopher Schmid, in general use in the people's schools of Bavaria, &c.; it embraces most of the chief points in Old Testament History, usually in the sacred text. 5. "The History of our Blessed Lord," in easy verse, is illustrated with coloured plates, and will prove, to young children, very attractive. These several books are, technically speaking, "got up" very neatly, illustrated with clever wood-cuts, and altogether exhibit the improved mode of producing "children's books."

LONDON INTERIORS, &c. Mead.

In a somewhat magniloquent title-page this work is described as "A Grand National Exhibition of the Religious, Royal, and Civic Solemnities; Public Amusements; Scientific Meetings; and Commercial Scenes of the British Capital." It contains some fifty large engravings on steel, of interior views in Buckingham, St. James's, and Kensington Palaces; the Houses of Parliament and Courts of Law; the Guildhall, Mansion-house, and Companies' Halls; Westminster Abbey and St. Paul's Cathedral; the Bank of England, Club-houses, &c. It is marvellous with what success the reader is thus introduced to the penetralia even of the Court itself. Thus, we have the Throne-room at Buckingham Palace with her Majesty receiving a City address; the Royal Picture Gallery on the evening of the splendid bal costumé; and a corner of the Throne-room, with the Princess Royal sitting for her portrait; her Majesty and Prince Albert, and the Dowager Lady Lyttelton. Next we have a drawing-room presentation at St. James's, the proclamation in the audience-chamber, the throne, &c. The remaining plates are appropriated to public ceremonials, meetings of societies, &c., among which the drawing-room and hall of the Athenæum Club-house, and the Saloon and Kitchen of the Reform Club-house, are most attractive. The dinner of the Dilettanti Society, at the Thatched House Tavern, is also treasurable, since the house has been taken down. The difficulty of obtaining sketches for not a few of these plates must have been very considerable, and we speak from experience in such matters—the Palace views in this volume we take to be correct.

Such a work as the present has long been called for. We remember a costly, yet poorly executed, volume, entitled "Modern London;" and Mr. Pyne's elaborate illustration of the royal residences. These are, however, expensive matters; whilst the "London Interiors" has the advantage of more popular interest in its plates, and is published at a comparatively insignificant price.

We ought to mention that each plate is accompanied by a few pages of letter-press details, in collecting which considerable industry and judgment appear to have been exercised: nevertheless, this department of the work will admit of improvement; and, as the present is but the first volume of a set, to be issued in numbers, the above hint may be serviceable. The work is handsomely bound, and bears the insignia of royalty in gold, so as to be a fitting ornament for any "interior." Among the indirect uses of this work, we may add, that, as examples of internal decoration, its plates are valuable, and occasionally highly curious memorials of the taste of other times.

PUNCH'S ALMANACK FOR 1844.

Punch, we beg pardon, Mr. Punch, has produced his Mosaic annual of fun and drollery, pun and patter, and oddities never-enough-to-be-laughed at. Here are a few from the January page:—

2. Tuesday.—E. Burke b. 1730. Who, like Gunter the confectioner, "Gave up to parties what was meant for mankind."

19. FRIDAY.—A quantity of fireworks discovered in the organ at Warton hey, 1843. Well if the organ had taken fire, they surely might have put it out by playing upon it.

31. WEDNESDAY.—Cato took poison 46 B.C. La! British brandy wasn't then invented.

HINTS FOR DRAMATIC AUTHORS.—Prune off shoots of the French stage, and transplant Vaudevilles against the season. Dig up old plots, and nail managers. Drill supers, plant firemen in pits, and train slips to applaud

The cuts are clever in bits at the follies of the day, as heretofore, and Punch is as bright in his third as in his first year.

THE GREAT CHESS MATCH AT PARIS.

Subjoined will be found the moves of the fourth game played between M Saint Amant and Mr. Staunton. It occupied about four hours and a half, a somewhat shorter time than those previously played, and was won by the English champion in excellent style. This makes three games won by him, and one drawn. Mr Staunton had the move, and played the white —

Mr. St.	Mr. St. A.	Mr. St.	Mr. St. A
1 Q P two	Q B P two	17 Kn[illegible] Kt	R t[illegible] Kt
2 Q P one	K H P two	18 Q K. P two	P t[illegible] P
3 Q Kt to B 3d	Q P one	19 P takes P	K[illegible] P
4 K P two	P takes P	20 K to R sq	K[illegible]
5 Kt takes P	K P two	21 K B P two	Q R to Q sq (b)
6 Q B to Kt 5	Q to Kt 3	22 Q to Q sq (c)	K R P one
7 Q B P one	Q B to K B 4th	23 Q to her B 3d	Q to her Kt 4 (d)
8 Q Kt to K B 3d	Q B to K Kt 3d	24 Q to Q 2d	K R to K B 4 (e)
9 Q B to Q 3d	B takes B	25 K to Kt 3d	K R to K B 3d
10 Q takes B	K Kt P one	26 P takes P	R takes R
11 K Kt to K 2	K B to Kt 2d	27 R takes R	P takes P
12 Q Kt to B 3	Q to Q Kt 3d	28 Q to K Kt 6th (f)	B to Q 3d (g)
13 Cas at K side	Q Kt to Q 2d	29 Q takes P ch	K to his Kt 2d
14 B takes B	Kt takes B	30 Q to K R 5th ch	K to his Kt 4th
15 Q Kt to Kt 5	K P one	31 Kt to K 4th ch	K to his R 5th
16 Q Kt to K 6	Q Kt to K B sq	32 Kt to K B 4th and mates (h)

(a) The opening up to this point has been unusually involved, and the bold aim and precision of the play more than once put both the antagonists in peril. There, however, contrived to extricate themselves from each attack in great style. At present the game is about equal.

(b) In order to attack the white pawn when the exchange of pawns shall take place.

(c) To defend the same pawn

(d) Still bearing on the same point

(e) This move loses black the game. It would seem as if M. Saint-Amant got tired of the cautious way in which the play had been hitherto conducted, and tried to precipitate the game on. Such attempts cannot be successful when opposed to the first players in Europe.

(f) An admirable move, preparatory to the check mate.

(g) Black can do nothing to prevent the check mate

(h) This mate was exactly managed after the white queen's move to the K B 4th. Mr Staunton seized on the very moment that was suitable.

Below will be found the moves of the fifth game played between M Saint-Amant and Mr. Staunton. It will be perceived that the English player has again been the victor. M. Saint-Amant moved first, and played the black.—

Mr. St. A.	Mr. S.	Mr St. A	Mr. S.
1 K P two	Q B P two	21 K B to K 2d	P t[illegible] P
2 K B P two	K P one	22 K B to K B sq	K t[illegible]
3 K Kt to K B 3d	Q Kt to Q 3d	23 Q B takes P	Q t[illegible]
4 Q B P one	Q P two	24 Q R to Q B sq	K[illegible]
5 K P one	Q to Q Kt 3d	25 Q takes R	K to Q 2d
6 K B to Q 3d	Q B to Q 2d	26 Q to K 3d	R to K Kt 4th
7 K B to Q B 2d	Kt to Q B sq	27 K B to Q 3d	R to K Kt sq
8 Castles	K Kt to K B 3d	28 R takes R	Q P takes R
9 K B P one	K B to K 3d	29 B takes B	P takes B
10 K to K sq	K B P two	30 Q to Q Kt 3d (c)	Kt P one
11 Q R P one	Q R P two	31 R to Q sq	P takes P
12 Q B P one	K Kt to K B 3d	32 Q takes P	Q to her 3
13 Q P two	K R P one	33 Q P one (d)	K to Q B sq
14 K R to K sq	K Kt P one	34 Q to Q B 3d ch	K to Q Kt sq
15 Q Kt to K B 3d (a)	Q B P takes P	35 Q P takes	K B P one
16 Kt takes P	Kt takes Kt	36 Q to Q B 8th (e)	K P one (f)
17 P takes Kt	K Kt P one	37 Q to Q B 2d	Q to K 6 ch
18 Kt to Q Kt 5th	B takes Kt	38 Q takes Q	K to Q B sq (g)
19 P takes B	R to Q B 5th	39 Q to [illegible]	R to own sq
20 K B to Q 3d	R to Q B sq (b)	40 Q to [illegible]	Q to K B 6th and mates

(a) The pieces at the Queen's side are too much crowded, and moving the K right tends to rectify, in some degree, this disadvantage

(b) The same move played on to attack the pawn, but, as may be seen, at the back can play his B and attack B and Q top-liner, white is forced to [illegible]

(c) Black's game is now in a bad way, as, whilst he is [illegible] pawns at this side, the check-mate is approaching on the other.

(d) This is done safely, as, if the pawn be taken, there will be check to K and Q.

(e) The move is unavoidable, no matter where the queen goes

(f) To command the K B 2d, and prevent the same from coming out.

(g) This move is unnecessary, as the position of the black [illegible] does not affect the mate. It may also be remarked that the mate may be obtained by here advancing the B P.

ASSIZE INTELLIGENCE.

NORTHERN CIRCUIT—LIVERPOOL, DEC 21.

(Before Mr Justice Williams.)

THE MURDER AT KNOWSLEY.—[illegible] Robert, James Hunt, Thomas Jacques Joseph Rimmer, and Henry Flininghan, were indicted for the wilful murder of Richard Kenyon, Lord Derby's head game keeper, at Knowsley, by shooting him with a gun. The case rested on the evidence of a notorious poacher named Shaw, who had accompanied the parties on their lawless expedition, and who now turned approver for the sake of reward. The learned Judge summed up with great care, the jury retired for about an hour, and returned into court with a verdict of "guilty against all the prisoners, recommending them strongly to mercy. His lordship then passed sentence of death in a brief and impressive address, which was repeatedly interrupted by the lamentations of the numerous relatives of the prisoners who were in court.

WESTMINSTER SESSIONS.

On Wednesday, Thomas Hester was indicted for obtaining [illegible] sovereigns, a saddle and bridle, value £3 8s., from James Croft Webb [illegible] Street, Westminster; also for obtaining, by false pretences, a saddle, [illegible] and J Inglis, and a third indictment for obtaining, by false pretences a whip, value 5s., from W. Crowther, St. George-street, Hanover-square; on a [illegible] of which he was found guilty. The prisoner, it appears, is quite an adept in this system of robbery, and has been for many years practising in London and the country. In June last he was tried at this court for a similar offence, and pretends to [illegible] Berkshire, where he was sentenced to two years' imprisonment (Mr. Whitty), in passing sentence, said it was quite evident [illegible] before received was not sufficient to reform him, and that he could not now be allowed to remain in the country. The sentence therefore was, that he be trans ported beyond the seas for the term of seven years. The prisoner, after the verdict was delivered on the present occasion, clearly anticipated what his fate was likely to be, and implored the court to give him "another chance."

POLICE.

CLERKENWELL.—William Mayo, 48, a fellow having the appearance of a carman, was charged before Mr. Combe, with having stolen a plum pudding, the property of Mrs. Eliza Buzzard, of No. 48, Ferspool-lane, Gray's Inn-lane. It appeared from the evidence of the prosecutrix's maid-servant, that she invited a party of friends to dine at her house, for whose enjoyment she provided a goose, some roast beef, and a splendid plum pudding, which cost her 18s. In order that the latter might not be too hot for her guests, she took it out of the copper, and placing it on a large dish she left it in the passage near the yard to cool, and after partaking of the goose and beef, &c, she proceeded for the purpose of bringing in the pudding, when, to her astonishment, the pudding was gone, and only the dish left alone by itself. She made enquiries of some boys, and ascertaining that the prisoner had been seen to enter the passage, and run through the street with the smoking pudding in his apron, the same him into custody. Two boys also invited evidence that the prisoner was passing by the house of the prosecutrix, when he said, "I'll go and see if Bill Buzzard's pudding is ready," and he soon afterwards came out with the pudding in his apron. The prisoner denied all knowledge of the robbery. Mr. Combe enquired which he would prefer, paying for the pudding, or being committed for trial? The prisoner preferred the former, and having made an arrangement with the prosecutrix, he was discharged.

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.—Two officers of the National Animals' Friend Society applied to Mr. Combe for a summons against a man named Burke, for cruelty to a pony. It appeared from the statement of one of the applicants that a short time since Burke backed his pony for a considerable sum of money to run in a chase against the Bedford stage coach to and from London, and on its return, within nine miles of Bedford, the animal dropped down and died. A requisition, signed by eighteen magistrates at Bedford, had been forwarded to this society, urging them to assist in prosecuting Burke for the cruelty. Mr. Combe enquired why they acted at that court when the pony had died within nine miles of Bedford. The officer replied that the cruelty had been exercised towards the animal in Islington. Summonses had already been issued at Hertford and Bedford against the owner. Mr. Combe declined granting a summons, leaving the society to indict the party at the sessions if they thought proper.

MANSION HOUSE.—THE WILL FORGERY CASE.—Mr. W. H. Barber, the solicitor of New Bridge-street, Blackfriars, and Mr. Joshua Fletcher, of Bruns wick terrace Walworth-road, who stand charged with having forged a will, purporting to be the last will and testament of Anne Slack, were again placed at the bar, before the Lord Mayor, for further examination on Thursday last. The court was again very much crowded. The Lord Mayor took his seat shortly after 11 o'clock. Mr. Clarkson, assisted by Messrs. Twaddell, the Bank solicitors, attended to conduct the prosecution; and Mr. Chambers attended for Mr. Barber, and Mr. Ballantine for Mr. Fletcher. A necessary witness being absent, Mr. Clarkson said he must be summoned; and then proceeded to state that there was a question of time against the prisoners for forging the will of Mary Hunt, of Bristol. The parties entitled had never received the money, which had, in consequence, found its way to the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt, in consequence of one of the partners of the firm of Grote, Prescott and Co. having died. He would produce a book in the handwriting of Fletcher having the name of Hunt in his handwriting, and the signature to a power of attorney purporting to be that of Mary Hunt, by which he obtained the sum of £1200 which had stood in her name. She died in 1836, but Barber represented that she had died in 1839. The dividends, amounting to £360, had also been received by them. The notes in which this money had been paid were at the same time exchanged into gold, and exactly half the sum of £1700 was paid into the London and Westminster Bank by Fletcher himself. Mr. Chambers said, that, doubtless, Mr Barber had, in this case as in the other, acted as Mr. Fletcher's solicitor. His client, Mr. Barber, was, however, quite ready and willing to stand committed to take his trial at the Central Criminal Court, because he knew all the circumstances could be brought against him The evidence in this new case was then proceeded with, and at its close, the prisoners were further remanded to the 9th of January, to procure additional evidence in both cases.

BOW-STREET.—There were upwards of forty charges on Tuesday morning, the majority of which were cases of drunkenness. Multifarious were the ex ..... made. Some said they had met old friends they had not seen for years, and so they enjoyed themselves on Christmas-day. Others, that they had met fast friends whom they had never seen before, and for better acquaintance they got drunk together. Some said they had taken a little drink in consequence of pains in their backs, while others denied altogether that they had been influenced by drink, but having taken too much plum-pudding and other Christmas fare, it had quite overcome them. The stern frown of justice for the nonce was relaxed, and the delinquents were discharged.

MARLBOROUGH-STREET.—The striking effects of "boxing-day" were more than ordinarily conspicuous on Wednesday on the faces of the majority of those persons who had been accommodated the previous evening, on the kindly terms of the police, with a nocturnal introduction to the interior of the Vine-street station-house. B ask eyes, cut faces, and torn garments, were sufficient proof to the unlucky parties of the unpleasant encounters which invariably occur on the "glorious" eve. A fact of that wholesome caution conveyed in the proverb, which enjoins the reveller to be "merry," and, at the same time, "wise." In consideration of the particular occasion, and the rich harvest of "cases" which the whole of the Defenders exhibited, Mr. Maltby, the sitting Magistrate, was induced to release the majority of the "drunk and disorderlies" without any further punishment than what t ey ever fully sustained.

Thomas Duke, an American, was placed at the bar on the following charge :— Police constable No. 129, of the C division, said that about 10 o'clock on Wednesday night he was proceeding along Oxford-street, when he saw the prisoner lying on the footway pavement, so excessively drunk that he was unable to stand or give any account of himself. As there were several coach rank and other suspicious characters assembled about, he took him into custody. He very officious in offering "to take care of the gentleman and see him home," whereas took him to the station-house. Inspector Reed, of the C division, said that on the prisoner being searched at the station-house, it was discovered that he had about him upwards of £300 in Bank of England notes and gold. The defendant said, that he only arrived that morning from Liverpool. He had certainly indulged rather freely in the evening, and he found that English liquor was much stronger than he had expected. Mr. Hardwick: You ought to be very thankful to the police for taking care of you, and not locking you up for the night. As you are a stranger in this country you would no doubt have been plundered of it. As you are a stranger I shall not impose a fine upon you. The defendant said he was very thankful to the constable: and having handsomely rewarded him he was discharged.

EPITOME OF NEWS.

Apple-trees in bud and blossom, together with polyanthuses, wallflowers, primroses, and daisies, in full bloom, may now be observed in almost all the gardens in the neighbourhood of Lauriston.

Captain Johnson, county inspector for Monaghan, a few days since on coming down stai s dressed for breakfast, dropped in a fit of apoplexy, of which he expired about twenty minutes afterwards.

By a recent order of the Lords of the Treasury, foreign deals are allowed to be removed from the bonding premises, for the purpose of being sawn for exportation, under certain specific regulations.

The Earl of Harcourt has determined on the impeachment of Sir R. Peel, if the right hon. baronet does not exact the Duke of Bordeaux and the Jesuits.

The quantity of game in the market this season is unusually large. Hares and rabbits are scarcely worth the price they command in the shops. Hares, 2 qlbs. weight, were sold in large numbers in Nottingham last Saturday at 3s. each. Pheasants are also more numerous this season than in any previous year.

A very deplorable accident occurred last week in the commune of St Josse-ten Noode Brussels. M. Lyterheyen, sen., 78 years of age, was found dead in his bed, with his face frightfully mutilated by the explosion of a gun which was found near his side. It is thought that the occurrence was purely accidental.

The revenue of Middlesex, or the county-rate, which in 1740 was £1,600, in 1840 was £63,589 2s. 1d. The sum now proposed to be raised there was the question of the fortune of the late Mr. Wyatt, of Mary Hunt, of Bristol. The parties entitled had never received the money, which had, in consequence, found its way to the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt, in consequence of one of the partners of the firm of Grote, Prescott and Co. having died. He would produce a book in the handwriting of Fletcher having the name of Hunt in his handwriting, and the signature to a power of attorney purporting to be that of Mary Hunt, by which he obtained the sum of £1200 which had stood in her name. She died in 1836, but Barber represented that she had died in 1839. The dividends, amounting to £360, had also been received by them. The notes in which this money had been paid were at the same time exchanged into gold, and exactly half the sum of £1700 was paid into the London and Westminster Bank by Fletcher himself. Mr. Chambers said, that, doubtless, Mr Barber had, in this case as in the other, acted as Mr. Fletcher's solicitor. His client, Mr. Barber, was, however, quite ready and willing to stand committed to take his trial at the Central Criminal Court, because he knew all the circumstances could be brought against him The evidence in this new case was then proceeded with, and at its close, the prisoners were further remanded to the 9th of January, to procure additional evidence in both cases.

BOW-STREET.—There were upwards of forty charges on Tuesday morning, the majority of which were cases of drunkenness. Multifarious were the ex ..... made. Some said they had met old friends they had not seen for years, and so they enjoyed themselves on Christmas-day. Others, that they had met fast friends whom they had never seen before, and for better acquaintance they got drunk together. Some said they had taken a little drink in consequence of pains in their backs, while others denied altogether that they had been influenced by drink, but having taken too much plum-pudding and other Christmas fare, it had quite overcome them. The stern frown of justice for the nonce was relaxed, and the delinquents were discharged.

MARLBOROUGH-STREET.—The striking effects of "boxing-day" were more than ordinarily conspicuous on Wednesday on the faces of the majority of those persons who had been accommodated the previous evening, on the kindly terms of the police, with a nocturnal introduction to the interior of the Vine-street station-house. B ask eyes, cut faces, and torn garments, were sufficient proof to the unlucky parties of the unpleasant encounters which invariably occur on the "glorious" eve. A fact of that wholesome caution conveyed in the proverb, which enjoins the reveller to be "merry," and, at the same time, "wise." In consideration of the particular occasion, and the rich harvest of "cases" which the whole of the Defenders exhibited, Mr. Maltby, the sitting Magistrate, was induced to release the majority of the "drunk and disorderlies" without any further punishment than what t ey ever fully sustained.

Thomas Duke, an American, was placed at the bar on the following charge :— Police constable No. 129, of the C division, said that about 10 o'clock on Wednesday night he was proceeding along Oxford-street, when he saw the prisoner lying on the footway pavement, so excessively drunk that he was unable to stand or give any account of himself. As there were several coach ranks and other suspicious characters assembled about, he took him into custody. He very officious in offering "to take care of the gentleman and see him home," whereas took him to the station-house. Inspector Reed, of the C division, said that on the prisoner being searched at the station-house, it was discovered that he had about him upwards of £300 in Bank of England notes and gold. The defendant said, that he only arrived that morning from Liverpool. He had certainly indul.- rather freely in the evening, and he found that English liquor was much stronger than he had expected. Mr. Hardwick: You ought to be very thankful to the police for taking care of you, and not locking you up for the night. As you are a stranger in this country you would no doubt have been plundered of it. As you are a stranger I shall not impose a fine upon you. The defendant said he was very thankful to the constable: and having handsomely rewarded him he was discharged.

EPITOME OF NEWS.

Apple-trees in bud and blossom, together with polyanthuses, wallflowers, primroses, and daisies, in full bloom, may now be observed in almost all the gardens in the neighbourhood of Lauriston.

Captain Johnson, county inspector for Monaghan, a few days since on coming down stai s dressed for breakfast, dropped in a fit of apoplexy, of which he expired about twenty minutes afterwards.

By a recent order of the Lords of the Treasury, foreign deals are allowed to be removed from the bonding premises, for the purpose of being sawn for exportation, under certain specific regulations.

The Earl of Harcourt has determined on the impeachment of Sir R. Peel, if the right hon. baronet does not exact the Duke of Bordeaux and the Jesuits.

The quantity of game in the market this season is unusually large. Hares and rabbits are scarcely worth the price they command in the shops. Hares, 2 qlbs. weight, were sold in large numbers in Nottingham last Saturday at 3s. each. Pheasants are also more numerous this season than in any previous year.

A very deplorable accident occurred last week in the commune of St Josse-ten Noode Brussels. M. Lyterheyen, sen., 78 years of age, was found dead in his bed, with his face frightfully mutilated by the explosion of a gun which was found near his side. It is thought that the occurrence was purely accidental.

The revenue of Middlesex, or the county-rate, which in 1740 was £1,600, in 1840 was £63,589 2s. 1d. The sum now proposed to be raised there was the sum of £70,000.

It is stated that Sir J. Reid, the member for Dover, will accept the Chiltern Hundreds immediately after the opening of Parliament; and it is more than probable that a vacancy will be created in the representation of Sunderland, through Lord Howick being called up to the House of Lords, in consequence of the unprovided death of the venerable Earl Grey.

The number of persons who passed to and from France, ... Boulogne, during the week ending on Thursday last, was 884, and via Calais 978. The numbers in the corresponding week of last year were, Boulogne 634, and Calais 305.

Mrs. Harrison still continues to persevere in her task of walking 1,000 miles in 1,000 successive hours. Her house is the Dragon Inn, Halifax road, near Leeds, or Leeds and Whitehall-road, on which she is walking. She had completed one third of her task on Monday last at six o'clock in the morning.

It is reported in Newcastle-upon-Tyne that it is the intention of Henry Milvaine, Esq., the member for Tynemouth, to resign his seat prior to the meeting of Parliament, physical debility being assigned as the cause of his intended resignation.

Captain England, who met with a premature death in the unfortunate conflict with the natives near Coody Bay, New Zealand, was formerly a member of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, and the author of the anonymous letters on the topography of Nelson.

The late General Sir John Fraser and General Morrison had a pension of £400 a-year each, for wounds in the service. General Morrison's annuity became the property, in 1823, and Sir John Fraser's, in 1826.

The Examiner states, "that her Majesty has a decided objection to the practice of those gentlemen who spend the evening over their wine and dessert. The Queen misses her husband's society after the ladies have left the room to arrive, and during this period she does not take a seat, but enters into conversation with the ladies in the drawing-room. Occasions have, it is said, occurred, when a summons to the Royal presence has followed a deviation from this sustained, and now generally understood, rule."

We are sorry to learn that the pitmen of another considerable colliery, in addition to Thornley, have struck work since our last; and it is currently reported that others will shortly follow their example.

Prince Albert has subscribed the sum of £20, towards the restoration of St. James's Tower, Bury St. Edmund's.

An agricultural college is in contemplation to be erected at Cirencester

A letter from Cambrai says that Baron F. de Roisin has presented to the Historical Commission of the department of the Nord, of which he is a member, a lately found voluminous correspondence between Fenelon, Archbishop of Cambrai, author of Telemachus, and a certain Abbé Langlet, on the life of Louis XIV., which all the mild piety and deep wisdom of this illustrious prelate are palmed

A letter from Pesth speaks of an attempt to extort money from M. De Wodjaner a banker in that town. A man was arrested in Vienna, who handed him a letter, demanding 20,000 florins (50,000*l.*), and stating that if he refused the bearer would blow up the house, having about him 15lbs. of powder and a loaded pistol. The banker had sufficient presence of mind to summon the man with lower office boy, another entered, when they made him prisoner. The powder and pistol were found on him.

The grand Council of the Canton of Geneva has just adopted, by a great majority, the project of a new penal code of laws.

The election writs waited upon the Chancellor of the Exchequer upon the subject of a reduction in the tobacco duties on Saturday, obtained the important information that her Majesty's Government have the matter under the serious consideration

Great rigour is observed at the Custom-house with regard to the Act passed in the last session, having for its object the protection of our authors against the extensive piracies of English works. The limited indulgence of a single copy even for private use, with the name written on the fly-leaf, as formerly allowed is now strictly prohibited.

The fine old church of St. Mary, Shrewsbury, has, within the last week, been enriched by the erection, within its walls, of a monumental tablet, of exquisite workmanship, designed to perpetuate the memory of a native of Shrewsbury, who in his day bore a conspicuous and honourable part in the naval history of England—Admiral Benbow. The tablet is of a pyramidal form, having at the top a bust in alto relievo of the admiral, which is finely chiselled and is said to be a faithful likeness, as it is copied from a picture of the admiral, which was presented by a master, Mrs. Hind, to the corporation of Shrewsbury.

A gentleman who visited the Liverpool Zoological Gardens the other day, was much amused to see a lady with the assistance of the elephant, very disagreeably surprised by the bulky animal taking a fancy to his umbrella. The gentleman kept fast hold of the stick and pulled away; the elephant, becoming indignant, tried to wrench the portion of his property in the hands of the astonished fair one, when, unwilling to be thus robbed, and could probably have swallowed the owner if he had been within his reach.

THE POOR AT CHRISTMAS.—All there is no place like London—for although gaunt misery and want may for awhile stalk its streets in shelterless condition, yet it is only necessary to describe the distress fairly to the metropolitan community in order to obtain a speedy and generous relief. Never was more proof of our metropolis than during the past week, when we were daily delighted with accounts of the profusion with which anonymous charity poured forth its contributions at the various police offices, for the purpose that our wretched fellow-creatures might be enabled to partake of the comfort and hilarity of Christmas. Nor did the work of benevolence stop will, this mere temporary and fleeting relief; for to our great gratification we learn that the influential and affluent have assembled together in a true spirit of Christian charity to establish a permanent fund whereby we may hope in future to be spared the harrowing details of the thousand-and-one Oxford-streets we are daily disturbed before the police magistrates. This is a work which cannot fail to benefit every one concerned in it, and we trust that the co-operation of the wealthy will be as general as the object deserves.

HER MAJESTY'S STAG HOUNDS.—On Tuesday last the meet was at Salthil where there was a muster of upwards of two hundred horse men, including the noble master of the Buck Hounds Captain Y. S. Dugdale, Sir Seymour, Mr. Staniforth, several officers of the 13th Light Dragoons, from Hounslow, and 1st Regiment of Life Guards, from Windsor. The deer, Foxley, was uncarted at the back of Sussex-place, Slough, close by the railway, and made for the open. The influential field got and got into a farm-yard near the Dog and Pot public-house, which caused a check of nearly half an hour. They then crossed Stoke Common, and made right across the country to Hedgerley, skirting the Park, and on to Beaconsfield. The deer ran through a gentleman's house in the town, and got into the gardens, where it was taken after a capital run of an hour and a half.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE.—Friday.—Scarcely any fresh English wheat was on offer here to day; nevertheless, the demand for the article was somewhat inactive, at about Monday's prices. The sale for foreign wheat was in a sluggish state; but the quotations were supported Barley, of which little was on show, met a slow inquiry at barely late rates. Malt moved off steadily, at full, as mixed quotations. A tend.g advance was obtained for fine qualities of Oats, and peas, were very dull

ARRIVALS.—English: Wheat, 3020; Barley, 810; Oats, 2240 quarters Irish: Barley, 420; Oats, 1670 quarters Foreign: Wheat, 510; Oats, 180 quarters. Flour 3816 sacks: Malt, 2360 quarters.

English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 42s to 44s; ditto white, 49s to 52s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 42s to 52s; ditto white, 43s to 54s; rye, 32s to 35s, grinding barley, 22s to 26s; distilling do., 28s to 33s; malting do, 33s to 35s; Lincoln and Norfolk malt, 60s to 65s; brown ditto, 56s to 58s; Kingston and Ware, 60s to 62s; Chevalier, 62s; Yorkshire and Lincoln native feed oats, 21s to 22s; potato ditto, 22s to 23s; Youghal and Cork, black 19s to 20s; ditto white, 20s to 21s; Scotch and Irish potato ditto, 22s to 23s; grey peas, 32s to 33s; maple, 31s to 32s; white, 32s to 36s, beans, 34s to 36s per quarter Town-made flour, 45s to 46s; Suffolk, 38s to 40s; Essex and Kent, 42s to 44s per sack. 280 lbs. Foreign.—Free wheat, 52s to 60s. Dantzic, red, 48s to 52s; white, 52s to 60s. In Sand. Barley, 19s to 20s; oats, new, 12s to 14s; ditto feed, 15s to 16s; beans, 35s to 36s; peas, 32s to 33s per quarter. Flour, America, 21s to 22s; Baltic, 21s to 22s per barrel.

The Seed Market.—There has been very little doing in any kinds of seeds since our last report.

The following are the present rates:—Linseed, English, sowing 50s to 60s; Baltic, crushing, 36s to 37s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 34s to 35s per quarter. Cakes, £6 10s to £6 15s per 1000. Rapeseed, English, £9 10s to £10 ; ditto foreign, £6 to £6 10s per 1000. Coriander, 45s to 50s per cwt; brown mustard seed, 12s to 16s; white ditto, 16s to 18s; tares, 4s to 4s 6d per bushel: English rapeseed, new, 40s to 42s per last of ten quarters; linseed cakes, English, £9 10s to £10 ; ditto foreign, £6 to £6 10s per 1000; English rapecakes, 45s to 50s per ton; canary, 48s to 60s per quarter.

Bread.—The prices of wheaten bread in the metropolis are from 8d to 9d; of household ditto, 6d to 7½d per 4lb loaf.

Imperial Weekly Average.—Wheat, 50s 2d., barley, 32s 2d; oats, 19s 7½d; rye, 39s 9d; beans, 40s 10d; peas, 39s 2d.

Imperial Averages of Six Weeks which govern Duty.—Wheat, 51s 3d; barley, 32s 6d; oats 18s 10d; rye, 39s 5d.; beans, 40s.; peas, 38s 4s.

Duties on Foreign Corn.—Wheat, 20s barley, 6s; oats, 5s; rye, 10s 6d; beans, 10s 6d; peas, 10s 6d.

Foreign and Colonial Produce.—These markets being all closed for the holidays, we have very little to observe respecting them this week. In tea, however, rather an extensive business has been transacted, privately, at very full rates; but all other articles have commanded very little attention.

Hops.—This market continues in a very healthy state, and prices are not looking upwards Scarcely any Sussex hops can now be had under £6 per cwt. There are now fewer hops on offer than at many previous corresponding periods of the year.—Pure per pocket—Sussex, £5 12s. to £6 10s; Weald of Kent, £5 5s to £6 12s; Mid Kent, £6 15s to £8 10s; East Kent, £7 7s to £9 0s. Ditto Choice, £10 0s to £11 11s; Farnham's, £8 15s to £11 15s; Mid Kent bags, £5 15s to £7 5s.

Wool.—The imports of wool continue on a very limited scale, yet we have no improvement to notice in the private transactions demanded, and prices remain as last week.

Potatoes.—About 1200 tons of potatoes have arrived at the waterside this week. Prime qualities are in demand at from 80s to 85s, while other kinds vary in value from 40s to 70s per ton.

COAL.—Hastings Hartley, 18s 9d to 19s; Hetwell Main, 16s 6d; New Tanfield, 14s 6d; Ardwick, 14s; Fenton Wiuston, 14s; West Wylam, 15s 3d, Wylam, 15s 3d, Hilda 17s 6d; Hilton, 20s 3d, Caradoc, 20s 3d per ton.

Sea-fish.—During the holy-day week, on the whole, well supplied with beasts as to numbers, but a great deficiency was observed in quality The attendance of buyers being small, the beef trade was very dull, at barely Monday's quotations. Although the number of sheep was reasonably large, the sale for them was comparatively steady, at full prices. The supply of calves was good, yet the demand was active, and the primest qualities advanced 2d per lb. To pigs business was doing at late terms Much corn moved off at 4s 6d to 5s 3d. Per 8lbs to sink the offal—Coarse and inferior beasts, 2s 10d to 3s; second quality ditto, 3s 2d to 3s 4d, prime large ditto, 3s 6d to 3s 8d, prime Scots, &c., 3s 10d to 4s; coarse and inferior sheep, 3s 4d to 3s 8d; second quality ditto, 4s 10d to 4s; prime coarse woolled sheep, 4s 2d to 4s 4d, prime Southdown ditto, 4s 6d to 4s 8d; large coarse calves, 3s 4d to 4s 6d; prime small ditto, 4s 2d to 4s 6d., large hogs, 3s 4d to 4s 0d., sows, porkers, 4s 2d to 4s 8d; suckling calves, 18s to 28s; quarter old store pigs, 18s to 22s each Beasts, 4690; cows, 145; sheep, 42100; calves, 168, pigs, 385.

Newgate and Leadenhall.—We had a very moderate supply of meat on sale to-day, while the demand was firm, on the following terms :—Inferior Beef, 2s 4d to 2s 8d, middling ditto, 2s 10s to 3s 0d; prime large ditto, 3s 2d to 3s 4d; do. small ditto, 3s 4d to 3s 6d; large pork, 2s 10d to 3s 10d; inferior mutton ..... 3d; middling ditto, 3s 8d to 4s 0d, prime ditto, 4s 2d to 4s 4d, veal, 3s 4d to 4s 4d, pork, 2s 4d to 3s 4d.

ROBERT HEARNE

COMMERCE AND MONEY.

An extra mail from Calcutta was received in the beginning of this week, but the letters contain no news of political importance. To the merchant and manufacturer, however, the intelligence communicated by the conveyance from the great Eastern Archipelago is in every way satisfactory, confirming as it does the most sanguine expectations lately entertained by them of the great increase in commerce, which the treaty with China must evidently establish. Indeed, in Lancashire, great preparations have been made during the year for conducting the department of our foreign commerce profitably. All the old works are already fully employed, and new ones are now building. Then are the architects and operatives throughout all the manufacturing districts in full employment for a time, at all events, and nothing short of superabundance of goods can, for years to come, interfere with their present prosperity. For the season of the year the manufacturing trade has seldom been more active than it now is, both for exportation and for home consumption, and a continued influx of the precious metals into this country, in payment of the balances of our foreign commerce, is the natural consequence In the vaults of the Bank of England the value of bullion deposited is upwards of thirteen millions sterling, and in the hands of our capitalists generally the amount of money unemployed is largely in proportion. It therefore causes a great external pressure in the money market, which during this week, however, has undergone some amendment in the larger joint stock associations. In the shares of the leading lines of railways great animation continues to exist, and by reference to our quotations it will be found that a very material rise has taken place in many of them. London and Birmingham stock has reached a premium of £6 5s. In the shares of the Midland Counties and Glasgow and Hamilton Railways also business has been extensively done at higher prices. In fact nothing can be more healthy than this great department of the money market at present.

The Stock Exchange continues to be done, although no particular degree of activity has been observable throughout this week. With the exception of Spanish Bonds, which are one per cent dearer, in consequence of the payment of the quarter's dividend due on the first proximo being now rendered certain, very little alteration has occurred in the value of any description of public securities since our last publication. On the English joint stock Bank list, however, some rather extensive business has been again done at advancing prices. The Consols for the opening having reached 98, the dividend included, thus rendering the price 97½, they have only varied from that quotation since. Should this state of the money market continue during the coming summer months, the reduction of the Threes and a half to a lower rate of interest appears a thing next to certain. Should such be the case, the probability is, that a stock bearing an annual interest of 2½ per cent will be created, in which every subscriber of one hundred pounds of the Three and a half per cents, will be entitled to receive one hundred and five. Then and not before, will be realised the promises of Sir Robert Peel's financial statements, as a matter of certainty, and they are making their pecuniary condition daily more palpable.

SAVINGS' FUNDS.—3 per Cent, Consols, short; 3 per Cent, Reduced, 96½ to 97 3/8 per Cent. Reduced, 102½, Long Annuities, 12 3/16 ; Bank Stock, 180 Premium ; Exchequer Bills, 58s premium ; Bank Stock, 183 to 184; London and Westminster Bank, 23; London Joint Stock Bank 7½, Union Bank of London, 10¼; Consols for the Opening, 98⅜ to the January 5 and 6.

FOREIGN STOCKS AND BONDS.—Spanish Five, 20¾ to 21, Spanish Threes, 31; Portuguese, Regula, 43¾; Ditto, New, 44¼; Brazilian, 104; Buenos Ayres, 104; Chilian, 103½; Colombian, 11⅜; Venezuela, 8½; Danish, 89 to 87, Dutch 2½ per Cents, 56¾, Dutch Five, 99¾, Austrian 118; Russian, 115; French Rentes 107f. 50c. Sel. 5s.

FAILURES OF SEARES IN JOINT STOCK ASSOCIATIONS.—Birmingham and Derby, ¼; Birmingham and Gloucester, 6¼; Bristol and Exeter, 6¼; Eastern Counties 11, Serip, 19½; Edinburgh and Glasgow, 2½ to 3; Hull and Selby, 9 to 9½; London and Brighton, 24½ to 24¾; South Western, 72¾; London and Brighton, 47, Manchester and Birmingham, 5; Midland Counties, 9½ to 9¾; North Midland, 20 to 20½; London and Dover, 3¾; York and North Midland, 19½ to 15½; Blackwall, 5¼; Greenwich, 8; Croydon (Trunk, 14¼; Great North of England, 83 to 84½; Great Western, 93¾ to 94, Newcastle and Darlington, 50; Manchester and Birmingham, 3¾; Paris and Orleans, 82½ Norwich and Yarmouth, 16; Newcastle and Darlington, 30; Paris and Orleans, 82½

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, DEC 26.

BANKRUPTS.—A. WELLS, Wykeham Rise, Brixton, surgeon.—J. DOBSON, Old Gravel-lane, Ratcliffe-highway, shipcarpenter.—T. HANCOCK Canterbury, coachsmith.—W. CHAMBERLAIN, Pershore, Worcester, Innkeeper and HORSE Hackney Job der.—J. THOMPSON, Evesham, Kent, draper.—C. WEBB, Oxford, apothecary —W. BERKELEY, Uxbridge, Middlesex, coal-merchant.—J. HOLDEN, Mornington-crescent, Hampstead-road, Middlesex, gentleman.—E. EVERSHED, Pulborough Sussex, timber-merchant.—J. JENNINGS, Chelsea, cow-keeper.—G. HICKINBOTTOM Burbage, Leicestershire baker.—J. NEWTON, Wolverhampton.—M. HAYWARD, Stone Cowley, Leicestershire, farmer.—J. CORNISH, Bridport, Dorsetshire, painter —W. PRINGLE Morpeth Northumberland, carrier.

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATIONS.—J. JAMIESON, Greenock merchant.—J. MARTIN Dundee, manufacturer.—W. WILSON, Dundee, merchant.—D. SWAN, Leith, shipbuilder.

FRIDAY, DEC 29.

WAR OFFICE.—8th Dragoon Guards: Lieut J. H. Dickson to be Captain, vice Scott; Cornet C. J. Sceobitt to be Lieutenant, vice Dickson. C. F. Walker to be Cornet, vice Beecham.—2d Dragoons: Lieut. C. Craven to be Captain, vice Fosbrog. Cornet F. Paine to be Lieutenant, vice Craven; F. Hibber to be Cornet, vice Paine. 11th Light Dragoons: Lieut. J. Cameron to be Captain, vice Sutton, who exchanges with the Hon. F. G. Noel. Lieutenant, vice Wegwitz; T. V. Dundas to be Cornet, vice Noel; Staff-Surg. of the Second Class, J. D'Oulgarn, M D, to be Surgeon, vice Chambers.

1st (Royal) Foot: Major G. Bell to be Lieutenant Colonel, vice Deane; Capt. T. Astbo to be Captain, vice Simpson; Lieut. the Hon. C. G. Pakenham to be Captain, vice Ashe; Ensign G. G. Carlyon to be Lieutenant, vice Limbrick; H. Charlton to be Ensign, vice Carlyon.—7th: Second Lieut. E. R. Forman to be Lieutenant, vice Stephen.—8th: Assistant-Surg. J. Mitchell, M D, from the Staff, to be Surgeon, vice Hall, M.D. appointed to be Major, vice W. M. Wetenhall; Capt T. H. Franks to be Major, vice Wingfield; Lieut J. Hall to be Captain, vice Franks; Ensign M. C. Bourchier to be Lieutenant, vice Hall; Capt. R. Williams to be Capt., vice Rice.—My A Myers, Lieut. M. W. Goldie to be Capt., vice Williams. Ensign Bodkin to be Lieutenant, vice Goldie; J. Seldwin to be Ensign vice Bodkin.—24th: Lieut. J. Power to be Capt., vice Seagrim; Ensign G. C. Bourchier to be Lieutenant, vice Power, G. St Julien Henderson to be Ensign, vice Johnston.—31st: Ensign T. A. Ashe to be Lieutenant, vice Sutton, who exchanges with the Hon. F. G. Noel.—49th: Lieut. A. Cassin to be Captain, vice Sumner.—54th: Capt. L. M Pherson to be Captain, vice J. Richardson.—57th: Lieut. H. J. Hayter to be Lieut.-Colonel, vice Winter; Ensign G. G. Bowyer to be Lieutenant, vice Hayter, vice Power, G. St Julien Henderson to be Ensign, vice Johnston.—61st: Ensign T. A. Ashe to be Lieutenant, vice Sutton, who exchanges with the Hon. F. G. Noel.—72nd: Ensign A. O. Lord to be Lieutenant, vice Frost; Ensign W H O Campbell to be Lieutenant, vice Lord.—78th: Capt. C. Sutton to be Captain, vice O. Lonsdale; Lieut. J. R. Lamert to be Captain, vice Brevet Major T H Hemmans, Ensign J. M. Hewson to be Lieutenant, vice Sutton; Ensign the Hon. H. Forbes to be Lieutenant, vice Lamert A. M. Cassan to be Lieutenant, vice Swayne: G V Arbuckle, to be Ensign, vice Cassan 93d: Capt. D Herbert to be Captain, vice O L Gore. Ensign F Nicholl to be Lieutenant, vice Frost; G. Warrender to be Ensign, vice Nicoll

2nd West India Regiment.—Lieut. D Lyons to be Captain, vice Seymour.

Royal Regiment of Horse Guards Blue.—Sergt. Major W Jones, to be Ensign, vice O'Connell UNATTACHED.—To be Major. Brevet-Major G. Dawson.—To be Captains Lieut J. Cotton, Lieut. R. Webber.

BREVET.—To be Majors in the Army: Capt. T Ashe; Capt. E Williams.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE, Dec. 29.—Royal Engineers. First Lieut. W. Yolland to be Second Captain, vice Biggs; Second Lieut. H. Drummond to be First Lieutenant, vice Yolland Royal Artillery: Cadet H. A Smyth to be Second Lieutenant, vice Calder, Cadet J. W Phillips to be Second Lieutenant, vice Polerki; Cadet E. N Mayne to be Second Lieutenant, vice Neville; Cadet F. H. Lancelot to be Second Lieutenant vice H. F Strange; R. B. Jenkins to be Second Lieutenant, vice Wilkes; Cadet E. R Ford to be Second Lieutenant, vice Fortescue; Cadet C. Waller to be Second Lieutenant, vice W. H Cox; Cadet R. K Frevth to be Second Lieutenant vice O Connel , Cadet C W. Grey to be Second Lieutenant, vice King; Cadet F M M Ormsby to be Second Lieutenant vice Noel, Cadet E Palmer to be Second Lieut. vice Cafford; Cadet O H Gilbert to be Second Lieutenant, vice Bettinghan; Cadet T Vaenitart to be Second Lieutenant, vice Du Pa ; Cadet L G. Paget to be Second Lieutenant, vice M Adye; Cadet R. Phelips to be Second Lieutenant, vice Warre; Cadet H. Hamilton to be Second Lieutenant, vice Franklin, Cadet H. J. K Fitzgerald to be Second Lieut-nant, vice Hawkins.

Royal Engineers.—Cadet C. S. Hutchinson to be Second Lieutenant, vice Cowper; Cadet W. Lee to be Second Lieutenant, vice Babb; Cadet T. Farley to be Second Lieutenant, vice Napier; Cadet J. Stokes to be Second Lieutenant, vice Burchnell, Cadet W. H. Vavasour to be Second Lieutenant, vice Lee.

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 28.—Royal Marines.—Cadets J Crocket and H. N. Gell to be Second Lieutenants.

BANKRUPTCIES SUPERSEDED. J. PHILLIPS, tailor, Pinner's-hall court, City — D COLLINS, machine-maker, Bennett's-place

BANKRUPTS.—W. VINCENT, Wellington Somerset, carpenter.—W. C. CARTER, draper, Ashford, Kent.—J. and W. WOLLAND farmers, Hooe.—C POWELL, watch manufacturer, Clerkenwell.—S. COOK, draper, Bishop Wearmouth.—W. BRADSHAW, wine merchant, Sheffield.—E. PUGHE, tanner, Everton, Lancashire —W. THOMPSON, ironchant, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

MARRIAGES

At Copenhagen, the wife of the Rev. Brett Stevenson Ellis, A.M., of a son. —At Naples, the lady of T. C Boode, Esq., of Lurkmoon, of a son and heir.—At Cheltenham, the lady of Captain J. W. Reynolds, 11th Hussars, of a daughter.—At Brompton park, the lady of Sir Charles Forbes, Bart., of a son.—At Bath, the wife of a son.—At Bath, the wife of a son.—At Bath, the wife

THE NEW INFANTRY CAP.

In our No. 77, we engraved a new cap proposed to be substituted for that now worn by our infantry. The new pattern does not appear to have been generally approved of, and that now represented has been manufactured by Mr. Lock, of St. James's-street, to supersede the proposed one. It is, certainly, of more handsome form the cap is covered with black cloth, the crown and brim being of black varnished leather; in front is a brass star, surmounted with the crown, and across is a large brass curb chain, fastened on each side with brass rosettes, and, in the upper front, joined to an ornamental brass cup, in which is set a white worsted bill. This cap is certainly much more soldier-like than its predecessor; but we think it is still of somewhat tasteless design.

THE NEW INFANTRY CAP.

MEETINGS OF WATERFORD HOUNDS.—On Monday, the 18th instant, the meet was at Mr. Hackett's, of Butlerstown, which proved, however, no prize in the lottery of hunting, for there was a blank drawn. The pack then went to Bally brennock, where, as usual, there was a sure find. The hounds broke cover at the brush of a game fox in the direction of Kilourn, to which they ran without a check. Reynard pushed on from thence to Ballycraddock, passing in on Carrigs-Town, and then doubled back nearly over the same ground, thence through Ballylegate and Carrigavoun, and into the plantations of Pembrokestown, on to Sugarloaf-hill, through Kilronan, skirting on Butlerstown and Mr. Lane Fox's covers. This brilliant run, of upwards of twenty miles, terminated at Hurley's, of Kilbarry, where "few, few did part, where many met."

THE FASHIONS.

We this week commence our promised illustrations of the fashions, with such improvements as we have been enabled to obtain from higher sources than hitherto; and we hope the change will prove acceptable, especially to our fair readers.

DESCRIPTION OF THE FIGURES.

No. 1. TOILETTE DE VILLE, promenade costume. A purple velvet hat, ornamented with a bird of Paradise. A fawn-colour cachemire pelisse, embroidered down each side the corsage and front with silk braid. A girdle of silk rope with long ends and tassels.

No. 2. COSTUME DE BAL. A hair coiffure, ornamented with a rose on each side. A pink crape dress, ornamented with five volans, or flounces, of lace, fastened up with roses.

MODES PARISIENNES.

At the Italian Opera, the French Opera, and the Comic Opera, the most elegant ladies adopt for coiffure small LACE CAPS in a variety of fanciful shapes; sometimes it is a veil of English net placed flat on the head, and raised up on each side; sometimes a lace lappet is placed flat on the head, and fastened under the bow of hair, the ends falling down on each side.

TURBANS, of very small dimensions, are worn, composed of gold tissue.

Black velvet TOQUES and PETIT-BORDS with lace crowns are ornamented with a heron aigrette and a camelia flower, or with a marabout plume and a tuft of roses.

Velvet is generally adopted for HATS; the most admired are ornamented with two very light feathers, one of which falls on the left side; the other is placed across the brim. Some are simply ornamented with a twist of velvet placed on flat. The centre of the brims of HATS is always wider than the sides.

DRESSES. Some charming toilettes de bal have two skirts of crape—one pink—over which is placed one of water green. This toilette is also made of tulle of two shades of the same colour, the lightest uppermost; or of light colour tulle over a skirt of white poult de soie.

DRESSES with the corsage laced in front are at present in great vogue, guimpes (chemisettes) with small collars accompany these dresses; they are of entredeux (insertions) of embroidery or lace.

CLOTH is frequently adopted for morning-dresses; they are usually ornamented with passementerie (silk gimp trimming).

ERMINE is the fur almost invariably adopted for full toilette. Paletines (short cloaks) made of satin or velvet, are trimmed with ermine; it is also adopted for muffs and the borders of dresses.

FEATHERS have an astonishing run this season. VELVET HATS and CAPOTES for morning wear, and also lighter COIFFURES for the evening, are ornamented with birds of Paradise in brilliant colours; marabouts and willow feathers are in great request, and many tulle and gauze ball dresses are ornamented with feathers.

RINGLETS and BANDS are still in favour for HAIR COIFFURES; the hair at the back of the head, en negligé, is frequently enclosed in a silk or chenille net, or in black lace, and fastened with three gold pins.

THE ROTUNDA, AT THE BANK OF ENGLAND,

THE ROTUNDA AT THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

On Friday next, January 5, or "Dividend day," this spacious apartment will be the focus of interest at the Bank of England; for herein are paid, half-yearly, the dividends, or annual interest of the National Debt. The dividends on the Three per Cent. Consols, Bank Annuities, &c., are paid on January 5, and July 5. The recipients frequently attend in person, ladies as well as gentlemen acting as their own agents in the pleasant business of receiving money. There are certain days in each week appointed for the transfers of stock, which are mostly effected by brokers. When an actual bargain has been made the parties go into the Bank, and the particular clerk on whom the duty devolves examines the books, to see if the seller actually has the stock which he proposes to sell. When all is ascertained to be correct, the transfer is made out, the books are signed, and the business being completed, the purchaser is from thenceforth, (until he parts with his right,) in possession of "money in the funds;" that is, he is entitled to receive certain half-yearly sums of money called "dividends," and may attend at the Rotunda himself to have them paid to him.

The Rotunda is a spacious circular chamber, with a lofty dome, 57 feet in diameter, crowned by a lantern, the divisions of which are formed by the architectural figures called Caryatides. The dome is one of the most striking works of art of its class in the metropolis.

Lord William Russell, formerly Ambassador to the Court of Berlin, arrived in town at the close of last week from the Continent, to be present at the approaching alliance of his son, Mr. Francis Hastings Russell, with Lady Elizabeth Sackville West, eldest daughter of the Lord Chamberlain, Earl Delawarr.

IPSWICH STEEPLE CHASE.—On Friday last a match came off at Bramford, over three miles of country, between Lord Hill's mare, Recovery, rode by Mr. Land, and Captain Griffith's grey horse Warwick, rode by Mr. Brett. It was a well-contested match. After both horses had been ditched within three fields of home, Lord Hill's mare proved to be the winner.

See next page.

TWELFTH-NIGHT CHARACTERS.

SIR TIMOTHY LICKSPIT

Fanned for puff, and blowing bladders,
And climbing up imaginary ladders.
Sir T. at leave and birthnight;
Shows all his teeth, but doesn't bite;
Likes cockaw on the sharp look out,
He follows every star about;
He sees his eyes with longing on it,
And hopes to pop his grasp upon it.

LORD KEYVIVE.

This is a minister, and most strange to say,
He'd never lo'n any other way:
He thinks the hat he sticks on to begin,
At every step receives a feather in;
Then dons he mask as every body knows,
That none may see the moves of eyes and nose.
His coat is up cudid, and the pockets large,
Filled with the loaves and fishes in his charge;
His nether man is comely, his sex grace
He turns his toes out, but he keeps in place.

QUEEN DULCEDOMUM.

We bow quite low to thee, great Madam,
We dost on Queens, for seldom have we had'en;
Whether in Queens, or any other way
Man loves to be beneath a woman's sway.
Had not mine so lovely and so pure,
Long may thy reign and happiness endure,
Each given blessing thrive return to thee,
And lend thy name an immortality.

BRAHAM CHUBB.

Is this a nobleman, or what?
Grad, what a splendid suit he's got.
His ruff and bollwigbithness bespeak
He has seen his toes for many a week.
What's he there?—a suitor to the Queen?
No, my good friends, a sort of go-between—
A latch upon the door; a living key
To keep the latners from the Ministry;
Keeker of lotterers from the Cabinet-door;
A sort of upper lackey—nothing more;

KING JOLLY THE FIRST.

This is a king, as a king should be,
With a nose to smell, and good eyes to see;
A jolly good smile on his noble face,
It adds so h a charm to his kingly grace;
The hand that is open bespeaks him free,
To grant or receive in every degree;
The royal big fist that is doubled up tight,
Shows him ready and willing to strike for his right;
No rock on the earth ever firmer has stood,
Betokening the whole constitution is good;
The crown on his head, so jauntily thrown,
Speaks the gift of his people, of old and of his own;
He wears it, 'tis true, with inimitable grace,
And it covers, just nicely, a very bald place.
So hail! to the king who is merry and wise,
With an eye to the pudding, and teeth for the pies:
Takes the sword from old Justice the plum-cake to carve,
With a warrant that none of his subjects shall starve.

LORD TEETOTUM TURNABOUT.

What, noble patriot, are you once more in?
Those who can turn I know can always spin.
Teetotum add, with every square a face,
Whichever side is up you're in the place;
You stand true patriot, just to see all fair,
Knowing they cheat if you're not always there;

LADY SHUTTLECOCK FLOUNCE.

I am a lady of high degree,
A star in the crown of nobility,
Not feigning to think, in this happy isle,
Of those swarming creatures Ma called canaille.
I turn up my noble nose so high
That nothing but stars can catch my eye,
Except, indeed, when I go to court,
Where things are made of superior sort;

THE HONOURABLE HECTOR WELLINGTON POOP.

My Pa put me into the brave Old Guard,
The duty is really to me quite hard;
Indeed I should wish the time at the deuce
If it didn't a daily sensation produce.
With my helmet and breast-plate, and dashing dress suits
Though I get up a ladder to get in my boots,
And that nasty thing, War is all over and done,
Or else in the army I'd never been one.

SIGNOR HAYDYNI MOZARTI CRIBBINI.

Ah! great conductor, what a mighty fass,
What strange ferocity to wheedle us;
Who would imagine from that brigand look,
That music spoil perhaps a decent cock.
Oh! sattis muse, who made such men as these,
To finger all our cash, with their false keys;
They rush in shoals their trump'ry notes to play,
And in return, take our bank notes away.

LORD BOTHEREM BEAK.

Justice is blind they say,
Which way?
The Law has got an eagle eye,
And I do'y
Any man I ever saw,
T'escape its claw!

PUNCH.

Good Mr. Punch, I'm glad to meet you,
With wine and Christmas-cake I'll treat you,
Since you have grown so mighty grand,
And hard'n hoarse in the Strand;
Sit down, good Punch! your friends are all about you,
Stir up your spicy bowl! Christmas is naught without you.

LADY NEWCOME

Come to court at last, fair maid?
Better you at home had staid;
For, if you should tarry here,
In its killing atmosphere,
Thy young heart, so pure and true,
Finding it has naught to do,
Will re-shape its old haut ton,
Which, fashionably smiling on,
Hates thee, with a kind embrace,
For bringing such a charming face.

SHIPPING INTELLIGENCE.

NOTICE TO MARINERS.

The following are posted at Lloyd's :—" Hydrographic-office, Admiralty, Dec. 15th, 1843.

" LIGHT OF MORUSS TANGE, CATTEGAT.—On the 1st of November a fixed light was established on the point called Morsus Tange, near Falkenburgh, on the Swedish shore of the Cattegat. It is elevated ninety-five feet above the level of the sea, and is visible at a distance of above fifteen miles."

" HONFLEUR HARBOUR LIGHT.—A fixed red light is to be shown this day, on the head of the new eastern pier of Honfleur, and the old light is then to be abandoned yards south-east thereof, will be discontinued. The new light is about thirty-six feet above the level of the sea, and is visible about eight miles."

The Alfred, from Charente to Liverpool, is wrecked near Wexford: master drowned.

BIDEFORD, Dec 23.—The Arab from Quebec remains on the sands near the lighthouse, and it is feared she has received considerable damage to her bottom by the heavy sea last night

CLYDE, Dec. 23.—Arrived, the Jamaica from Quebec, decks swept, and one man overboard.

HOLYHEAD, Dec. 24.—The Betsy, from Runcorn to Dublin, was abandoned off Saunbsy on the 22nd instant, having been in contact with the Albion, from Liverpool to Savannah, crew saved.—Nabob, from Calcutta to Liverpool, ran ashore during a thick fog this evening in Carnarvon Bay; crew saved.

SANDY (Orkneys), Dec 15.—It blew a heavy gale yesterday from the W. and W.S.W., and a hi continues to blow hard. The Refiger, from Shields, drove and went on shore on Otterswick, but is expected off without much damage. The Friends also got on shore at Otterswick.

BRISTOL, Dec 21.—The Duchess of Gloucester, from Teignmouth to Gloucester, got on shore on Portshend-point, on the 22nd inst., is filged, and fills with the tide. Arrived, the George Burridge, from Miramichi; Cornet, from Quebec.

SHIELDS, Dec. 22.—Arrived, the Jane from Picton, United States.

LERWICK, Dec. 16 The Pandora, from Shields to Constantinople, has put back to this port, with loss of bulwarks, &c., and decks torn away.

HULL, Dec. 23.—Wind, moderate breeze. Arrived, the Grainger from Miramichi.

LIMERICK, Dec. 22.—The Atalanta, from Newfoundland to Bristol, has put in here to repair, having been struck by a heavy sea on the 6th instant, and had her decks swept, stanchions split, &c.

GIBRALTAR, Dec. 16.—The Vaiker, from Newport to Barcelona, put back here yesterday, with stern-frame started and main rigging damaged. It blew a heavy gale from the eastward on the 12th and 13th inst

AMSTERDAM, Dec 20.—The Apollo, bound to this port, left Sunderland on the 14th ult., and has not since been heard of. A board, painted black inside and green outside, engraved " E. Bensley, I. N.," has been washed on shore on Ameland.

NIEUWEDIEP, Dec. 19.—The British Packet, from Rotterdam to Dublin, has put in here, with damage

HONFLEUR, Dec. 19.—The Courier steamer, from Havre to this port, is on shore near here.

PARIS, Dec. 22.—The Arthur, from Granville to Gundaloupe, has put into Brest, with damage.

GOTTENBURG, Dec. 6.—The Fritz, from Stockholm to Nantes, has put in here, with damage and leaky.

Accounts from Batavia, of the 2nd of December, say that the English brig Isley, Captain Samuel Galt, 283 tons burden, coming from Sydney, and bound to China, with a cargo of cedar and sandal wood, was wrecked on the 27th of July, on the cape to the east of the island of Rasa, belonging to the territory of the Sultan of Sumanap. The crew, consisting of 11 men, besides the captain and his wife, were all saved.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

Advertisements not cannot be received after Seven o clock on Thursday morning

THEATRE ROYAL, ADELPHI. — Holiday Entertainments—The Best Pantomime of the Season !—Dash of Mother Goose Revived !—Gorgeous Scenery — Magnificent Processions, and Highly Ludicrous, Laughable Situations, Unlimited and Irresistible Comic Effects—MONDAY, January 1st, 1844, and during the Week, THE ROBINSONS continues to attract Crowded Audiences nightly. HARLEQUIN BLUE BEARD; or, THE FAIRY OF THE SILVER CRESCENT.—Clown, Mr. T. Matthews, the Grimaldi of the stage; Columbine, Miss Bullen; Harlequin, Mr. Wieland—Boxes, 4s.; Pit, 2s.; Gallery, 1s. Second Price at 9. Doors open at 6, commences at 7 before 7 o'Clock.

THE OJIBBEWAY INDIANS.—EGYPTIAN HALL PICCADILLY.

MR. CATLIN has re-arranged his NORTH AMERICAN INDIAN COLLECTION, in the EGYPTIAN HALL, to remain open for a short time, with the extraordinary additional interest of REAL and WILD INDIANS, from the wilds of America, illustrating the Collection with their various Dances, Songs, &c. Open DAILY, from Twelve to Three; and from Seven to Ten, in the Evening. The Indians in the room from half-past Twelve to Two, and from half-past Seven to Eight, on which occasion Mr Catlin will be present explaining.—Admission, 2s. 6d.; Children, 1s

THE SHRINE of NAPOLEON, or GOLDEN CHAMBER, containing the camp bed on which he died in exile, late the property of Prince Lucien, for which Madame TUSSAUD and SONS gave £1,000 at the Sale of Marengo, the Coronation Cot of the King of Rome; the original picture of Napoleon, for which he sat to Lefevre; Maria Louisa, by Gerard, his masterpiece; the King of Rome, from Life, Lucien, by Lethiere; the celebrated Military Carriage used by Mr. Bullock, which, at the ministry of Government, from the Prince Regent, for 2000; the Table of the Marshals, valued at 12,000; the Clothes he wore as an exile—being together a matchless exhibition at Madame TUSSAUD and SONS, Bazaar, Baker-street, Portman-square. Admittance, one large room, 1s.; two rooms of Napoleon and Rome, 2s. 6d. Open from eleven o'clock in the morning till dusk; and from seven in the evening till ten

CHRISTMAS HOLIDAYS.

AT the ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION an increase of POWERFUL and BRILLIANT EFFECTS in ELECTRICITY are contributed by ARMSTRONG'S HYDRO ELECTRIC MACHINE. A new field is opened for interesting, on a magnified scale, a variety of facts in ART, SCIENCE and NATURAL HISTORY, by means of LONGBOTTOM'S OPAQUE MICROSCOPE, showing also an extraordinary OPTICAL ILLUSION. NEW DISSOLVING VIEWS. A List of the POPULAR LECTURES which have delivered during the Season, and are now in the Hall of Manufactures. Holloway's ORIGINAL CRAYON DRAWINGS from RAPHAEL'S CARTOONS, humorously illustrated. The MOTHER DIVER and DIVING BELL Conductor of the Band T. Wallis, Mus. Doc. Admission 1s. Schools Half-price.

PROCRASTINATION!! Our natural proneness to defer visiting any sight (however wonderful) which we imagine we can see any day, has been strongly exemplified, for no sooner was it made known, (and in consequence of the general influence of the promises at the Baker street Bazaar, that the GLACIARIUM would finally close on the 25th of next month, then 5000 persons simultaneously hurried last week to witness this admirable wonder of novelties. Skaters and Sempic visitors are therefore invited, while the opportunity offers, to witness this wonderful discovery, with its additional attractions of SLEDGES on the Frozen Lake. Open from 9 even in the morning till dusk, when it is beautifully illuminated till Ten. The Bands Musicals will commence every evening at Seven, and, by permission, it is announced, that the members of the Gladiatorial Club will meet on Monday and Thursday evenings, and perform their elegant Evolutions to Music. Admission 1s. Children 6d.

GREAT ATTRACTION FOR THE CHRISTMAS HOLIDAYS.

CHINESE COLLECTION, HYDE-PARK CORNER.—For nearly two years this unique Collection has maintained its position as the most attractive Exhibition in the Metropolis, having been honoured not only by the visits of her Majesty and Prince Albert—of the chief part of our Nobility, and the distinguished foreigners sojourning in this country, but also by the most flattering notices from the public press. The Proprietor, anxious to increase the popularity of the most extraordinary Collection, by enabling all classes to become acquainted with its wonderful contents, has reduced the price of admission TO ONE SHILLING EACH PERSON

Omnibuses run from all parts of London to the CHINESE COLLECTION, which will be open daily, during the Christmas holidays, from Ten in the Morning until Ten at Night.—ADMISSION ONE SHILLING.

BAKER'S PHEASANTRY, BEAUFORT-STREET, KING'S ROAD, CHELSEA.—GAME of every description. Gold, Silver, White, Pied, and common Tame Pheasants for Aviaries. Wild ditto, for Preserves; Black Game and Grouse. Every variety of Ornamental Aquatic Fowl, Fancy Pigeons, Useful and Ornamental Poultry, &c.—And at HALF-MOON PASSAGE, Gracechurch-street, City

THE PUBLIC OUGHT NOT TO PAY MORE FOR TOILET ARTICLES THAN WE CHARGE FOR THE VERY BEST THAT CAN BE MADE, viz.—One large pot of Shaving Powder, 1s.; One Hair Restorative, 1s.; One Preserver, 1s.; One Tooth Powder, 1s.; and One Wash Cake, 6d. These are the highest prices YOU OUGHT TO PAY, and the lowest, to remunerate, WE OUGHT TO CHARGE.—GROSSMITH and CO., 118, Strand.—Manufactory, Gerard-street, Soho.

BETTS'S PATENT BRANDY.—Notwithstanding the publicity for many years past given to the superiority of BETTS'S PATENT FRENCH DISTILLED BRANDY over every other spirit, British or Foreign, it is yet but partially known: J. T. BETTS and Co. therefore feel it a duty they owe to the public and themselves, to invite a comparison between the Patent and the French Brandy, until every family in the kingdom in which Brandy is consumed have made trial of their Patent Brandy—and consequently discontinued the use of the Foreign article. Their respective merits are fairly developed in the following Testimonials, to which they again beg to refer

EXTRACTS FROM TESTIMONIALS.

" I do not hesitate to express my conviction that your Patent Brandy is fully as free from everything injurious to health, and contains as pure a spirit, as the best varieties of Foreign Brandy. " EDWARD TURNER,

" John T. Betts, Esq." " Professor of Chemistry in the University of London.

" I am bound to say, and do assert it with confidence, that, for purity of spirit, this cannot be surpassed; and that your Patent Brands also quite free from those acids which, though minute in quantity, always contaminate the Foreign Spirit. " JOSEPH HUME.

" J. T. Betts, Esq." " Chemist to his Majesty.

" Your Brandy is free from unconbined acid and astringent matter, which, more or less, in most of the Brandies imported from France. " JOHN THOMAS COOPER,

" To Mr. Betts." Lecturer on Chemistry.

It is the perfect freedom from the above objectionable qualities, and its agreeable similarity in flavour to the finest samples of Cognac Brandy, that constitute the peculiar value of the PATENT BRANDY

J. T. BETTS and Co. are at length enabled to give a distinct assurance that arrangements will be completed in the course of the present month, which will afford an unfailing protection to purchasers against the continuance of those frauds, from which they have hitherto so extensively suffered, as each bottle will be secured by a Patent Metallic Capsule, or covering for the cork, of solid metal, with their name, address, and the words " BETTS'S PATENT BRANDY" embossed upon it; the forgery of which subjects the guilty party to a penalty of £50 for every offence. The valuable Spirit is manufactured only at the Distillery, No. 7, Smithfield-bars, leading to St. John-street; where it may be obtained, either sold or coloured, in quantities not less than Two Gallons at 18s. per Gallon for Cash on delivery.

JONES'S £6 6s GOLD HORIZONTAL WATCHES are the most appropriate Christmas presents for Young Ladies, and the £4 4s Levers for Youths. Warranted for 12 months. JONES'S, 338, Strand, opposite Somerset House.

STOOPING of the SHOULDERS and CONTRACTION of the CHEST, are entirely prevented and gently and effectually removed in Youth and Ladies and Gentlemen, by the occasional use of the patent 3s. James's Chest Expander' which is light and simple, easily employed outwardly or inwardly without hands beneath the arms, inconvertible construct or impediment to exercise. Sent per post by Mr. A. Simpon, Wholesale Depôt, 40, Fawstock-street, Strand, London, or full particulars on receiving a postage stamp

OFFICE FOR PATENTS OF INVENTIONS AND REGISTRATION OF DESIGNS, No. 14, LINCOLN'S-INN-FIELDS.

THE printed Instructions, and every information as to protection by Letters Patent or Registration under whose articles of utility may be protected for three years, in the three Kingdoms, for from £12 to £15), may be obtained, gratis, by applying, personally or by letter, pre-paid, to Office for Patents 14, Lincoln's-inn-fields. ALEX. PRINGE.

TO COMMERCIAL GENTLEMEN, AND OTHERS

THE CATHEDRAL HOTEL AND TAVERN, 48, St. Paul's Church-yard, and 50, Old Change, one door from Cheapside, has superior accommodation at moderate charges. Soup, Fish, and Joints, ready from One to Seven o'clock. Dinner off the joint, 1s. 6d.; with soup, fish, or entrées, 2s. 6d. Very choice old Wines and Spirits, and the celebrated Pamch. Rooms for private parties, Hot and Cold Baths, well-aired Beds, &c. Head and Co.'s splendid Scotch and Bass and Co.'s Pale India Ale.

MR. COCKLE'S PILLS for INDIGESTION, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

"If you are in possession of better means,
Cand..dly inform me of them, make use of these."—HORACE.

This FAMILY APERIENT will be found particularly valuable in every form of indigestion, with torpid liver and sometimes jaundice, as in gout, bilious attacks, sick headache, and nervous irritability from a deranged state of the stomach, &c —May be had of all medicine vendors.

PLUMBERS, PAINTERS, BUILDERS, and others, supplied with Crown and sheet Window GLASS, and Sheet PLATE, for prints, glazing &c., in any quantity, at manufacturing prices :—

Tarps..... 2s. per gallon Milled lead in sheets..... 18s. per cwt.
L. Oil..... 2s. 6d. " White and..... 26s. "

Colours, pipe, brushes, &c., equally low, and quality warranted. Complete lists of prices may be had on application to T. COGAN, 8, Princes street, Leicester-square.

LAMP SHADES and GAS GLASSES of every description, at R. COGAN'S, 48, Leicester-square, London.—Gas Contractors, Fitters, Glass-merchants, and Dealers, supplied cheaper than at any other house. All the patent Chimneys and Glasses kept in store, among others, is named a New Glass for Dockrar's Fish-tail Burners, at the same price but far superior to the Scotch dishes. The only house where may be had Cogan's Patent Improved Argand, a chimney that destroys smoke, increases light, and effects a greater saving in the consumption than any other chimney. Lists of 100 patterns of gas glasses, with prices affixed, will be sent (gratis) on receipt of the address. French Shades, for covering Clocks, Models, &c., of every shape and size.

BIELEFELD'S PATENT QUAQUAVERSAL GLASS STAND AND ALBERT SHAVING GLASS.—Plate Glass Fixtures, Upholsterers &c., are respectfully informed that the above-mentioned Stands for Toilet Glasses, Shaving Glasses, &c., are now on sale at the manufactory, where the trade are invited to inspect them. The principle for which this patent has been obtained is perfectly simple. The Stands are elegant in appearance, most expressible at all angles, and cannot get out of order A prospectus, illustrated with a variety of designs may be had on application, enclosing one penny stamp, at Papier Mâché Works, 19, Wellington-street North, Strand.

WIRE-WORK, HOT-WATER APPARATUS, GREENHOUSES, &c.—ST. THOMAS BAKER, MANOR HOUSE, MANOR PLACE, KING'S ROAD, CHELSEA, Manufacturer of Invisible Wire Fence, to resist Grazing Stock, and rendered Rabbit proof. Wire Work in Trainers, Arches for Walks, Bordering, Flower Stands, Pheasantries, &c. Horticultural Buildings, Green and Hothouses, Conservatories, &c. The same heated by Hot-Water Apparatus, on improved and economical principles. Parties waited on in town or country, and drawings and estimates free. Work for the trade as usual. Wards Cases, or Domestic Greenhouses.

STOCK FOR A CIRCULATING LIBRARY

TO BE DISPOSED OF FOR ONLY TWENTY-FIVE POUNDS, Five Hundred Volumes of NOVELS and ROMANCES, including the Works of Scott, James Bulwer, Marryatt, Dickens, Ainsworth, Cooper, &c.; and many of their recent publications, "American Notes," "Last of the Barons," "Windsor Castle," "Our Mess," "Handy Andy," &c.; they are in good condition, warranted perfect, and may be seen and a list obtained at A. MARESON'S Magazine Warehouse, 9, Temple street, bottom of Bouverie-street, Fleet street

NELSON'S PATENT OPAQUE GELATINE, Half the Price of Isinglass.—CAUTION: From the increasing demands for NELSON'S OPAQUE GELATINE, many inferior articles are imposed on the Public to guard against which, and for a protection to purchasers, it is sold in packets only, by most respectable grocers, pastry cooks, and oilmen, in two sizes, viz., 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., 5s., 10s., and 18s. each packet, bearing the Patentee's signature. Extract from Dr. Ure's testimonial, dated, 6, 1840 :—" I find Mr. G. Nelson's Patent Opaque Gelatine to be at least equal in strength and purity, if not superior, to the best isinglass, for every culinary purpose; it is entirely free from any impregnation of acid, such as I have found to exist in other kinds of gelatine in the London market." The Opaque Gelatine is well adapted for hotels, taverns, caste ine and ship stores, and a safe and profitable commodity for exportation.—Emanoe Mills, Warwick, and 14, Bucklersbury.

TO ECONOMISTS.—FOREIGN WINES.—From 10s. to 70s. per dozen saved.

	20s. per dozen saved.
Sherry (pale or brown),	21s., 24s., 30s., 36s. and 48s, per doz.
Port from the wood	24 30 36 42 and 54	do.
Ditto old crusted	26 30 36 and 40	do.
Madeira	27 40 and 48	do.
Claret	18 20 30 40 50 and 60	do.
Champagne (pints 2s extra)	42 54 and 72	do.

Bucellas, 27s; Frontiac 24s; Lisbon, 24s; Marsala, 21s; Cape, 15s per dozen. Bottles, 1s. 6d per doz.; hampers, at ten rate of 9d per dozen. The advantage of cash payments both to purchasers and sellers needs no comment; and Messrs. Cornwall and Co. invite attention to the above prices, at which quantities of one dozen and upwards are supplied and delivered free in town, payment being absolutely requisite at the time of ordering, or on delivery. Orders, per post, must be accompanied by a remittance or a references for payment in London. The corks of all bottles will be sealed, and the wine, if not approved of, exchanged, free of expense, or the money returned. CORNWALL and Co. 14, WALBROOK, City.

FIDDLE AND PRINCE ALBERT'S PATTERN PLATE.

A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Manufacturing Silversmiths, No. 14, Cornhill, London, opposite the Bank of England.—The best wrought SILVER SPOONS and FORKS, Fiddle Pattern, 7s. 2d. per ounce; the Prince Albert's Pattern 7s. 6d. per ounce. The articles may be had lighter or heavier, at the same price per ounce:—

The Fiddle	oz.	s.	d.	£	s.	d.	Prince Albert's.	oz.	s.	d.	£	s.	d.
12 Table Spoons	30	7	2	10	15	0	12 Table Spoons	32	7	6	12	0	0
12 Dessert ditto	23	7	2	7	3	4	12 Dessert ditto	25	7	6	9	15	0
12 Table Forks	30	7	2	10	15	0	12 Table Forks	40	7	6	15	0	0
12 Dessert ditto	20	7	2	7	3	4	12 Dessert ditto	26	7	6	9	15	0
2 Gravy Spoons	10	7	2	3	11	8	2 Gravy Spoons	12	7	6	4	10	0
1 Soup Ladle	10	7	2	3	11	8	1 Soup Ladle	12	7	6	4	10	0
4 Sauce ditto	10	7	8	3	16	8	4 Sauce ditto	12	8	0	4	16	0
4 Salt Spoons (gilt strong)				1	10	0	4 Salt Spoons (strong gilt)				2	2	0
1 Fish Slice				2	10	0	1 Fish Slice				3	10	0
12 Tea Spoons	10	7	8	3	16	8	12 Tea Spoons	14	8	0	5	12	0
1 Pair Sugar Tongs							1 Pair Sugar Tongs				1	8	0

Messrs SAVORY and SONS recommend the Prince Albert's Pattern. It is very novel, of unsurpassed beauty

LOTT'S GRAND SEVENTH ANNUAL DISTRIBUTION OF RICH TWELFTH CAKES, 680 Prizes in 5000 Shares, will take place on FRIDAY, January 5th, 1844, at 77, CHEAPSIDE.—The Drawing to commence at Eight o'Clock in the Morning.

LIST OF PRIZES.

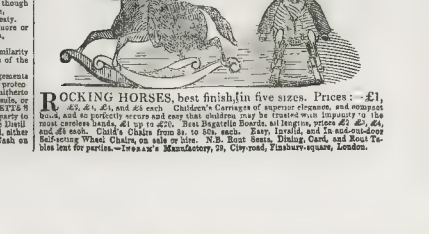
50 Rich Cakes	..	..	value each, £1	1	0 £50.
200 Ditto	..	..	"	0 10	0 100.
400 Ditto	..	..	"	0 5	0 100.
6150	..	..	..	..	..
5000 Shares, One Shilling each	..	..	..	..	£250.

The Prizes given on Saturday, the 6th of January, free from extra charges.

W. LOTT begs to announce to his Friends and the Public, that he has, at the earnest request of many Subscribers to his Annual Twelfth Cake Lottery, extended it from 2000 to 5000 Shares, giving 680 Rich Cakes, which cannot be surpassed in quality.—An early application for Tickets is particularly requested, to prevent disappointments.

£200. GRAND TWELFTH CAKE DISTRIBUTION. ALL PRIZES.

T. YEATES, Confectioner, 23, Strand, near Charing-Cross, and the corner of Dean-street, Westminster, established Fifty Years, begs leave to inform his friends, that, in consequence of the disappointment so generally experienced by the very limited number of shares (1500) issued last year, he is induced, on the present occasion, to distribute £200 worth of rich Twelfth Cake, in 3000 shares, at 2s. each. The drawing to take place at nine o'clock, on SATURDAY morning, JANUARY 6, 1844, at 23, Strand. List of prizes:—Four at £5 2s.; ten at £2 2s.; thirty at £1 1s.; 100 at 10s. 6d.; 150 at 5s.; and 2596 at 1s. Persons residing in the country, sending twenty-five postage stamps, or a Post-office order, will have the shares sent them by return of post.—T. Yeates pledges himself, the cakes shall be of the best and richest quality possible to be made.—Route, Balls, Dinners, Suppers, and Wedding Breakfasts, supplied, in town or country, at the lowest charges. Plate, Glass, Rout Seats, &c., Lent on Hire.



ROCKING HORSES, best finish, in five sizes. Prices :—£1, £2, £3, £4, and £5 each Children's Carriages of superior elegance, and compact build, and so perfectly secure and easy that children may be trusted with impunity to the most careless hands, £1 up to £20. Rout Bagatelle Boards, at 1ns prize, £2 £3, £4, and £5 each. Child's Chairs from 5s. to 30s. each. Easy, Invalid, and In and-out-door Self-acting Wheel Chairs, on sale or hire. N.B. Rout Seats, Dining Card, and Rout Tables lent for parties.—TREMAN'S Manufactory, 28, City-road, Finsbury-square, London.

SYLVESTER SOUND, THE SOMNAMBULIST. By HENRY COCKTON This work reaches its third number on January 1st, 1844 Four Illustrations.—Price One Shilling

A NEW WORK FOR THE YOUNG.

Just ready, price 2s 6d, with beautiful Illustrations, from designs by Gilbert,

HAPPY HOURS; or the Home Story Book. By MARY CHERWELL.—London: Bowdery and Kerby, 190, Oxford street

READING FOR THE YOUNG.—Now ready, price One Penny

THE LITTLE MAGAZINE of USEFUL and ENTERTAINING KNOWLEDGE, for JANUARY, 1844.—London: S. Gilbert, 51 and 52, Paternoster row. Edinburgh: J. Johnstone.

Just ready, in foolscap 8vo, price 6s. 6d.,

THE SABBATH COMPANION; being Essays on First Principles of Christian Faith and Practice. Designed especially for the use of Young Persons. By THOMAS DALE, M.A., Canon of St. Paul's, and Vicar of St. Bride's, London. Bowdery and Kerby, 190, Oxford street.

THE ARTIZAN, No. 12, is now ready, with Title-page and Analytical Index, price One Shilling. The first volume may now be had in cloth lettered. It is, with other parts of direct serious cognizance, plain, practical, and scientific. This number has been enlarged and enhanced in value by the addition of three pages of the newest and most approved Machinery, with a description of the same, and shows at a glance the powers of the engines attached. Price of the plate, without the volume, 2s. 6d

London: Simpkin, Marshall, & Co., and all Booksellers.

ENGLAND AND FRANCE; OR, THE TWO SISTERS.—The above Romance of Real Life, by H. COCKTON, Esq. Illustrated by KENNY MEADOWS, CROWQUILL, &c., will be READY IN A FEW DAYS, beautifully printed in one handsome volume, bound in cambric cloth. It will contain about One Hundred Engravings. Price 7s 6d.

A CHRISTMAS PRESENT AND NEW YEAR'S GIFT.—Just published, in demy 8vo, elegantly bound in cloth, gilt, with a portrait of the Author, price 7s 6d.

BOUDOIR LYRICS. By FLORENCE WILSON, author of "Lyrics for Leisure Hours."

London: Smith, Elder & Co. 65, Cornhill.

LETTS'S DIARIES, ALMANACKS, & HOUSEKEEPERS for 1844, in 35 different forms and sizes, from 1s. to 6s. 6d. each, may be obtained of all Booksellers, &c., in the Kingdom. A specimen page of each edition, gratis. Globes, Atlases, Dissected Maps, and other useful New Year's Gifts

Letts, Son, & Co., 8, Cornhill opposite the Bank.

On the 1st of January, 1844, will be published, price 1s, to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, the First Number of D'HORSAY; or the FOLLIES of the DAY.: being the History and Adventures of a Man of Fashion. Written by Himself. Two highly finished Engravings on Steel, by Seymour, will be given in each Number.

Publish ed by W. Strange, 3., Paternoster-row, and to be had of all Booksellers in the United Kingdom

THE WATER CURE. Just Published, fcap. 8vo, price 2s

THE WATER CURE, as practised by V. PRIESSNITZ, with Illustrative Cases, drawn from the Author's Observations at Graefenberg, and his own practice at Priessnitz near Cheltenham To which are added, Drawings of Graefenberg, a Phrenological Sketch of M. Priessnitz, and a notice of Dr. Wilson of the Edinburgh Water Cure as practised by M. Schrott, of Londonyse. By Richard Branbie, F.R.S.

S. Highley, 32, Fleet-street, London.

Price Sixpence,

SEARLE'S TREATISE on AFFECTIONS of the STOMACH and BRAIN: showing that Indigestion and Impairment of the Constitution Arise from improper regimen; and that Mental Excitement, Nervousness, Loss of Memory, Paralysis, Apoplexy, and Insanity, originate in an impaired state of the brain, and not to determination of blood to the head.—R. and J. Taylor, Red Lion court, Fleet-street.

SPLENDID PRESENT for CHRISTMAS, or the NEW YEAR.—The MUSICAL BIJOU for 1844, an embellished collection of Music and Poetry, adorned with magnificent illustrations executed in gold and colours in a style of gorgeous beauty and containing upwards of 100 contributions by the most eminent composers and poets, viz. Bishop, Balfe, Barnett, Rodwell, Wallace, Marchisi, Bondon, &c. Price 10s. Carriage free of the country, by post, free.

D'Almaine and Co., 20, Soho square

NEW STAMPED GARDEN PAPER price 4d.— On Saturday, January 6 will be published, and sent postage free, the GARDENER and PRACTICAL FLORIST, a New Weekly Journal of Horticulture. Edited and supported by numerous practical gardeners. Orders received by the publisher, E. Greenhalgh, Paternoster-row. The first general advertising agent, 51, Catherine-street, Strand, and by all booksellers. For specimen stamped, and publishers' list of Mr. Tuxford, 51, Catherine street, Strand, will secure the immediate delivery of this number

NEW MUSIC FOR THE NEW YEAR.

THE MISTLETOE QUADRILLES, "The PIANISTA for JANUARY, No. 37, is now ready. Contents:—"The Mistletoe Quadrilles," containing the Coquette, the Belle, the Beau, the Flirt, the Surprise. Also, the new Song, by Balfe, "It's been a Rose," from "The Bohemian Waltzers" (perfect set), containing the first Waltz, Galop, and Polka. In Midland South Western, South Eastern, Birmingham and Gloucester Railway Guides, Railway Monitor, Mercers' Route and new Railway Companion. Price 6d. Post free, 7d. Orders to be addressed to "The Pianista," 192, Fleet-street. Bussey, Woods: Ganer, 13, Poland-st.—N. The back numbers of the Pianista are now in print.

To be completed in 11 monthly 1s. Parts,

NOTICE.—WINDSOR CASTLE.—

WITH 110 ILLUSTRATIONS BY G. CRUIKSHANK, &c.

THE SECOND MONTHLY SHILLING PART

IS NOW READY FOR DELIVERY.

N.B. Copies of the complete work, in 1 vol., with all the Illustrations, may also now be had, price 14s. bound

Orders received by all Booksellers.

Henry Colburn Publisher, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

THE NEW MONTHLY BELLE ASSEMBLEE.—The JANUARY Part will contain Embellishments, and among other articles the following:—1 Gamester's Last Stake. By Miss Camilla Toulmin.—2. Ombandied Merchant. By Mrs.—3. The Young Lady who is to be Married To-morrow. By Mary Comer.—4 Curse. By Major Calder Campbell.—5. The Letter de Cachet. By P. B. St. John Esq.—6. Small Change and Great Results. Poetry, Criticism, and the Drama.—All Communications, Books and Music for Review, Advertisements, &c., to be addressed to the Office of the Belle Assemblee, Strand were only they will be attended to

THE ILLUMINATED MAGAZINE, for January, is unusually attractive. Contents. Mary Stuart at Chatsworth, by Miss Costello.—The Russian Spy Class by Percival Skelton.—Songs of England—the Poet Laureate's Servant, by Benson E. H.—Beauties of War. The Maréchal Civilisateur, or News from Algeria.—The Royal Academy.—Illustrations.—5. A Fine Day in Fleet Prison.—6. Sketches of Character by Parry.—7. Great Crises, their Decline and Fall.—10. The Galanc.—11. Military Tableaux; or, Scenes from the Wars of Napoleon, sketched by an Officer.—12. Mary Calcot. By Captain Orlando Sabretash.—12 Kate Kearney.—13. British Alliances and European Prospects.—G. W. Nicholson, 226, Regent-street, London.

ONE SHILLING.

THE CLAIMS of the BRITISH ABORIGINES of the TURKISH, or OSMANLI EMPIRE, UPON CIVILISED NATIONS. Part I.—The Origin of the Above-named Race.—Part II.—The Present Condition and Prospects of the Osmanli Empire.—Part III. The Aspect and Position of the Missionary Enterprise in Western Asia. By W. Jardine Ainsworth.—"The small but vastly important publication."—Literary Gazette "Mr. Curtis's and Ainsworth's pamphlets will be found highly valuable."—Athenæum. "Great ability and many studiously acquired facts."—Cambridge Advertiser. "Able and temperate."—Sunday Times. "Expressly deserving the attention of all."—Scotch Reformer's Gazette. "Unfolds startling facts." Gardener's Gazette. "When was there a more or a more resembling Christian method of proceeding in a matter so delicate, yet so important?" "Belle Assemblee."

John Mortimer, Adelaide street

LEAVES FROM THE BOOK OF NATURE.—Early in January will be commenced under the above title, the regular publication, in parts, of the entire contents bound in

SIR W. JARDINE'S NATURALIST'S LIBRARY: Lately completed. The Animal Displeasures will contain upwards of 800 Figures: the Birds, upwards of 1000 Figures, 36?; and the Insects, 356 —each object having its Native Locality added to its name, the whole carefully and accurately drawn from Nature. Locality added to its name, the whole carefully and accurately drawn from Nature. arranged in one large sheet; five of which sheets, contained in a cover designed for the Work, will form a part, price 5s. On the publication of each Series, directions will be made by their delegates."—Athenæum. "Great ability and many studiously acquired facts." Cambridge Advertiser. "Able and temperate."—Sunday Times. "Expressly deserving the attention of all."—Scotch Reformer's Gazette. "Unfolds startling facts." Gardener's Gazette. "When was there a more or a more resembling Christian method of proceeding in a matter so delicate, yet so important?" "Belle Assemblee."

John Mortimer, Adelaide street

NEWSPAPER AND ADVERTISING OFFICE.

74, Cannon street, City, London. (Established 1800.)

W. DAWSON and SON, Agents for the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, respectfully inform their friends and the public, that they supply that and all the other London Newspapers, with the greatest punctuality, to every part of the United Kingdom, to France, Spain, and most of the British Colonies, free of postage, by 8 o'clock in the morning and evening mails

HANDSOME AND NOVEL CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEAR'S GIFTS!

The ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, Vol. I., price 21s., Vol. II., 18s., and Vol. III. (to be published early in January), 18s. Handsomely bound with gilt edges, and elegantly and appropriately enriched in gold on the back and side. Subscribers already supplied with said appropriately enriched in gold on the back and side. Subscribers already supplied with and appropriately enriched in gold on the back and side. Subscribers already supplied with their Numbers may have them bound in the above style, price 8s. plain, or 6s. 6d. gilt edges; their Numbers may have them bound in the above style, price 8s. plain, or 6s. 6d. gilt edges; for the convenience of the numerous persons who intend to bind the Four Volumes, on one system, open for subscription at the Office of the Illustrated London News, 198, Strand.

Cases for binding the Numbers, or any of them, can be supplied, and may be sent by Post at one shilling each. The Numbers are constructed for holding the numbers for Six Months, PRICE FOUR SHILLINGS. The numbers can be bound at the end of the Volume, and the Frontispiece and Title-page added as before

TAILORS, WHOLESALE and RETAIL WOOLLEN DRAPERS, AND OUTFITTERS, 154, Minories, and 88, Aldgate, City.

TO PARENTS AND GUARDIANS.—EDUCATION.—PILGRIM'S HALL ACADEMY, near BRENTWOOD ESSEX.—This Establishment is delightfully situated in one of the healthiest parts of Essex, and offers, from the very commencement of the manner, and its extensive play and pleasure grounds, (comprising more than twenty acres,) one of the most eligible localities in England for studious retirement and healthful recreation.

The system on which the education of the young gentlemen of this establishment is conducted, comprises every branch necessary to qualify them for the Universities, the Naval and Military Colleges, Public Schools, and professional or mercantile pursuits, and their studies at the same time are directed with such a scrupulous regard to order, regularity and economy of time, as cannot fail to inculcate habits of industry, perseverance, and attention, from which, it is confidently hoped, they will derive the utmost advantages in after-life. The pupils are boarded on a scale of extreme liberality, and while the most unremitting attention is paid to their personal comforts, their religious, moral, and general habits, and gentlemanly demeanour, are watched over with parental solicitude. Pilgrim's Hall may be reached from Shoreditch, by the Eastern Counties' Railway, in one hour. References to gentlemen of the highest respectability, whose sons are at the establishment.

Prospectuses may be obtained at Messrs. Rolfe and Fletcher's, 17, Cornhill; or will be forwarded on application to Mr. W. A. Watson, at the Academy. A vacancy for a Parlour Boarder.

BACON.—J. CRAFT, Philpot-lane, City, offers to the public BACON of excellent quality, which he receives weekly from a Farmer in Wiltshire, who attends to the feeding and rearing of his pigs in such a way as to make the bacon of a most delicious flavour, and which will be sure to suit the most delicate stomach. Sold by the side or half side, at 8d. per lb. Sent to any part of town carriage free

ALE of very superior quality, brewed entirely from the very best Malt and Hops, and in such proportions as persons of sure palates will be sure to appreciate. Sold in casks of 18 and 9 gallons each, at 1s. per gallon. Sent to any part of town carriage free Orders by post punctually attended to. Address to the JOHN BULL BREWERY OFFICE, No. 25, Piccadilly, Cale

HOTEL, BLACKFRIARS BRIDGE, (SURREY SIDE),

FAMILIES and GENTLEMEN visiting the Metropolis will find THE OLD LEAPING BAR to BLACKFRIARS ROAD, decidedly the most economical, central, and pleasantly situated in London.

Observe the very moderate charges for Bed and Breakfast, only 1?s. 6d. per week; Dinners from ten Hand, always ready, at 1s. 6d.; Compact Wines, Spirits, &c., equally moderate.

Handsomely Furnished Private Rooms and Suite of Apartments.—GOOD STABLING

MAKE YOUR FRIENDS HAPPY for SIX GUINEAS.

One Dozen Superior Champagne.
1 " Claret.
1 " Bronte or Madeira.
1 " Sherry.
1 " Hock.

All good sound Foreign Wines, bottles, and hamper, included, delivered free within three miles of London, or for 1s. per dozen carriage to all parts of England.

M KENDALL, Nos. 24, and 50, Mark-lane, City.

TO LADIES.—ROWLAND'S KALYDOR, Patronised and sanctioned by her Majesty the QUEEN, the Royal Family, and the several Courts of Europe.—This elegant and fragrant preparation eradicates all Pimples, Spots Blotches, Redness, Tan, Freckles, and other defects of the Skin. The radiant bloom it imparts to the Cheek, and the softness and delicacy it induces on the hands, arms, and neck, render it indispensable to every toilet. As a safeguard against Chilblains and Chapped Skin its virtues are universally acknowledged. Price 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle, duty included.

Caution.—The genuine article has the words ROWLAND'S KALYDOR printed on the wrapper, and A. ROWLAND and SON, 20, HATTON-GARDEN, engraved on the Government Stamp affixed on each bottle. Sold by them, and by Chemists and Perfumers.

, All Orders must be addressed as above.

THE PAST, THE PRESENT, AND THE FUTURE. (A NEW SERIES OF ADDRESS.)

The year has come with all its evangelical scenes—
And it — comes with a rush and a roar
The year has come, and upon a busy world,
And a fresh page of life has time unfurl'd.
The chiming bells, with intermingling hum
Proclaim aloud—"another year is come!"
The year is come, and we embrace the same
To greet the public with a native theme,
For which with exultation we rejoice
"The past, the present, and the future," too.
We feel a debt of gratitude is ow'd
For value received, continuously bestow'd;
Unbounded patronage has crown'd our trade,
And we cannot think we've had any paid.
Oft on an oak the traveller glances back,
To mark the time 'twas given o'er the beaten track:
Thus we examine, with observant eye,
The advances of another year gone by.
And glad we feel—and justly so too—in the past,
Our glorious hopes have not been overcast.
When last we hail'd the dawn of "New Year's-day"
We talk'd of patronage in broad display.
And here we now to tell of favours done.
No! still we triumph in increas'd success.
Success in all our trading plans is found,
And, like a flood, it flows around.
Success attends us through the distant land,
Nor here alone—but where the seas expand.
Success in east, and west, and north, and south,
Is loudly sounded with a rush and a rout.
Success abundant we have seen appear
Each day, each week, each month throughout the year.
Favours in season "past" our efforts blest,
And the bright "present" yields—Success! Success!
Think not we are exaggerated terms—
Fact, glorious fact, their utmost truth confirms.
Language less strong could not our suffice to show
The vast success that crowns our fam'd depôt.
Nay—strong as are our statements we confess
They are but mighty efforts signalised by "past"
The "present" year shall far excel the last,
And "future" seasons to the world shall show
Our grateful efforts by their hands bestow.
Mark what we promise! We have much in store,
And offer to the public more and more.
Retain ourselves and patrons there shall be
A mutual—and our mutual—envy
Reductions and improvements shall be seen,
Far more extensive than have ever been
Nought shall we omit—no more shall be untur'd,
Wherein the public good may be concern'd.
Our celebrated Mart shall ever still display
The choicest fashions for the rich and gay;
While, such as move in less important scenes,
Shall find good clothing suited to their means.
In every point our house shall be displayed—
The most astounding Mart throughout the trade.
Can we do more than this, our thanks to show?
Or give a greater remuneration? No!
Tis this be done, we ne'er shall be at rest—
But, when we've done it, we'll do more our best.
And with renewed exertions, such as this,
A smiling public will not be remiss.
We feel assured that, if we try to please
Our gen'rous patrons with acts such as these,
That good success will crown us more than ever,
And happily reward for each endeavour,
And still with exultation we shall view
The "past," the "present," and the "future," too!
And now we close, with many a wish sincere,
That all may realise "a happy year."
"A happy year" may we'n'y render see—
Where'er his home—whate'er his lot may be!
"A happy year" alike to young and old!
And when another's changeful year has roll'd,
Once more with pleasure we'll resume our pen,
And make our annual settlement again.

S. HOBBS AND SON.

TAILORS, WHOLESALE AND RETAIL WOOLLEN DRAPERS, AND OUTFITTERS, 154, Minories, and 88, Aldgate, City.

DANCING TAUGHT in the most fashionable style, by Mr WILLIS, 41, Brewer-street, Golden-square. Private Lessons at all hours to ladies and gentlemen of any age, wishing privacy and expedition. An evening academy on Mondays and Fridays. A juvenile academy on Wednesday and Saturdays. Lessons in the Value a Deux Temps every day.—A card of terms may be had, on application as above.

PRIVATE ROOMS may be ENGAGED by PRIVATE PARTIES.

BRETT'S LIQUEUR GINGER BRANDY, being strongly recommended by the Faculty as a salutary cordial, stomachic, is likely to become equally eminent with their IMPROVED PATENT COGNAC, which not one in a hundred can distinguish from the finest French Brandy. A sample of either sent free to any part of the kingdom for 18s. per imperial gallon, or a half dozen hamper, containing any required portion of each, for 3s. 6d. extra.

HENRY BRETT and Co., Old Furnival's Inn, Holborn.

MOULD CANDLES to burn WITHOUT SNUFFING.—KEMPTON'S PATENT.—These Candles are now greatly Improved, and do not require snuffing; they burn longer and are cheaper than any other candle, the flame is steady and brilliant. No metallic or deleterious matter is used in the manufacture Price 8d. per pound.—Sole by G. E. Parish, Agent for Importation, 215, Bread-street, City, and at the Manufactory, Old Barge-house, Church-street, Surrey

PANKLIBANON IRON WORKS, adjoining Madame Tussaud's, 58, Baker street, Portman-square, London.—The attention of the Nobility and Gentry, and others about to furnish in Life, is respectfully invited to the above establishment, where are exhibited, for WHOLESALE PRICES ONLY, the largest and most elegant assortment of General Furnishing IRONMONGERY, Tinned Copper, Iron, and best Tin Cooking Vessels; Stove Grates, Kitchen Ranges, Fenders, Fire Irons, Paper and Iron Tea-trays, Tea-urns, Shower-baths, Hot and Cold-water and Sponging Baths, Patent Lamps for Candle or Oil, &c. Table Cutlery, Sheffield Plate, &c., each article being marked in plain figures.

WALKER'S NEEDLES (by authority "The Queen's Own") have large eyes, are easily threaded (even by blind persons), and have been proved points, temper, and finish. Each paper is labelled with a likeness of her Majesty in her Royal Highness Prince Albert, in proof, on coloured grounds. Every quality of needles, fine-long, mosks and eyes, steel pens, &c., for shopping These needles or pens or the name trade are sent free by post by any respectable dealer, on receipt of 1s penny stamps for every shilling value. H. Walker, Manufacturer to the Queen, 35, Maiden-lane, Wood-street, London

EUROPEAN LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, No. 13, Chatham-place, Blackfriars, London. Established January, 1819.

Trustees—Rt. Hon. James Wilde, Lincoln's Inn; Rose Ellis Cumming, Esq., Bond street.

Vice-Presidents—Geo Forbes, Esq., 3, Finsbury square.—With Twelve Directors

Capital £250,000—Fixed by the Act of Parliament at £250,000 Half of it vests and the interest of every class of Insurers Premiums are received from £1 and yearly or quarterly, or upon an increasing or decreasing scale. The insured for life participate septennially in the profits realised. A Bonus commission is allowed to Solicitors and Agents.

DAVID FOGGO, Secretary.

N.B.—Agents are wanted in towns where none have been yet appointed

COMBINATION, ECONOMY, and QUALITY, versus EXPENSE and INFERIORITY.—Messrs. VINCENT and PUGH, Distillers and Brandy Merchants, of New Park-street, Borough, claim the attention of the Public to their stock of BRANDY. The two essentials, Quality and Purity, are hereby combined in the manufacture. The spirit having been submitted to the severest chemical tests by the first analysing chemists of the day, testimonials of which can be produced to prove its perfect equality with the finest Foreign Brandy imported, the Proprietors can confidently defy competition to produce its equal. For the convenience of Families, the Proprietors have bottled a large quantity, both Pale and Rich Brandy, of the most bright glass bottles, covered with a neat metallic capsule over the cork, and labelled "Vincent and Pugh's Champagne and Cognac Brandy." Sold in quantities of not less than two gallons, equal to one dozen in bottles, at 44s. per dozen, bottles included. Agent, WM. HAY, Wine Merchant, No. 14, Porter-street, Newport Market; and No. 1 Great Newport-street, Leicester-square.

SUPERIOR LOOKING-GLASSES and SPLENDID GILT PICTURE FRAMES CHEAP.—JOHN MCLEAN, 121, Oxford-street, respectfully solicits the Trade, Artists, Upholsterers, and the Public, that they can be supplied with LOOKING GLASSES and PICTURE FRAMES of the very best manufacture, at prices never before attempted. May be had gratis, and sent free to any part of the kingdom, large Sheets of Drawings, representing the exact pattern and prices of one hundred different sizes of Glass in frames, and one hundred and twenty different Picture Frames, accurately coloured with designs made expressly for this manufactory. The Trade supplied with Frames in the Compo—Fancy wood Frames and Mouldings, and Room Borderings—Old Frames repaired and regilt—Glasses re-silvered—Pictures lined and packed for exportation—Country orders punctually executed—Glasses re-silvered—Pictures lined and packed for immediate delivery. All goods not approved of in three months taken back, and money returned.

ALBERT ELASTICS versus STIFFNECKS, SWELLAGE NECK SCARFS, 1s Inch STARVATION TIES, &c. &c. EVERLASTING or PAPIER MISERY STOCKS.—There's perfect luxury in this Elastic Cravat. Conservative Journal.—For appearance, comfort, and durability, nothing approaching to it has yet been in use.—Londonderry Journal of Commerce.—Durable, elegant, and most pleasant to wear. Naval and Military Gazette.—Numerous Testimonials shown at the Manufactory. It would be a well for the public if it were acquainted how much is lost by that portion as regards one of the items this patent has on universal patronage. Manufactory for patent and every description of Truss and Mechanical Supports, Improved Boots, Braces, Bands Belts, Elastic Stockings, Knee Caps, &c. &c. F. HUGHES and Co., 247, High Holborn. Established 1785 P.S. Please to mind the address

EDWARD PRICE and Co. beg respectfully to inform the Public, that their Composite Candles are sold in packets of 6 lbs. each, having a label with the inscription, "Price's patent Composite Candles." From recent discoveries necessary, in consequence of the numerous imitations lately introduced, and often substituted for their Candles. E. P. and Co. use no stearine in any of their processes. The prices generally charged throughout the country are for PRICE'S Patent Composite Candles, 1s. per lb.—requiring no snuffing. The sizes recommended are sixes and long sixes, and for the better class, Price's Patent Sperm Candles, 1s. 2d. per lb.—giving a beautifully white pure light, but requiring snuffing. Price's Night Mortars, 1s. 6d. per lb., an excellent article for economy. Nos. 13, 14, and 15 to the pound, to burn 10, 11, and 12 hours. Price's Stearine, Marsaline, and Ceylon Wax Candles supplied as usual. Almost every chandler throughout the country is able to supply these candles to their customers, but in places where they cannot be so had, on receiving a post-office order for 36s. E. Price and Co. will immediately forward an equivalent quantity of candles at the above rates, charging for the box. The Trade supplied with Grade Cocoa Nut Oil.—Manufactory, Belmont, Vauxhall Surrey.

CUT GLASS, CHINA, EARTHENWARE, &c.—G. SANDER and Co. beg to announce that their Show Rooms and Warehouses constantly contain a succession of New Patterns in Dinner, Dessert, Tea, and Breakfast Services, and Chamber Sets, in Porcelain, Iron-stone China, and the new flucsont Ware, equal in appearance to Cut Glass, at a fourth the cost. Cut Glass in the most elegant shapes and modern and elegant designs in table and dessert dishes, decanters, carat jugs, tumblers, wines, &c.; together with all kinds of glass, of a plain and economical description. A large stock of Lamps, Chandeliers, and Hall Lanterns. Patent Reflecting Lamps for Halls, Counters, China, & alabaster, Ormolu, Bronze, &c., &c.—319 and 320, HIGH HOLBORN, opposite Gray's Inn-lane.

A LIST OF CHRISTMAS PRESENTS AND NEW YEAR'S GIFTS.

BELLAMY SAVORY, STATIONER AND DRESSING-CASE MAKER, BRITISH PAPER WAREHOUSE, No 46, CORNHILL, LONDON The Stock on the Show-room includes:—

WRITING DESKS. Lady's superb inlaid Ebony Writing Desk, of the newest design, fitted with envelopes, lined with silk velvet, plated locks, &c., price 42s 10s. 6d.; Lady's Rosewood Writing Desk, with secret drawers, &c., 21s. 6d.; Gentleman's Mahogany Desk, 8ins. cornered, 21s 6d.; Rosewood or Mahogany Desks for Youth, 12s 6d.;

DRESSING CASES, with brushes and cutlery complete. Lady's Rosewood Dressing Case, 21s 6d. 30s., Ditto large, with jewel drawer, 42s 10s. 6d.; Ditto, with strong silver fittings, 63s. 7?, 84s. 105s.; Gentleman's Dressing Case, 21s. 30s. 42s. 63s. 84s. 105s.; Tourist's Companion, which combines a Dressing Case with a Travelling Writing Desk, 42s 10s. 6d. to 6l. 6s 0d

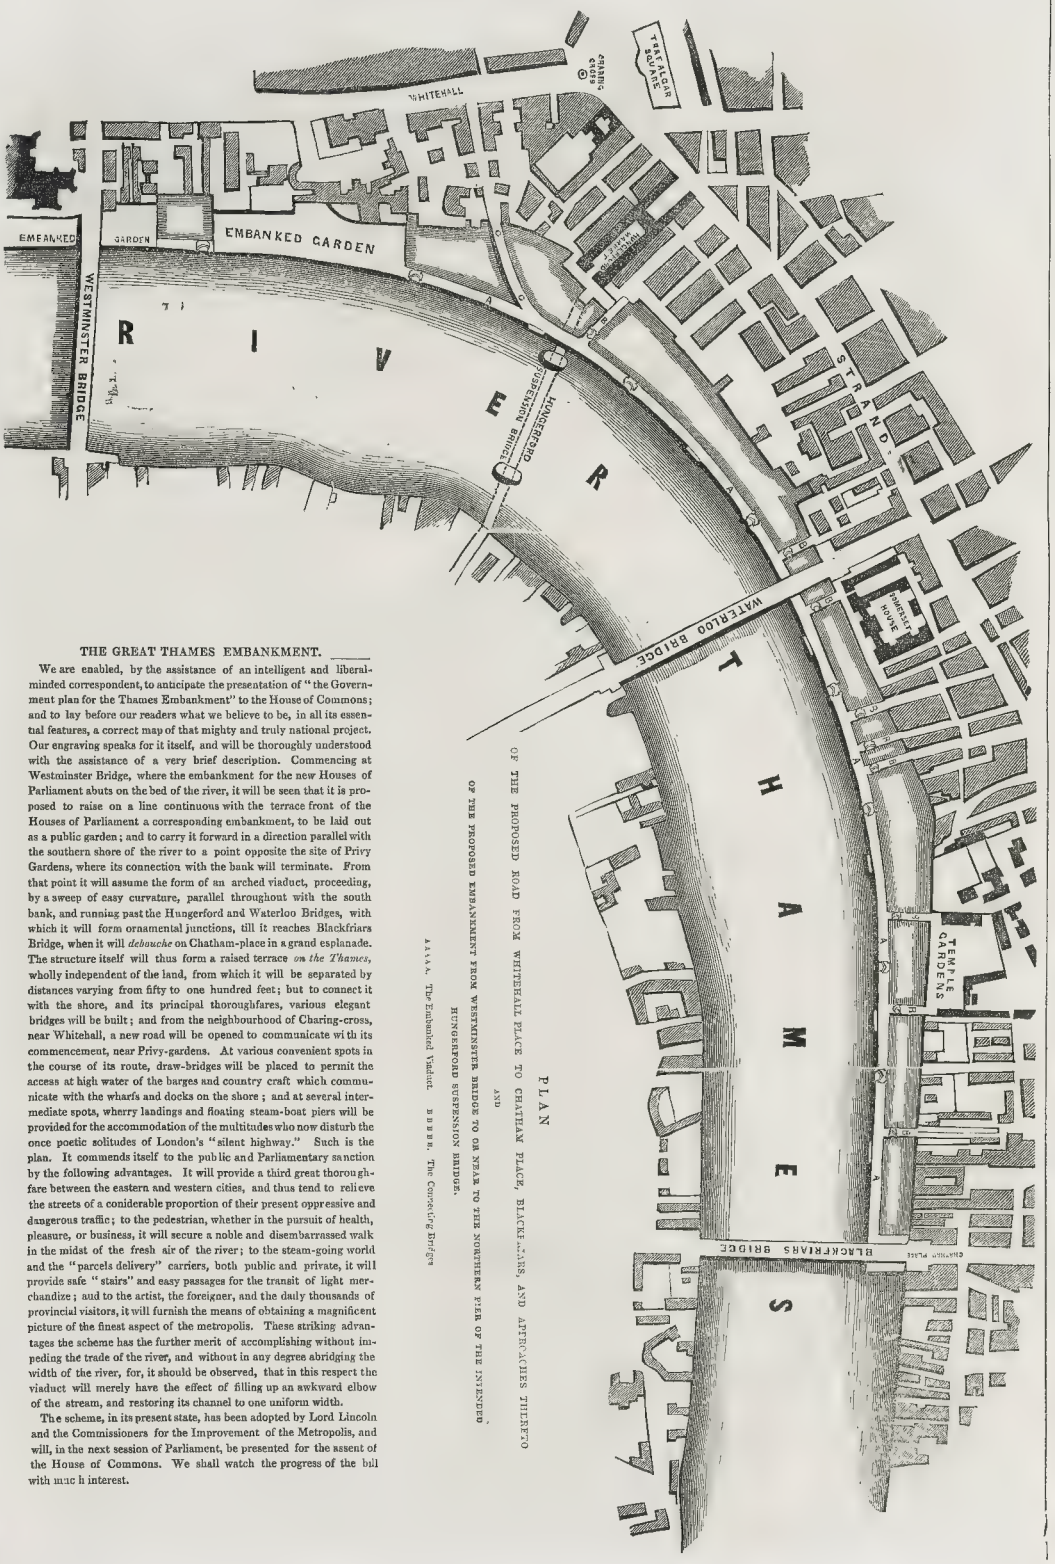
ROSEWOOD WORKBOXES Full size, lined with satin, and fitted complete, 42s 10s. 6d.; Smaller ditto, 10s. 6d.; Handsome Ebony Egyptian Workbox, fifty splendid patterns, to 4?s 6s 0d.

PAPIER MACHE ELEGANCES. These form the most appropriate presents for the season—they are beautifully painted with landscapes and flowers, and inlaid with pearl, compass—

Envelope Boxes, 3d. 1s to 42s Ladies' Card-cases, 15s.
Stationery Cases and Writing Desk, 42s 10s. 6d. Watch Stands, 2s 6d.
Inkstands, 12s. 6d. to 42s 3s. Cake Baskets, 21s 2s. 6d.
Portfolios or Blotting Cases, 21 1s. to 42s 3s. Tea Caddies, 12s. 6d. to 42s 12s.
Hand Screens, 1s. to 21 15s. Knitting or Glove Boxes, 21 1s. to 21 7s.
Workboxes, 42s 3s. Souvenirs or Tablets, 6s. 6d. to 10s.
Ladies' Cut Pockets, silver fittings, 42 2s Card Trays, 3s 6d. to 21 2s 6d.

An immense Stock of Bibles and Prayer-books, adapted for presentation, also Ladies Companions, in morocco and tortoiseshell, from 10s. to 42l. BELLAMY SAVORY, Stationer and Dressing-case Maker, British Paper Warehouse, No. 46, Cornhill, London.

THAMES EMBANKMENT.



PLAN

OF THE PROPOSED ROAD FROM WHITEHALL PLACE TO CHATHAM PLACE, BLACKFRIARS, AND APPROACHES THERETO

AND

OF THE PROPOSED EMBANKMENT FROM WESTMINSTER BRIDGE TO OR NEAR TO THE NORTHERN PIER OF THE INTENDED HUNGERFORD SUSPENSION BRIDGE.

A A A A. The Embanked Viaduct. B B B B. The Connecting Bridges.

THE GREAT THAMES EMBANKMENT.

We are enabled, by the assistance of an intelligent and liberal-minded correspondent, to anticipate the presentation of "the Government plan for the Thames Embankment" to the House of Commons; and to lay before our readers what we believe to be, in all its essential features, a correct map of that mighty and truly national project. Our engraving speaks for it itself, and will be thoroughly understood with the assistance of a very brief description. Commencing at Westminster Bridge, where the embankment for the new Houses of Parliament abuts on the bed of the river, it will be seen that it is proposed to raise on a line continuous with the terrace front of the Houses of Parliament a corresponding embankment, to be laid out as a public garden; and to carry it forward in a direction parallel with the southern shore of the river to a point opposite the site of Privy Gardens, where its connection with the bank will terminate. From that point it will assume the form of an arched viaduct, proceeding, by a sweep of easy curvature, parallel throughout with the south bank, and running past the Hungerford and Waterloo Bridges, with which it will form ornamental junctions, till it reaches Blackfriars Bridge, when it will debouche on Chatham-place in a grand esplanade. The structure itself will thus form a raised terrace on the Thames, wholly independent of the land, from which it will be separated by distances varying from fifty to one hundred feet; but to connect it with the shore, and its principal thoroughfares, various elegant bridges will be built; and from the neighbourhood of Charing-cross, near Whitehall, a new road will be opened to communicate with its commencement, near Privy-gardens. At various convenient spots in the course of its route, draw-bridges will be placed to permit the access at high water of the barges and country craft which communicate with the wharfs and docks on the shore; and at several intermediate spots, wherry landings and floating steam-boat piers will be provided for the accommodation of the multitudes who now disturb the once poetic solitudes of London's "silent highway." Such is the plan. It commends itself to the public and Parliamentary sanction by the following advantages. It will provide a third great thoroughfare between the eastern and western cities, and thus tend to relieve the streets of a coniderable proportion of their present oppressive and dangerous traffic; to the pedestrian, whether in the pursuit of health, pleasure, or business, it will secure a noble and disembarrassed walk in the midst of the fresh air of the river; to the steam-going world and the "parcels delivery" carriers, both public and private, it will provide safe "stairs" and easy passages for the transit of light merchandize; and to the artist, the foreigner, and the daily thousands of provincial visitors, it will furnish the means of obtaining a magnificent picture of the finest aspect of the metropolis. These striking advantages the scheme has the further merit of accomplishing without impeding the trade of the river, and without in any degree abridging the width of the river, for, it should be observed, that in this respect the viaduct will merely have the effect of filling up an awkward elbow of the stream, and restoring its channel to one uniform width.

The scheme, in its present state, has been adopted by Lord Lincoln and the Commissioners for the Improvement of the Metropolis, and will, in the next session of Parliament, be presented for the assent of the House of Commons. We shall watch the progress of the bill with much interest.

London: Printed and Published by WILLIAM LITTLE, at 198, Strand, where all communications for the Editor are requested to be addressed.—SATURDAY, December 30, 1843

Page

ABORIGINES Protection Society, Ac
Remarks relative to . . 102
Abyssinian Arms, &c. . . 199
Abyssinian Mule . . . 199
Accidents and Offences, 3, 31, 99, 131, 150, 167, 190, 199, 215, 231, 251, 263, 273, 291, 311, 325, 343, 359, 405, 423
Adams, Thomas, Suicide of . . 51
Aeronautics, 286th Ascent of Mr. C. Green 87
Aetnoma, the Highlands of, Monastery, Triumph, death of the Elephant 421
Afghan Chief at Tipperary . . 163
Aberdeen, the Monastery of . . 421
Afghanistan, see India, China, and Afghanistan
Aged Pilgrims Asylum, Camberwell 293
Agent Sing 368
Akbar's Palace, the Mogul, Sultan's 288
Albert, His Royal Highness Prince 149
Albert's, Prince, Birthday . . 149
Albert, Prince, Goblet presented to His Royal Highness . . 382
Alberti, Prince, Visit to Birmingham, 362, 381, 382
Aldrington Church, Sussex, Ruins of 317
Alert, Loss of the Troop Ship . 87
Algiers, The French in . . 308
Amelia Thompson, The Ship, Wreck of 187
Amwell, Herts, Church . . 142
Andalusians 76
Anglesey, The Marquis of . . 99
Anglesey Testimonial . . . 121
Anti-Corn-Law League Demonstration at Covent Garden Theatre . 215
Apparition in High Life . . 119
Arago, Domanic Francis . . 121
Archery Fête at St. Leonard's, The Royal Prize 154
Army, Drill in the . . . 149
Arqua, There is a Tomb at . . 226
Artillery Company, Rifle Practice at Wormwood Scrubbs . . 149
Ashton-under-Lyne, Turn out of Power-Loom Weavers . . 338
Assaad Y Kayat, the Syrian Philanthropist 77
Assize Intelligence . 394, 402, 426
Athens, Education at . . . 214
Atmospheric Railway . . . 138
Australia, the late Massacre of Natives at 242
Aymer, the Vaulter, Dreadful Death of 131
Azzopardi Guiseppe, Convict, Request for under Sentence of Death 32

BALFE, Michael William . . 124
Balloon Ascent at Brighton . . 146
Bankruptcy Court . 118, 227, 251, 402
Barclay, Esq., Thomas . . 280
Barrett, Esq., R. . . 345, 346
Barrister Posed 126
Batty's Amphitheatre, Madame Lejars 164
Beethoven 125
Belgians, The King of the . . 41
Belgrans, The Queen of the . . 203
"Belsazo," Sig. Domenico Conti as Alamro, in the Opera of . . 13
Bell, The largest ever cast in England, for Roman Catholic Cathedral at Montreal 132
Bellesile, The Press at Sea on board of the 93
Belvoir, The Meet at . . . 382
Belvoir Castle . . . 377, 379
See also Queen, The, &c.
Bentinck, The Oriental Steam Navigation Company's Ship, 107, 108, 387
Berlin Opera House . . . 157
Berlin, Destruction of the Opera House at . . . 125, 157
Bethlehem Hospital . . . 85
Billingsgate, Opening of the Oyster Market . . . 97, 158
Birmingham, Glassworks of Messrs. Bacchus and Son . . . 381
Birmingham, Munts's Rolling Mills 381
Birmingham, Sargant's Gun and Sword-Blade Manufactory . 381
Birmingham, King Edward's Free Grammar School . . . 381
Birmingham Musical Festival . 262
Birmingham, Queen's College, 141, 142
Births, 16, 31, 47, 63, 79, 94, 110, 127, 143, 159, 175, 191, 207, 222, 239, 254, 271, 287, 303, 318, 334, 350, 366, 381, 395, 411, 427
Bitters, A Bunch of . . . 256
Blackrock, Brighton . . . 385
Blantyre, Lord, Marriage of . 251, 252
Blasphemous Publications, Conviction of Thomas Patterson at Edinburgh for selling . . . 323
Blood Money System, Revival of the . . . 151, 166, 203
"Bohemian Girl," Scene from Balfe's Opera of the . . . 413
"Bohemians, The," Scene from at the Adelphi 348
Bolton, Attempt to set fire to a Cotton Mill at 347
Bookbinders' Provident Asylum . 13
Bordeaux, The Duke of, 241, 285, 3..
Bordeaux, The Duke of, Remarks on His Royal Highness's sojourn in England 391
Borrosoane Outrage . . . 154
Boulogne Races 141
Boulogne Steamer, Deaths on Capt Tune of the City of . . . 202
Boulogne Upper Harbour . . 125
Bramah's Factory, Pimlico, Destruction of by Fire . . . 345
Brazil, Marriage of the Emperor of 319
Brazil, Emperor's Speech on closing the Chambers 120
Bread Street Scrutiny on Election of Aldermen for the Ward 266, 307
Bridekirk, The Rev., Committal of, and his Son, for Body-stealing 267
Bright, M.P., Mr. . . . 278
Brigston, Landslip at . . . 363
Brighton, Murderous Assault and Robbery at 151
Bristol New Guildhall . . . 317
British Association, Meeting of the at Cork . . . 123, 155, 156
British General's Defence of his Soldiers (Poetry) . . . 54
Bromley Church, Restoration of . 341
Brougham Hall and Estates, another Claimant 323
Brunet 229
Brunswick, The Duke of, and Barnard Gregory . . 138, 147
Bruton, The Rev. Dr., President of the Wesleyan Theological Institution 266
Burglaries in the City . . . 269
Burhampotter, Loss of the Ship . 227
Burlampotter, Conveying Emigrants from the Wreck . . 277
Burmese Prize Money . . . 349
Burnham Thorpe Parsonage, the Birthplace of Nelson . . 349
Burns, Jacob, A Poor Man, Case of the Burns, of 294
Burton, Entertainment to the Son of the late Robert . . . 319
Burton, Judge 344
Bushe, Death of Chief Justice . 47
Butcher's Almshouses at Walham Green 108
Butchers' Shop, Prize Meat at Christmas 416

CABUL, Arrival of one of the Prisoners from 75
Caledonia, H.M.S., Royal Visit to Cambridge, His Royal Highness the Duke of 286
Cambridge 295
Cambridge, Disgraceful Affair at . 211
Cambridge Prize Subjects for 1844 402
Cambridge, Her Majesty's Visit to, and reception at . . . 273
Cambridge, The Royal Visit to, Remarks on, &c. . . . 273
Cambridge University, Royal Visits to, of Queen Elizabeth in 1564, of Queen Anne in 1705, and of George the First in 1717 . . 279
Camperdown, The, H.M.S., Explosion on Board of, &c. . . . 53
Canada, Riel, Interesting Fact respecting a 46
Carisbrooke Castle, Storming of, Grand Military Display, Entrance to the Village; Besiegers entering the Castle &c. . . . 400
Cartoons, Additional Prizes . . 108
Cartoons at Westminster Hall 3, 17, 18, 33
Castle Torum, Loss of the . . 387
Catalans 76
Cavendish, The late Right Hon. the Earl 5
Census of England and Wales . 214
Census (between pp. 256 and 257, published October 1st . . . 282
Central Criminal Court, 125, 148, 47, 194, 190, 207, 231, 251, 263, 291, 311, 325, 343, 359, 373, 394
Centu to Drake 43
Cerito, Lines on 146
Change begets Change . . 126
Charles the Bold and his Daughter, Tombs of at Bruges . . . 357
Charter House, Founder's Day at the 388
Chat, Rambles in the Realms of, 10, 22, 38, 54, 69
Chatham, Fête in Her Majesty's Visit to 161, 177
Chatham, Grand Siege Operations at Excavating, Storming, &c. 152, 153
Chatsworth, The Hunting Tower at 393
Chatsworth "The Palace of the Peak" 376
Chatsworth, Queen Mary's Bower at 412
Chatsworth, see also "Queen, the," At
Chatter's, Sir William, New Mansion, Fire at 423
Cheap Cottage Establishments 396
Cleese, 16 17, 47, 72, 76, 107, 126, 141, 155, 174, 205, 240, 256, 272, 288, 303, 318, 352, 366, 394
Chess Association, the Yorkshire . 331
Chess Match (First) between England and France . . . 331
Second and Third Games . . 394
Fourth and Fifth Games . . 426
Chesterfield, Her Majesty's Arrival at 370
Chester Regatta . . . 191, 123
China, see India, China, and Afghanistan
China, Intercourse with . . 246
Chinese Characters . . . 308
Chinese Fruits and Tariff . . 308
Christchurch, Turnham-green . 95
Christ's Hospital Scholars, Presentation of to Her Majesty . . 29
Christmas, Original Stanzas to . 406
Christmas, Old, by Crowquill . 416
Christmas "At Home" . . 416
Christmas Greeting, Our . . 401
Christmas Canticle, from the Illuminated Manuscript . . . 411
Christmas Carol, the Yule Block . 146
Christmas Pantomimes . . . 424
Christmas, The Poor at . . . 407
Christmas Prize Meat at Butcher's Shop 416
Christmas Waits, The . . . 410
Church Extension 402
Church Universities, &c. 11, 35, 99, 142, 155, 174, 190, 199, 231, 254, 295, 311, 327, 343, 374, 402.
Churchyard, Disgraceful Proceedings in a 273, 294
Cigar Manufacture at Manilla . 306
City Address, Presentation of, to Her Majesty at Buckingham Palace 37
City Antiquities 396
City of London School . . . 96
Civil Engineers, Putney, College of 99, 100
Clendon, Captain, Court Martial on 419
Clergyman, Mysterious Disappearance of a, at Birmingham . 258
Coach Accident at Bewdley . 199
Coasting Vessels, Dreadful Loss of Life, &c 283
Cobham Park, Dreadful Murder and Parricide at . 151, 167, 183, 215
Coblentz, Panorama of . . . 44
Coincidences, Strange . . . 368
Colliery Accident at Fenton, in Staffordshire 14
Colombia Steamer, Loss of the, in a Fog 79, 84
Colosseum, The 284
Comic Almanac for 1844 Remarks and Extracts from . . . 439
Common Pleas, Court of . 314, 345
Comparative Speed, Examples of . 366
Constellation Hall, Dublin . . 284
Conflagration in St. George's-in-the East 44
Conquer Hill, Clontarf . . . 274
Consumption, Hospital for . . 279
Conti, Signor Domenico, as Alamiro, in the Opera of "Belisario" 13
Convicts (ench, Frost, &c . . 398
Corea, Martyrdom in, of French Missionaries, &c. . . . 291
Cork Houses of Reception and Inquiry, Commercial Building and Imperial Hotel, Model Room at the Corn Exchange, General Meetings in the Great Room of the 139
Cork, Cove of, Savings Bank, Aldermen Bridge and Corn Exchange, and Court House . . 132
Coronation, Remarks on the Anniversary of the 1
Corporation Returns . . . 487
Corranna, Winner of the Cesarewitch Stakes 268
Correspondents, Notices to, 6, 22, 38, 54, 70, 86, 102, 118, 134, 150, 166, 182, 198, 214, 230, 246, 262, 278, 294, 310, 326, 342, 358, 374, 390, 406, 422
Courage and Humanity . . . 46
Court and Haut Ton, 3, 29, 44, 45, 71, 87, 103, 118, 134, 150, 162, 182, 214, 230, 246, 262, 278, 294, 310, 326, 342, 358, 374, 391, 407, 421
Cowes, Harbour and Club House of the Royal Yacht Squadron &c 140
Cowes Regatta 139, 140
Crampton, Judge 244
Crewe Fête at Grand Junction Railway 405
Cricket Matches, Kent v. all England 45
Cricket, Gentlemen v. Players . 91
Cricket, Marylebone v. the Midland Counties 139
Cricket, The Marylebone Club v. all England 59
Criminal Courts, Lessons of the . 369
Cromwell's Palace at Bennansbury . 266
Cuddy, Lieutenant, Trial of at the Central Criminal Court . . 138
Custom-house Frauds, Remarks on the, &c . . . 71, 119, 147
DADD, Richard, the Parricide, 167, 183, 215
Dakes, Mr. John, Brother of the late Baroness de Feuchers . . 267
Deaths 15, 31, 47, 63, 79, 94, 110, 127, 143, 159, 175, 191, 207, 222, 239, 254, 271, 287, 303, 318, 334, 350, 366, 381, 395, 411, 427
Deaths of Great Men . . . 171
Dee Stalking, Lines on . . . 269
Deer Stalking, Engraving representing 264
Delacroix, Paul . . . . 17.
Derby, Plan of 35
Derby Arboretum 36
Derby Town-hall 36
Derby Railway 36
Derby Agricultural Meeting, 33, 46
Derby Cattle stands . . . 46
Derby Ploughing Match . . 40
Derby Banquet 41
Derby, The Pavilion . . . 41
Derby Prize Cattle Show . . 4.
Derby, Prize Meds. . . . 49
Derby, Agricultural Meeting of the Royal Society at . 50, 61, 63
Derby Horticultural Fête . . 67
Derby, Her Majesty's Arrival at, 378, 379 See also Queen, The.
Derby Clubs 215
Destitute, Refuge for the See Refuge for the Destitute
Destitution and Distress in the Metropolis, Proceedings and Remarks thereon. See Metropolis, The Devonshire, The Most Noble His Grace the Duke of . . . 376
Devonport Dockyard, Landing of the Queen and Prince Albert at . 172
Dogs' Tales 116
Doncaster Races Cup . . . 187
"Don Pasquale," Garden Scene in . 99
Douglas, The Marchioness of, Question respecting Precedency of 135
Dove Missionary Steam Schooner, The 341
Dramatic and Musical Chit-chat, 90, 125, 143, 171, 186, 205, 235, 266, 294, 315, 363
Drawing-room, Her Majesty's . . 93
Drew and Jones of the Trinity House, Drowning of Captains . 51
Drill in the Army, Remarks thereon 129
Drowned in Bed, Case of a Man . 389
Drummond, Colonial Statue of the late Mr. T., late Under-Secretary of State for Ireland . . . 258
Drury lane Theatre, Sudden Death in 278
Dublin, The Castle at . . . 257, 288
Dublin Castle, Fortifying of . . 323
Dublin State Trials, 231, 324, 326, 344, 345, 346, 347, 352, 355.
Duel, Fatal, fought at Camden-town, between Lieut.-Col Fawcett and Lieut. Munro. Remarks and Proceedings respecting 27, 35, 54, 55, 135.
Duel at Camden-town. Observations on the case of Lieut. Munro 405
Duelling, The Vice of. Remarks on 17
Duels Celebrated Persons who have fought 68
Duffy, Esq. 345, 346
Dunmore Agricultural Society. The Flitch of Bacon Prize . . 226
Dunmow Priory, Ancient Chair at . 205
Durham Election, Comments on . 24
Dyce Sombre, Disappearance of Mr. 211

ECCENTRIC Character . . 171
Eclipse of the Moon Telescopic View of, drawn at the Royal Observatory, Greenwich . 365, 385
Edenser, The Village of . . . 412
Edinburgh Festival . . 254, 259
Egham Races 139
Electric Eels at the Adelaide Gallery 284
Ellesmere Port, Opening of the New Dock 201 202
Elssler and Cerito, Pas de Deux by, on the occasion of her Majesty's State Visit to the Italian Opera House 93
Elton, the late Mr. . . . 75, 84
Emma, Wreck of the Barque on the Goodland Rock, Margate . 293
Engaging and France, or the Sisters, a Romance of Real Life, 14, 30, 45, 60, 76, 94, 126, 141, 157, 173, 189, 205, 221, 237, 252, 269, 285, 301, 317, 333, 349, 413
English Amateurs abroad . . 186
English Harvest Home . . . 233, 34
Epitome of News, 6, 19, 47, 51, 67, 91, 98, 115, 149, 147, 171, 187, 198, 214, 227, 250, 267, 283, 302, 321, 339, 366, 371, 395, 403, 4 7
Equestrian, the Regent of Spain, Arrival of, &c. &c. 131, 133, 151, 167, ... 199
Equestrio. Bust of 300
Le Clercq, the Entertainment to at the Mansion-house . 209, 210, 214.
Etiquette, see Ethiopia . . . 300
Eton College, Speeches Festival in the College Hall, &c. . . . 99
Every Body's Column, 45, 136, 171, 256.
Exchequer Chamber . . . 323
Exchequer, Court of . 238, 355, 356
FAIRLOP Fair, the Frigate, &c. . 44
Faire Lighthouse 84
Farren, Mr. W., Alarming Illness of 278, 320
Fashions, The, 19, 32, 56, 91, 106, 122, 144, 154, 176, 206, 218, 235, 256, 272, 283, 304, 320, 336, 428
"Favourite, The," Scene from the Opera of 285
Fetter-lane, late Fire in, Funeral of the Sufferers, &c. . . . 131, 141
Figheldean (Wilts.), Destructive Fire at 183
Fire near London Bridge (Tooley-street 137
Fire Brigades 323 329
Fire-proof Dress, invented by Mr. Braidwood 263
Fires, 3, 14, 99, 119, 131, 141, 167, 190, 199, 215, 219, 231, 266, 275, 311, 343, 344, 359, 368, 378, 391, 411, 421
First Fire of the Season . . . 264
First Fireside, a Social Ballad, by J. A Wade 336
Fire-proof Dress, invented by Mr. Braidwood .

Page

Keeping the Peace, Brief Reasons for 126
Kensington Palace, Fire at . . 43
Ker, Lord Robert, Death of . . 11
Kind, Death of Herr Frederic . 193
King's College, the Late Principal of 402
King's College, Opening of the Royal Museum at . . . 5
Kingston, Jamaica, Late Destructive Storm at . . . 245, 247
Knightsbridge, Conflict between the Military and Police, Remarks thereon 166
Kemig, the Performer on the Cornet-à-Piston . . . 348

LABOURING Classes, Condition of the 294
Lahcee, Murder of Shere Sing, &c. 307
Lamoriere, General . . . 308
Landslip at Brighton . . . 365
Latimer, Bishop, Birthplace of . 93
Law, Anomalies in our (Case at the Thames Police Court) . . 182
Law Appointments, The New . 75
Law Courts, The Opening of the . 292
Lawyer's Time, Value of a . . 211
Lazarus, Mr., First Clarinet at Her Majesty's Theatre . . . 348
"Le Delire d'un Peintre," Scene from 109
Lejars, Madame 109
Licensed Victuallers Asylum . 310
Lichfield, see Queen, The, &c.
Lincoln's Inn Hall, The New . 218
Lull, white, the Cricket Bowler . 59
Literature, Magazines, &c., 42, 58, 59, 111, 143, 154, 186, 218, 234, 299, 314, 315, 330, 339, 363, 426
Liverpool, Great Fires and Loss of Life at 423
Liverpool District Court of Bankruptcy, Extraordinary Fracas . 387
Lizard, Total Loss of Her Majesty's Steamer 103
London Antiquities . . . 46
London, Representation of the City of, Election, &c. 215, 247, 251, 272, 276, 277, 294.
London and Birmingham Railway, Fatal Accident on . . . 168
London and Blackwall Railway Company 134
London and Brighton Railway . 140
Lord Mayor, The, and Lord Mayor's Day, 229, 230, 231, 245, 305, 310, 312, 313, 314.
Lumley, Mr., the entrepenaeur of Her Majesty's Theatre . . 124
Luton Chapel, Interior of, &c. . 357
Luton Hoo, and Destruction of, by the late Fire there . 325, 326, 329
Lyndoch, Portrait and Death of . 405

MACDONOGH, Esq., Q.C. Ireland), Francis . . . 359, 366
Mad Doctors 171
Madrid, visit to the Royal Palace . 49, 50
Malta, The Great Harbour . . 244
Malta, The Governor's Palace . 244
Manchester, Alarming Fire at . 249
Manchester Athenæum . . 256
Manchester Town Hall, Bazaar at, 360.
Manilla Cheroots, Manufacture of, at Manilla 306
Manners, The, 15, 30, 47, 63, 79, 94, 110, 158, 174, 190, 206, 222, 239, 254, 270, 286, 302, 318, 334, 347, 366, 371, 390, 411, 427.
Marlborough's Allegiate School . 164
Marlborough's Despatches, The Duke of 92
Marquesas Islands 115
Marriage of the Princess Augusta of Cambridge . . . 7, 8, 9
Marriages, 15, 31, 47, 63, 79, 94, 110, 127, 143, 159, 175, 191, 207, 222, 239, 254, 255, 271, 287, 303, 318, 334, 350, 366, 371, 395, 411, 427.
Mathew, Father . . 88, 131, 151
Maxillaria Meleli (Orchidaceæ) . 32
Mecklenburg Strelitz, The Hereditary Grand Duke of, Marriage of 7, 8, 9
Melton Mowbray 333
Mermon Steamer, Loss of the . 228
Merchant Seamen's Incorporation . 11
Mersey, Alarming fire on the . 131
Mesmeric Mania 407
Methodist Churches of the, 16, 96, 117, 222, 239, 271.
Metropolis, Destitution and Distress in the, 262, 278, 324, 343, 359, 374, 391, 394, 407.
Metropolis, The Unhealthiness of parts of the 278
Metropolitan Cathedrals, The condition of the 246
Mevenne Pursuits 196
Michael of Russia, The Grand Duke of, Arrival of His Imperial Highness 231
Michael of Russia, The Grand Duke, Banquet given to, at Windsor Palace: Portrait of . 232
Michael of Russia, Visit of His Imperial Highness, the Grand Duke, to Woolwich . . 247, 248, 249
Michael of Russia, Departure of His Imperial Highness . . 304
Middlesex Quarter Sessions 7, 38, 199, 206
Middle Temple Hall, Term Dinner in 301
Midland Circuit, 31, 91, 122, 364, 422
Midland Counties, Her Majesty's Visit to the. See Queen, The Milbank Penitentiary, Death in the 291
Military Outrage at Cardigan . 423
Milton's Mulberry Tree . . 226
Missionary Steam Schooner, Dove . 341
Missouri, Burning of H.M. Steam Frigate 302
Monnais, Mr., The Celebrated Pen and Ink Drawing Master . 19
Mogul, Sultan Akbar's Palace, Sale of Terra Cotta Windows and Inlaid Marbles 228
Monaghan Q.C. (Ireland, Jas. Henry Esq. 339, 356
Moncreiff, The Dramatist . . 407
Monte Video 420
Montreal, Bell for the New Roman Catholic Cathedral at . . 125
"Moonshine," Scene from the New Comedy of, at the Haymarket 93
Moore, Q.C. (Ireland, Mr. Richard 339, 366
Moore, Sir Thomas and Erasmus . 48
Morel Fatio 171
Moseley's Mechanical Factory, Destruction of by Fire . . 87
Mount Edgecumbe, Her Majesty's Visit to 151
Munro, Lieutenant, Strictures on the Case of 406
Munro, Lieutenant, and the Coroner for Middlesex . . . 407
Murder and Suicide, Remarkable Case of, in Paris . . . 231
Murder, Statistics of . . . 211
Murray, Mr., the Publisher, Death of 15, 26
Music, &c. . 42, 123, 171, 219, 363.
Music in the Hall, The . . 416
Musical Canon, Enigmatured for Five Voices, Inscribed on the Tomb of Haydn 154

NAPOLEON, Anecdote of . . 211
National Charity, New Project of, The Houseless Poor . . 337
National Sports, 7, 27, 43, 59, 79, 91, 106, 118, 136, 158, 174, 188, 202, 219, 238, 250, 268, 286, 299, 306, 330, 343, 355, 394, 419.
Naval and Military Intelligence, 11, 75, 92, 79, 123, 139, 147, 174, 187, 203, 219, 232, 251, 268, 302, 311, 334, 387, 411.
Nelson, Boyhood of Letter of Capt. Manby to our Editor . 363
Nelson, Rainham Thorpe Parsonage, The Birthplace of . . 349.
Nelson Column, Trafalgar-square 261, 266, 281, 282, 340
Nelson District, in New Zealand . 340
Nelson Statue, Remarks on, &c. . 249
Nelson Testimonial . . . 285
Nemours, The Duke and Duchess of 329, 157, 338
Nemours, The Duke and Duchess of, Departure of . . . 378
Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Dreadful Conflagration at . . . 19
Newcastle-on-Tyne Races . . 13
Newcombe, Case of, Robbery of Bank Notes, &c. . . . 231
New Cross Station, Fatal Accident at the 263
Newington, Extraordinary Discovery at Case of the Stealing of a Coffin 199
News Box, The 399
Newspaper Statistics . . . 126
New Year, A Family Song for the 422
New Year and the Old, Remarks on 417
New Zealand 420
New Zealand, View of Nelson District in 340
New Zealand, New Plymouth Settlement 420
Nixon's Country, The . . . 479
Nogueras, General . . . 176, 196
Nooks and Corners of Old England, 32, 112, 304, 208, 304, 317, 349, 364, 392
Normandy, Charles Louis de Bourbon, commonly known as the Duke of, Case of in the Insolvent Debtors' Court . . . 211, 338
Norham Castle 82
Norris Castle, The Royal Visit to . 172
North American Indians, Party of presented to the Queen see also Redwood 401
Northern Circuit . . 91, 147, 402, 426
Nothing's New under the Sun . 171
Nottingham, Reportings on Her Majesty's Visit . . . 353
Nottingham, Her Majesty's Arrival at (See also Queen, the) 178, 379, 389
Nottingham Election, O'Connor v. Lawson, Libel Case tried at Croydon 114
November Night 352
Nugent, Lord, and E. Deyrell, Esq. 215
Nutwith, the Winner of the St. Leger 201, 202
Nux Vomica, New Method of Preserving Skins of Animals and Birds 239

OASTLER, Mr., Case of . . 349
Oastler Liberty Fund . . 360
O'Connel, Esq., M.P., Daniel . 345
O'Connell, Esq., M.P., Daniel, Arrest of 250
O'Connell, Esq., M.P., Daniel, Birthplace of 278
O'Connell, Esq., M.P., Daniel, Prosecution of . . . 315, 332
O'Connell, Esq., M.P., Daniel, Residence in Merrion Square . 328
O'Connel, Esq., M.P., Daniel, Trial of 304
O'Connell Tribute, The . . 347
O'Connell, Esq., M.P., John 345, 346
O'Hagan, Esq., Thomas . 236, 266
Ojibbeway Indians, Presentation of to the Queen . . . 401
Ordyle and Myers, Destruction of Cascade Manufactory, at Lambeth 323
"Old Guard" Scene from The, at the Princess's Theatre . . 209
Old Maids 292
Old Year, Valedictory Verses to . 426
Old Year and the New, Remarks on 417
O'Loghlen, Bart., Sir Colman 359, 360
Oncidium Excavatum Orchidaceæ) 128
"On Duty," The Ballet of . . 45
Opium Smoker 21
Opium Packages 21
Opium Smuggling 21
Opium Trade 21
Orleans, The Duke of, Chapel erected to the Memory of, at Paris 295
Orleans Railway 268
Oshaldiston (Simpson and others (Vice-Chancellor's Court) . 7
O Sauish, Mr., as Creve-Cœur, in the "Robbmans" . . . 348
Otho, King of Greece . . 20
Outram, Superb Sword for presentation to Major . . . 249
Overland Mail 19, 82, 274, 307, 370
Oxford Circuit . . . 364, 402
Oyster Market, Opening of the, at Billingsgate, . . . 97

PANAMA 77
Panama, Canal Across the Isthmus of 77, 127
Parliament, Proceedings in, 2, 26, 30, 50, 66, 83, 106, 115, 118, 130, 134, 238
Parliament, Prorogation of . . 130
Parliament, her Majesty's Progress to the House of Lords . 129
Parliament Oak, Sherwood Forest 204
Parliamentary Representation, &c. (Return) 320
Parliamentary Returns, Expensive 174
Parsonstown Castle, the Seat of the Earl of Rosse and Parsonstown 165
Partridge, Mr., Complimentary Ode to 326
Patent Theatres, Monopoly of, Mr. Macready's Petition to the House of Commons . . . 109
Pattison, Esq., James . . 265
Pauper Clothing, Singular Case of theft of, &c. 166
Pauper Riot in St. George's Workhouse 131
Paupers, &c., Harsh Treatment of in and out of Workhouses . 6
Peace Convention 3
Peace Convention, Observations Respecting Comments on, by a Contemporary 6
Peel, Sir Robert, at Hipperholme School 211
Pedestrianism Extraordinary . 249
Pedomotive Machine . . . 349
Pegasus, Total Wreck of the, 55, 63, 66, 74, 83, 84.
Pencillings in the Four Courts, Dublin, during the Pending State Prosecutions . . 345, 350
Penelope, H. M. Steam Frigate . 1
Pennefather, Chief Justice . . 344
Pentonville Prison, Treatment of Convicts in 387
"Per, The," Scene from the New Ballet of 237
Perrin, Jules 344
Perrin, Esq., John . . . 359, 360
Petapa, Signor, Farewell of . . 349
Phenomenon of Jupiter appearing without Satellites . . . 235
Photographic Process at Mr. Beard's Establishment . . 125
Pigott, Q.C., Ireland, the Right Hon. David Richard . 359, 360
Pilch, the Cricketer . . . 45
Pimlico, Conflagration at . . 349
Ploughing Match near Derby . 40
Plymouth Royal Victualling Establishment and Breakwater . 176
Policing Affairs . . . 223, 238
Poetry Original, 11, 43, 44, 54, 128, 186, 330, 395
Police, Conduct of the, in Respect to Publicans Remarks on . 198
Police Office, the Law of the . 81
Police Offices, Cases at, 35, 43, 63, 110, 122, 138, 151, 167, 174, 190, 198, 206, 211, 227, 238, 247, 251, 264, 266, 275, 279, 291, 311, 327, 332, 348, 366, 379, 375, 391, 395, 403, 407, 428, 427.
Polignac, Prince, and the French Government 352
Polish Refugees, Ball for the, at the Mansion-house . . . 399
Political Murder 268
Pompey's Pillar, Recent Ascent of 57
Pontyborn Gate Destroyed . . 293
Poor, Neglect of the, Structures thereon 49
Pope, his Holiness the, Attempt to Assassinate 268
Popular Portraits, 99, 203, 228, 293, 325, 340, 341
Postage Committee . . . 342, 343
Postscripts, 3, 26, 42, 55, 71, 87, 103, 167, 184, 199, 215, 247, 264, 279, 314, 326, 347, 362, 393, 394, 407, 423
Poultry, &c. at Windsor, Her Majesty's 408, 409
Powder Mill near Hounslow, Explosion of a 311
Press, The, at Sea, Interesting Case of on board the Troop ship Belleisle 203
Preston Guild Robbery . . . 147
Prince Albert, His Royal Highness, Lands on being Invested with the Order of the Legion of Honour 195
Princess's Theatre 124
Prince of Wales's Birth-day, Lines on 339
Prince of Wales, Harp for . . 93
Princess Augusta Caroline, Marriage of H. R. H. the, and the Hereditary Grand Duke of Mecklenburg Strelitz . . 7, 8, 9
Princess Royal's Harp . . 217, 272
Princess Royal Steamer, Loss of the 367
Prince of Orange, Landing of the, Trial of 201
Prior's Tribute, The . . . 347
O'Connell, Esq., M.P., John 345, 346
O'Hagan, Esq., Thomas, 236, 266
Ojibbeway Indians, Presentation of to the Queen . . . 401
Ordyle and Myers, Destruction of Cascade Manufactory, at Lambeth 323
"Old Guard" Scene from The, at the Princess's Theatre . . 209
Old Maids 292
Old Year, Valedictory Verses to . 426
Old Year and the New, Remarks on 417
O'Loghlen, Bart., Sir Colman 359, 360
Oncidium Excavatum Orchidaceæ) 128
"On Duty," The Ballet of . . 45
Opium Smoker 21
Opium Packages 21
Opium Smuggling 21
Opium Trade 21
Orleans, The Duke of, Chapel erected to the Memory of, at Paris 295
Orleans Railway 268
Oshaldiston (Simpson and others (Vice-Chancellor's Court) . 7
O Sauish, Mr., as Creve-Cœur, in the "Robbmans" . . . 348
Otho, King of Greece . . 20
Outram, Superb Sword for presentation to Major . . . 249

Queen, The, Her Majesty's Summer Excursion 87
Queen, The, Her Majesty's Visit to the Thames Tunnel . . 73
Queen, The, City Address, Presentation of to her Majesty . 37
Queen, The, Her Majesty's Marine Excursion, 147, 148, 168, 169, 170, 172, 173, 176, 182, 183, 192.
Queen, The, Her Majesty's Visit to Mount Edgecumbe . . 151
Queen, The, Her Majesty's Arrival at Brighton, from her Marine Excursion 167
Queen, The, Her Majesty's Visit to France, 145, 161, 162, 170, 177, 179, 180, 181, 183, 185, 189, 192.
Queen, The, Sèvres Casket presented to her Majesty by Louis Philippe 261, 262
Queen, The, Her Majesty's Belgian Excursion, 193, 198, 199, 197, 200, 211, 212, 214, 216, 217, 232
Queen, The, Her Majesty in a Roman Catholic Chapel at Bruges . 211
Queen, The, Her Majesty's Visit to the Midland Counties, 343, 353, 361, 362, 374, 378, 379, 392, 393, 396, 397
Queen, The, Her Majesty's Visit to Cambridge, . . 269, 273, 284, 295
Queen, The, Her Majesty's Visit to Cambridge University, 280, 281, 282, 283, 284, 296, 297, 298, 300
Queen, The, Her Majesty's Visit to the Midland Counties:
To Lichfield 373
To Chatsworth . 369, 374, 376
To Belvoir Castle . 377, 378
To the Belvoir Hunt . . 382
The Meet at Belvoir . . 384
Triumphal Arches, &c. . 392, 393
Silver Cistern at Belvoir Castle 396
Leicester Triumphal Arches, &c. 396, 397
Queen, The, Her Majesty's Return to Windsor Castle . . . 375
Queen, The, Brustol and Dublin Steamer, Loss of, . . . 167
Queen Dowager's Visit to Witley Court 82
Queen Mary's Bower at Chatsworth 412
Queen of Beauty, Head of the, by Beames 221
Queen's College, Birmingham 141, 142
Queen's Bench, Court of . 345, 353
Queen's Bench Court, Dublin . 428

RAILWAY Carriage, Interior of the Royal 52
Railway Collision in the Summit Tunnel 3
Railway Pleasure Excursions . 75
Railways and Coaches . . 46
Railway Train, Desperate Leap from a 261
Ray, Rev., T. M. . . 345, 349
Reading and Caversham Regatta . 140
Reading, New Public Rooms at . 203
Reading, Royal Hall at . . 251
Rebecca at Winchester . . 141
Rebeccaites, Death by Drowning of a Witness among the . . 423
Refuge for the Destitute . 418, 442
Regular, The, East indiaman, Loss of 266
Reilly, Plate presented to Mr. . 419
Reliance, The, Wreck of . . 241
Repeal Agitation, Defeat of -Arrest of O'Connell, ... 209
Repeal Association, Repeal Meeting, 109, 120, 123, 135, 136, 142, 194, 219, 228, 245, 323, 347, 375, 387, 402 (See also Ireland, &c.)
Repeal Balloon . . . 203, 204
Repeal Cross 279
Repeal, the State of the . 23, 240
Repeal Wife Arrangements . . 98
Retford the Third, Mr. Charles Keane as 13
Richborough, Discoveries at 259, 260
Richmond, His Grace the Duke of 69
Richmond Mechanics' Institution, 151
Rifle Practice of the Artillery Company and Gold Medal . . 140
Ripon, St. Wilfred's Races . 189
Rolla' Court 338
Roman Catholic Church at Islington 4
Romance of Real Life . . 388
Ross Captain James . . 268
Rosse, Earl of, President of the British Association in Ireland . 156
Rosse's, the Earl of, Great Telescope, at Parsonstown, workshop, &c. 165
Rosse's, the Earl of, Wall for Machinery, &c. 166
Rotunda, The, at the Bank of England 498
Rowton Brig, Extraordinary Occurrence on board of . . . 368
Royal Agricultural Society of England, Fifth Anniversary, 35, 60, 61, 62
Royal Exchange, The . . 30, 298
Royal Horse Artillery, Annual Inspection of the 67
Royal Hunt, Meeting of the . 329
Royal Irish Art-Union . . 165
Royal Irish Art-Union, Distribution of Prizes 164
Royal Mail Steam-packet Company 231
Royal progress, Remarks on the termination of the . . . 374
Royal Railway Carriage on the London and Birmingham Railway 353, 354
Royal Railway Carriage, Interior of ditto 353
Royal Request 46
Royal Request to Genius . . 419
Royal Society, Meeting of, at Somerset house 412
Royal Yacht Squadron Regatta at Cowes . . . 91, 163, 164
Royal Yacht Squadron, yachts starting for the Queen's Cup . 140
See also Cowes Regatta, &c.
Rubini, Anecdote of . . . 268
Rumpenheim, The Duke of Cambridge's Palace at, . . . 285
Russia's, The Emperor of, Good Nature (not by a Pole) . . 126
Rutland, The Most Noble His Grace the Duke of 377

SACRED Harmonic Society . 330
Sacrilege, Daring Case of (Midland Circuit, ... 91
St. Bartholomew's Hospital . 235
St. George's Chapel, Windsor 240
St. George's Hospital . . 245
St. Leonard's Church, Shoreditch, Riot in 227
St Luke's Church, Chelsea . 117
St. Margaret's Church, Westminster, ... 222
St. Martin's Court, Calamitous Fire in 229
St Mary's Church, Stafford . 347
St. Olave before the late Fire, The Interior of the Church of . 203, 204
St. Olave's Church, Total Destruction of 110, 137
St. Paul's and Westminster Abbey, Remarks on 150
St. Stephen's, Walbrook, Interior of 229
Salisbury Election . . . 349
Santa Anna 429
Santa Anna and his Aide-de-Camp, Arista 124
Savings Banks for the Military . 319
Savoy Chapel, The Royal . 261
Savoy Chapel, Interior of . 261
Savoy Chapel, Restoration of . 262
Scinde 276
Scotland. Outrages on Churches . 219
Scotland, Riots in Ross-shire . 227
Scott, The Rev. John, President of the Wesleyan Conference . 208
Scottish Union Assurance Company. 420
Scudds, James, the Pedestrian . 249
Seizure of Arms False Alarm . 375
Serres Casket, presented by Louis Philippe to Queen Victoria . 261, 262
Shadow Dance by Cerito . . 45
Shaw, Bart., Sir James, late Chamberlain of the City of London . 285
Sheet of Paper, A long . . 176
Sheil, M.P., The Right Hon. Richard Lalor . . . 314, 366.
Shere Sing and his son Purtaub Sing, Murder of . . 307 318
Sheriff's Court 251
Sheriffs, Nomination of . . 322
Sherwood Forest, The Parliament Oak 294
Shipwrecks, Disastrous . . 239
Shipwrecks, First Report of Committee on 151
Shoa, Presents to her Majesty from the Christian King of . . 160
Shoa, Crowns of the King and Queen of Shoa . . . 160
Shooter's Hill, Alarming Fire at . 279
Siddons, Mrs., Portrait of the late, added to the National Gallery . 171
Sivori's Farewell Concert . . 96
Skeleton at Windsor, Discovery of a 131
Slater, A 171
Slave trade Case. Trial of M. de Zulueta . . . . . 26.
Smith, The Rev. Sydney . . 349
Smith, The Rev. Sydney, and the Insolvent States of America . 342
Smithfield Club, Christmas Cattle-Show 178, 384
Smithfield Club Prizes . . 388, 389
Smithfield Club Prize Implements, 389, 390
Smithfield, The Great Christmas Market 386
Smuggling, Interesting to . . 98
Smugglers, Affray with . . 256
Smyrna, City and Bay of . . 244
Soulier, The Thick Fog . . 389
Southampton, Her Grace the Duke of, at the Railway Station, Rugby 393
South Australia 245
Welsh Grave Yard, Description of a 359
Wesleyan Theological Institution, Reformers of . . 105, 106, 226
Western Circuit 394
Westminster Abbey, Service at . 263
Westminster Bridge, Repairs of . 261
Westminster Hall, Opening of the Law Courts 292
Westminster School . . . 407
Westminster Sessions . . 251, 426
Whaler (British) Capture and Destruction of a, and Massacre of three of the Crew . . . 403
Whales, Capture of, at Zeeland . 138
Whitside, Esq., Q.C. (Ireland) James 359, 360
"Whose Your Friend?" Scene from the Comedy of. . . . 157
William Frederick, Count of Nassau, Ex-King of Holland . 403, 404
Windsor, Discovery of a Skeleton at 131
Windsor Great Park. Flemish Farm 316
Windsor Home Park, Poultry House, Poultry, &c., (See Queen, The)
Wine District, of the Alto Douro, Map of the 199
Witley Court 81, 82
Wood, Sir Matthew, Bart, Funeral of, &c., &c. . 213, 221, 231, 256
Wood Paving in the Strand . 153
Woolwich, Affray at between the Military and the Colliers . 138
"Woman," Scene from the New Play of 237
Worcester, Launch of H M.S., at Deptford 252
Wybo, James, the Celebrated Draught Player . . . 256

YACHT, Experimental Squadron . 77
Yacht, Sailing Match between the Mystery and the Enigma . 44
Yarmouth Races . . . 119, 120
Yates, Mrs., as Louise in the "Bohemians" 348
Yorkshire, Agricultural Society, Meeting of the . . . 83
Yorkshire Chess Association . 331
Young England 113
Yule Block, The, a Christmas Carol 416

ZOOLOGICAL Society of London 336
Zulueta, Trial of M. De . . 291

Sydney, New Government House at 404

TAGUS, The, preparing to sail from Southampton . . . 244
Talcrs' Asylum, Haverstock Hill . 117
Tamburini (after Dantan) . . 77
Tamworth Castle 364
Tamworth Farmers' Club, Dinner of the 275
Taunton, Murder at . . . 387
Teetotalism, Father Mathew . 86
Teetotalism, Increase of . . 82
Teetotal Festival at Roche Abbey . 77
Telegraph, and Church of St. Olave before the Fire . . 138
Telescope at Cambridge, The Northumberland . . . 284
Temperance Movement . . 183
Temperance Monument at Cork . 321
Temple Gardens, Closing of, on Sundays 22
Tennent, Esq., M.P., Emerson . 293
Thames Embankment . . 432
Thames Grand Regatta . 27, 28
Thames Grand Regatta, Putney Silver Badge 63
Thames Tunnel, Her Majesty's Visit to the . . . 73, 96
Theatres, Theatrical Notices, &c., 11, 13, 29, 45, 58, 90, 105, 123, 124, 219, 235, 237, 250, 266, 283, 299, 306, 305, 378, 394, 424, 425
Thesiger, Mr., M.P. . . 263, 264
Threshed into Matrimony . . 171
Thug, A British 168
Thunderbolt, A Considerate . 171
Tierney, The Rev. T. . . 345, 346
Tooley street, Fire in . 131, 137, 138
Torbay, Royal Regatta . . 139
Tower of London, Improvements at the 323
Transportation, a Candidate for . 347
Travelling, Improvements in . 349
Trepoff, The Drawbridge at . 176
Trinity College, Historical Society 359, 366
Trinity College, Provost of . 369
Trinity College, Inaugural Address of 419
Trotting Match, Grand, by the American Horse Confidence . 104
Turkish Crescent, The . . 196
Twelfth Night Characters . 429, 430
Tyrrel, The Rev. P. J. . . 345

VALENCIA 76
Veloce and the Lizard Steamer, Collision between 131
Vice Chancellor's Courts . . 7
Victoria, Her Majesty the Queen, See (Queen The).
Victoria, The New American Line Ship 108
Victoria, The Queen, Wreck of the Ship 167
Virginia Water, Fireworks at, Prince Albert's Birthday . . 149

WALBROOK Ward, Wardmote 407
Wales, State of: Riots and Proceedings in Respect to, 15, 51, 65, 75, 90, 138, 145, 146, 151, 167, 174, 178, 202, 205, 211, 226, 246, 275, 279, 290, 311, 323, 342
Walter, James, The Feeder of the Queen's Poultry, at Windsor . 409
War, The Horrors of . . . 46
Warburton, M.P., Henry . . 341
Waterford, The Marquis of, Address of, to the Tipperary Hunt 331
Wealth, the Mismanagement of, Remarks on 309
Weather, The Thick Fog . . 389
Wellington, His Grace the Duke of, at the Railway Station, Rugby 393
Welsh Commission . . . 245
Welsh Grave Yard, Description of a 359
Wesleyan Theological Institution, Reformers of . . 105, 106, 226
Western Circuit 394
Westminster Abbey, Service at . 263
Westminster Bridge, Repairs of . 261
Westminster Hall, Opening of the Law Courts 292
Westminster School . . . 407
Westminster Sessions . . 251, 426
Whaler (British) Capture and Destruction of a, and Massacre of three of the Crew . . . 403
Whales, Capture of, at Zeeland . 138
Whitside, Esq., Q.C. (Ireland) James 359, 360
"Whose Your Friend?" Scene from the Comedy of. . . . 157
William Frederick, Count of Nassau, Ex-King of Holland . 403, 404
Windsor, Discovery of a Skeleton at 131
Windsor Great Park. Flemish Farm 316
Windsor Home Park, Poultry House, Poultry, &c., (See Queen, The)
Wine District, of the Alto Douro, Map of the 199
Witley Court 81, 82
Wood, Sir Matthew, Bart, Funeral of, &c., &c. . 213, 221, 231, 256
Wood Paving in the Strand . 153
Woolwich, Affray at between the Military and the Colliers . 138
"Woman," Scene from the New Play of 237
Worcester, Launch of H M.S., at Deptford 252
Wybo, James, the Celebrated Draught Player . . . 256

YACHT, Experimental Squadron . 77
Yacht, Sailing Match between the Mystery and the Enigma . 44
Yarmouth Races . . . 119, 120
Yates, Mrs., as Louise in the "Bohemians" 348
Yorkshire, Agricultural Society, Meeting of the . . . 83
Yorkshire Chess Association . 331
Young England 113
Yule Block, The, a Christmas Carol 416

ZOOLOGICAL Society of London 336
Zulueta, Trial of M. De . . 291

INDEX TO THE ENGRAVINGS.

Page

AGED Pilgrims' Asylum, Camberwell . 293
Akber, Tomb of the Mogul Sultan . 288
Turra Cotta Windows, and Inland Marbles of Palace . 288
Alamito, Sign. Conti as . . 13
Albert, H.R.H. the Prince . 149
Portrait of, as Doctor of Civil Law . .
Birthday Fireworks at Virginia Water—the Shower of Rockets . 149
Firing the Park Guns . 149
Visit to Birmingham:
Bacchus and Sons' Glass Works . . 381
Free Grammar School . 381
Muntz's Rolling Mills . 381
Sargent's Sword Grinding Works . . 381
The Proving House . 382
Goblet presented to His Royal Highness . 382
Aldrington Church, Sussex, Ruins of . . 317
Allhallows Church, London Wall . 16
Amwell Church, Herts . 112
Andalusians . . 76
Anglesey, The Marquis of . 100
Anglesey Testimonial . 121
Arago, Dominic Francis . 121
Archery Fête at St. Leonards—the Royal Prize . . 154
Artillery Company:
Shooting for the Gold Medal . 140
Shooting without the Rest . 140
Shooting with the Rest . 140
Shooting, Sitting, with the Rest 140
Officer of Royal Artillery Company . . 140
Gold Medal . . 140
Assad y Kayat . . 77
Athens, The New Royal Palace at, 20, 244

BALFE, Michael William . 124
Balloon Ascent at Brighton . 185
Baring, Esq., Thomas . 265
Barrett, Esq., R. . 345
Belgium, His Majesty the King of the . . 12
Belgians, Her Majesty the Queen of the . . 200
Bell for Montreal Roman Catholic Cathedral . . 185
Bellyfulle, the Hermit of . 112
Belvoir Castle . . 377
See also Queen, The
Bentinck Steamer, The . 108
Berlin, The Opera House at . 157
Billingsgate, Opening of the Oyster Market . . 97
Birmingham, see Albert's, H.R.H. Prince, Visit to.
Blackrock, Brighton . 365
"Bohemian Girl," The, Scene from Balfe's Opera of . . 413
"Bohemians," The, Scene from, at the Adelphi . . 348
Book makers Provident Asylum . 82
Bordeaux, The Duke of . 241
Boulogne (Upper) Harbour . 125
Boulogne Races . . 141
Box, the Cricketer . . 45
Bramah's Factory at Pimlico, Destruction of, by Fire . . 340
Bright, M.P., Mr. . . 208
Bristol, New Guildhall . . 317
British Association at Cork . 153
Pleasure Excursion of the Promenade and Soirée at the Imperial Hotel . . 156
Portrait of Earl Rosse, President . . 156
Bromley Church . . 341
Bunting, The Rev. Dr., President of the Wesleyan Theological Institution at Richmond . 208
"Burkinapsotter, Wreck of the, off Margate . . 277
Conveying Emigrants from the Wreck . . 377
Burnham Thorpe Parsonage, the Birthplace of Nelson . 316
Burton Judge (Ireland) . . 344
Butcher's Almshouses, Waltham Green . . 108
Byron's, Lord, Autograph . 20

CAMPERDOWN, Her Majesty's Ship . . 13
Explosion on Board of . . 61
Carisbrooke Castle—Grand Military Display
Besiegers Attacking the Outposts . . 400
Entrance to the Village of Carisbrooke . . 400
Storming of Carisbrooke Castle 400
Besiegers entering the Castle . 400
Cartoons, Exhibition of the, in Westminster Hall . . 17
Additional Prizes—the Free Northern Britons Surprising the Roman Wall between the Tyne and the Solway . 105
Castalians . . 76
Cathcart, The Late Earl . . 5
Cerito as Gudine . . 45
Cerito and Elssler, Pas de Deux danced by . . 93
Charles the Bold and his Daughter, Tombs of at Bruges . . 317
Chatham, Grand Siege Operations at . . 152
General View of the Western Lines . . 169
Battery No. 1, Covering the Advance of Sappers, &c. . 172
Escalade of St. Mary's Flank 152
Storming the Stockade . 152
Blowing up the Bridge of Communication . . 153

Page

Defence of an Unfinished Work . . 153
Firing the Breaching Mine, &c. 153
Pontoon Bridge, and Firing an Experimental Submarine Charge . . 153
Chatsworth . . 376
See also Queen, The
Chatsworth, Queen Mary's Bower at . . . 413
Chess 16, 22, 47, 62, 78, 107, 126, 144, 155, 174, 206, 218, 240, 256, 272, 293, 332, 368
Chester Regatta . . 151
Chinese Characters . 308
Christchurch, Twrnham-green . 96
Christmas, Old, by Crowquill . 416
Christmas "At Home" . . 416
Christmas Pantomimes . 241, 420
Christmas Prize Meat at Butcher's Shop . . 416
Christmas Waits, The . 410
Christ's Hospital Scholars, Presentation of to the Queen . . 29
City Address, Presentation of to Her Majesty at Buckingham Palace . . 37
City of London School . 96
Civil Engineers, Putney, College for 100
Columbia Steam ship, Wreck of the 84
Comedial on Hall, Dublin . 272
Conquer Hill, Clontarf . . 276
Conti, Signor Domenico, as Almaviva, in the Opera of "Bellsario" . . 13
Corranna, the Winner of the Cesarewitch Stakes . . 268
Cork, View of . . 132
Cove . . 132
Savings Bank, Anglesey Bridge, and Corn Exchange . 132
Court House . . 132
Houses of Reception and Inquiry . . 133
Commercial Building and Imperial Hotel . . 133
Model Room at the Corn Exchange . . 133
General Meeting of the British Association in the Great Room of the Corn Exchange 133
Cowes Harbour, &c., Yacht Starting for the Queen's Cup . 140
Cowes Regatta . . 135
Start for the Cup . 104
The Gem Passing the Flag Boat . . 104
The Prize Cup . . 104
Crampton, Judge (Ireland) . 344
Crewe, Fête at . . 405
Crewe Railway Station . . 405
Cromwell's Palace, at Hermondsey 208

DANGER BIRD, Bones of the . 155
Deer Stalking in the Highlands . 264
Derby, View of . . 40
Plan of . . 37
Town Hall . . 36
Station . . 36
Derby, Meeting of the Royal Agricultural Society—Prize Medal . 40
Cattle Sheds . . 40
Ploughing Match . 40
Banquet at the Pavilion . 41
Exterior of Pavilion . 41
Show of Prize Cattle . 41
Prize Animals, Portraits of:
Messrs. Jeffries Hereford Bull, Barnard's Short-horned Bull, Worthington's Short-horned Heifer, Cartwright's Boar, Hobbs's Essex Boar, and the Duke of Devonshire's Lincolnshire Sow . . 60
Messrs. Pawlett's Leicester Shearling Ram, Stone's Leicester Ram, Metcalfe's Pure Long-horned Bull, Howsin's Cart horse, and Arthur Chesters Thorough-bred Horse Johnny Boy . . 61
Mr. Watson's Short-horned Heifer . . 62
Derby Horticultural Fête . 57
Derby Railway, Exterior and Interior . . 301
Desolate, Refuge for the See Refuge for the Destitute
Devonport Dockyard, Landing of the Queen and Prince Albert . 172
Devonshire, The Most Noble His Grace the Duke of, K.G. . 376
Dogs Tales . . 207
Doncaster Prize Cup . . 187
"Don Pasquale," The Garden Scene in . . 20
"Dove," The Missionary Steam Schooner the . . 341
Draught-player, The Celebrated, James Wyllie . . 256
Drawing Room, Her Majesty's:
Ambassador's Carriages . 24
Ambassador's Court . 24
Her Majesty the Queen . 24
Colour Court . . 24
Grand Staircase . . 25
Presentation, The . . 25
Grand Room . . 25
Tapestry Chamber . . 25
Drayton Manor . . 361
Drummond, Colossal Statue of the late Mr. T., Under Secretary of State for Ireland . . 365
Dublin, The Castle at . . 277
Dublin State Trials . . 344, 345
Mr Hughes before the Grand Jury (the Queen v. O'Connell) 324
Serjeant the Bull Rounds at Judge Burton's Chambers . 328
Daily, Levy . . 345
Queen's Bench Courts, Dublin, Interior of . . 328

Page

Portraits of Counsel for the Traversers
Fitzgibbon, Hatchell, Henn, M'Donough, Monaghan, Moore, O Hagan, O Loghlen, Perrin, Pigot, Shell, and Wilkinson
Dunmow Priory, Ancient Chair at 305

ECLIPSE of the Moon, Telescopic View of the, Drawn at the Royal Observatory, Greenwich . 385
Edenaor, The Village of . . 413
Electric Echo at the Adelaide Gallery . . . 284
Ellesmere Port, Opening of the New Dock at . . 201
Elton, The late Mr. . . 84
Emma, Wreck of t.e Barque, on the Nayland Rock, Margate . 293
England and France, or the Sisters, Illustrations to, 14, 30, 46, 62, 78, 141, 157, 164, 205, 221, 237, 253, 269, 285, 301, 317, 333, 413.
English Harvest Home . . 233
Espartero, General, Banquet to, at the Egyptian Hall, Mansion House . . 208
Ethiopia, Highlands of, 2 Cuts . 421

FAIRLOP Fair, and the Fairlop Frigate . . . 44
"Fair One with the Golden Locks," Scene from, at the Haymarket Theatre . . 424
Farne Lighthouse . . 84
Fashions, The, 10, 32, 56, 91, 105, 128, 144, 154, 170, 206, 218, 235, 250, 272, 283, 301, 323, 330, 438.
"Favourite, The," Scene from the Opera of . . . 285
Fetter Lane, Fire in . . 141
Fire Brigades . . . 325
First Fire of the Season . . 264
First Fireside (Song by J. A. Wade) 336
Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge . 260
Flemish Farm in Windsor Great Park . . . 316
Florentine . . . 128
Folkestone Harbour, shewing the Passage of a Packet from Boulogne; Grand Banquet in the South Eastern Pavilion to celebrate the Opening of the Six Hour Passage from London to Boulogne . . 93
Folkestone Trait (The First) passing the Blechingley Tunnel . 4
Four Courts, Dublin . . 344
French Mails . . . 340
French Vintage . . 233

GALVANIC Telegraph, Prince Albert Inspecting the . . 5
Gaudafui, Cape, on the Coast of Afrca . . . 228
"Geraldine, Scene from the New Opera of . . . 124
Gerona Regiment . . 76
Giant Horse, Mr. Hibbert's . 388
Gibraltar, from the Sea . . 244
Glasgow, First Free Church in . 277
Glazenwood House Flower Show 12
Australian Garden at . 12
Goodwood Races . . 69
Prize Cups—The Goodwood Cup . . . 69
Gower, Lady E. L., Marriage of, with Lord Blantyre . . 253
Grand Junction Railway Fête at Crewe . . . 405
Gray, Doctor . . . 345
Great Britain, The Steam Ship . 33, 34
Breakfast on Board of . 73
Figure Head of . . 72
The Ship in Dock . . 72
The Launch . . 71
Triumphal Arches and Anchor 77
Great Western Railway:
Exterior of Terminus . 53
The Interior of ditto . 52
Interior of the Royal Railway Carriage . . 52
Greek Revolution, The New Royal Palace at Athens . . 241
Greenock Model Frigate . . 117
Greenwich Regatta Prize Boat . 57
Grisi's, Carlotta, Farewell in "The Peri" . . . 340
Grouse Shooting . . 100
Grouse Tent . . 100

HAFOD Copper-works . . 205
Haliburton, Judge . . 37
Hardwicke, The Earl of . . 57
"Harlequin and King Popin," Scene from Christmas Pantomime at Drury Lane Theatre . 424
"Harlequin Blue Beard," Scene from at Adelphi Theatre . 424
Hare of the Prince of Wales . 93
"Harlequin Grammar," Scene from at the Surrey Theatre . 424
Harrow Church . . 21
The Font . . . 21
Harrow School and Speech Room . . . 20
Heads from an Omnibus . 109, 110
"Hermia, The Steam Ship . . 252
Highland Cattle (West) . . 316
Hobler, Mr. . . 116
Holland, The Ex King of, William Frederick, Count of Nassau 401
Holy Island . . . 84
Hong Kong The Harbour of . 245
Hop Picking . . . 233
Horn at Ripon, Curious . . 284
Horticultural Fête at Chiswick, Gateway to the Duke of Devonshire's Grounds. . . 37
Houses of Parliament, The New Plan of . . . 224

Page

'ILLUMINATED MAGAZINE,' Illustration from . . 417
"ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS," our Steam Printing Machines . 364
Infant Orphan Asylum at Wanstead, Opening of the New 9, 10, 16
Infantry Cap, the Proposed New 272, 125.
Ireland and the Irish:—
Beggar Woman and Children 101
Carrickmacross . . 101
Peasant Girls . . 101
Leinster Cottage . . 101
Connemara Cabin . . 101
Poor Children . . 101
Idiot and Mother . . 101
Aged Beggarman . . 236
Car Drivers . . 236
Cottage or Cabin . . 236
Irish Physiognomy . . 236
Turf Market, Dublin . 236
Irving, Washington . . 180
Isaacson, the Roman Catholic Church at . . . 4
Interior of . . . 4
Italian Opera House, Interior of the, and of the Royal Box . 56
Her Majesty's State Visit to, pas de deux danced on the occasion, by Cerito and Elssler . . . 93
"Jack the Giant Killer, Harlequin," Scene from, at the Olympic Theatre . . . 425
Jacksost, the North American Indian Chief . . . 404
See North American Indians.
Jonville, The Prince De, and the Duc D'Aumale . . 101
Julien a Concert, The Orchestra . 413
Jupiter and his Satellites, Telescopic View of . . . 263

KEAN, Mr Charles, as "Richard the Third . . . 13
King's College, Prince Albert Opening George III.'s Museum . 5
Kingston Jamaica . . 245
Kossuth, the Cornet à Piston performer . . . 348

LAMORICIERE, General . . 308
Lamour, The Fumplaise of Bishop 93
Lazarus, Mr., First Clarinet at Her Majesty's Theatre . . 348
"Le Delire en Peinture" . 109
Lears, Madame, at Batty's Amphitheatre . . . 109
Lillywhite, The Cricket Bowler . 59
Lizard, H.M. Ship . . 103
London City Election —
The Procession . . 276
The Polling . . 277
Lord Mayor, The Portrait of . 313
Portrait of the . . 229
Lord Mayor's Day:—Embarking at Southwark Bridge . . 305
State Procession passing up Ludgate hill . . 312
Lumley, Mr., The Entrepeneur of Her Majesty's Theatre . . 124
Luton Chapel, The Interior of . 357
Luton Hoo, Sketched on the morning after the Fire . . 325
Lyndoch, Lord, Portrait of . 405

MADRID, with the Royal Palace 49
Scene also Spain.
"Magic Mirror, The," Scene from, at the Princess's Theatre . 425
Malta — The Great Harbour . 244
The Governor's Palace . 244
Manchester, Bazaar at the Townhall . . . 261
Marine Excursion of her Majesty, see Queen, The.
Marlborough Collegiate School . 164
Marriage of H.R.H. The Princess Augusta of Cambridge and the Duke of Mecklenberg Strelitz, 8, 9
Marriage of Lady E. L. Gower and Lord Blantyre —The Departure 252
Trentham Hall . . 252
Mathew, Father . . 89
Celebrating Mass . . 89
Administering the Pledge, in London . . . 85
Maxillaria Steelii (Orchidaceæ) . 52
Meadows, Mr. Herbert . . 344
Going out to Hunt . . 313
"Menunon," The, Chart shewing the course of . . 228
Michael of Russia, His Imperial Highness, The Grand Duke— Banquet to at Windsor Castle . 232
Portrait of . . . 232
Visit to Woolwich —
With Lord Bloomfield and Staff, at Review . . 248
Taking up a Pontoon . 248
Loading—Firing in Retreat . 248
Disabled Wheel . . 248
Dismantling a Gun . . 249
Mounting a Gun . . 249
Rocket and Gun Practice in the Marshes . . . 249
Middle Temple Hall, Term Dinner in the . . . 201
Milton's Mulberry Tree . . 288
Missionary Steam Schooner, "The Dove" . . . 341
Missouri, Burning of the Steam Frigate . . . 201
Monte Video . . . 420
Montreal, Monster Bell for Roman Catholic Cathedra. at . 12.
"Moonshine," Scene from New Comedy of . . . 81
Murray, the late Mr John . 20

Page

NELSON Column, Trafalgar-square . . 265, 332
Nelson's, Lord, Birthplace . 316
Nelson Statue, Exhibition of the 389
Nemours, The Duke and Duchess of, 314
with the Queen and Prince Albert, in the Long Walk, Windsor . 337
Newcastle-upon-Tyne Races, Grand Stand . . . 13
The Race Cup . . 13
News Boy, The . . . 209
New Zealand, Nelson District in . 340
New Plymouth Settlement . 420
Norham Castle . . 52
North American Indians presented to Her Majesty . . 401
See also Jocksost
Nutwith, the Winner of the St. Leger . . . 201

O CONNELL, Esq., M.P., Daniel 345
Birthplace of . . 105
Residence of, Merrion-square, Dublin . . . 328
O Connell, Esq., M.P., John . 345
"Old Guard, The, Scene from, at the Princess's Theatre . 260
Oldbaway (North American) Indians presented to Her Majesty . 401
Onoidium Excavatum (Orchidaceæ) 128
Ondine, Cerito (in the Shadow Dance) as . . . 45
Opium Packages . . 21
Opium Smoker . . 21
Opium Smuggling . . 21
Orleans, The late Duke of, Monument erected to the Memory of, near Paris . . . 225
Orphan Girl . . . 13
O. Smith, Mr., as Creve-Cœur, in "The Bohemians . . 348
Otho, King of Greece . . 20
Outram, Major, Sword for presentation to . . . 240
Oyster Market, Opening of the, at Billingsgate . . . 97

PANAMA, View, &c., of . . 77
Parliament, The, Prorogation of—Her Majesty's Progress to the House of Lords . . 192
Parliament Oak, Sherwood Forest 304
Parsontown, Parsontown Castle, the Seat of the Earl of Rosse . 165
Patrison, Esq., James . . 265
Pegasus, The Wreck of the . 65
Penelope, Her Majesty's Steam Frigate, The . . 1
Pennefather, Chief Justice of the Queen's Bench, Ireland . 344
"Peri, The," Scene from the New Ballet of . . . 237
"Peri, The —Farewell to Grisi and Petipa . . . 340
Perrin, Judge, Ireland . . 344
Petipa, Signora—Farewell of "The Peri" . . . 349
Photographic Process of Mr. Beard 12
Pitch, the Cricketer . . 44
Pupils Hall Academy, near Brentwood, Essex . . . 431
Pinchin and Johnson's Oil, &c. Works, Scene after the Fire and Explosion at . . . 53
Plymouth Victualling Department, and the Breakwater . . 176
Pompey's Pillar, Recent Ascent of . 57
Pontycerem Gate destroyed . 205
Poultry, Her Majesty's, &c. See "Queen, The."
Princess Augusta of Cambridge, H.R.H., The Marriage of . 8, 9
Princess Royal, the, Harp for . 232
Prince of Orange, Landing of the . 301
Prize Cattle, exhibited at the High land Society Show, at Dundee . 117

QUEEN, The, Her Most Gracious Majesty VICTORIA —
Progress to the House of Lords 192
Drawing Room, see Drawing Room
Grand State Ball at Buckingham Palace . . 88, 89
State Visit to the Italian Opera House—Interior of the Royal Box . . 56, 93
Visit to the Thames Tunnel . 89
Poultry House, Home Park, Windsor . . . 108
Cochin China Fowls . . 108
White Java Bantams . 401
Tiers of Nests in Her Majesty's Fowl House . . 409
James Walter and Her Majesty's favourite Pigeon . 409
Her Majesty's Marine Excursion Passage of the Bar, Southampton . . . 148
Royal Procession, High Street, Southampton . . 148
Royal Yacht off Southampton . 168
Embarkation of the Queen and Prince Albert . . 168
Heaving the Lead . . 168
Entrance to the Southampton Pier . . . 168
Passing the Flag ship St. Vincent, off Spithead . . 169
Calshot Castle . . 169
Royal Yacht in sight of Cowes, Isle of Wight . . 169
Passing Norris Castle, ditto . 169
Royal Yacht Club-house and Fort . . . 169
Ryde, Isle of Wight . . 169
Commissioners Yacht . . 170
The Warspite manning the Yards . . . 170
Quarantine Vessel at the Motherbank . . . 170

Page

Floating Light, Southampton Water . . 170
St. Alban's Head . . 170
Lord Yarborough's Yacht, Kestrel . . . 170
The Monarch Steam-ship following with the South Western 170
The Oriental Steam-ship . 170
The Queen's Barge . . 170
The Needles . . . 170
The Lumps at the Royal George . . . 170
The Landslip at Lyme Regis . 170
The Royal Visit to Norris Castle 172
Ventnor, Isle of Wight . 172
Portland Roads . . 172
The Queen and Prince Albert Landing at Devonport Dockyard . . . 172
The Royal Yacht in Barnpool . 173
Mount Edgecumbe House . 173
Bonfire on the Hoe, Plymouth 173
Illumination in Plymouth Sound . . . 173
The Royal Visit to the Caledonia . . . 173
Royal Victualling Establishment at Plymouth . 176
The Breakwater . . 176
Her Majesty's Visit to France:
Victoria and Louis Philippe at the Château D'Eu . 177
Chateau D'Eu . . 177
Victoria and Albert Yacht off Treport—Debarkation of the Queen . . . 180
Battery of Treport . . 180
Her Majesty and Prince Albert Landing at Treport . 180
Treport—Departure of Her Majesty for the Ville D'Eu . 181
Chateau and Ville D'Eu from the Treport Road . . 181
Queen's Arrival at the Chateau D'Eu . . . 181
Royal Cavalcade to the Fête Champêtre on the Heights of Orleans . . . 184
Her Majesty Presented by Louis Philippe to the Visitors at the Fête Champêtre . 184
The Fête Champêtre . 184
Her Majesty Presented by Louis Philippe to the Troops, &c., at the Chateau . 185
Concert at the Chateau . 185
Illuminations in Honour of Her Majesty, seen from the Chateau . . . 185
United Steam Fleet off Treport 188
Review of Cavalry between Crielle and Ville D'Eu . 188
Prince Albert at the Caserne Montpensier . . 188
Visit of Her Majesty to the Church of Notre Dame and St. Lawrence, &c. . 189
The Queen, the Duchess of Orleans, Comte de Paris, and Comte D'Eu, in the Gardens of the Chateau . . 189
Allée Vert in the Park—Promenade of the Queen and Princesses . . . 189
Her Majesty in the Crypt of Notre Dame . . 189
The Queen Leaving Treport . 192
The Parting Salute . . 192
Her Majesty Landing at Brighton . . . 192
Her Majesty's Belgian Excursion
Her Majesty Landing at Ostend 193
Royal Pavilion . . 196
Joe Two Princes and the Young Princess Promenading 196
The Royal Yacht Coming into Harbour . . . 196
Napoleon's House at Ostend . 197
The Royal Party at the Grand Hotel, Ostend . . 197
The Royal Party on the Sands at Ostend . . 197
Triumphal Arch at Bruges . 197
Town Hall, Bruges . . 197
Visit to the Archery-hall, St. Sebastian, at Bruges . 200
The Belfroi, at Bruges . 200
The Queen of the Belgians 200
The Governor's House, Ghent. 212
The Chateau of Lacken . 212
The Casino, at Ghent . 212
Begum Nun, at Ghent . 212
Triumphal Arch at Brussels. 212, 213.
Iron Bridge at Laeken . 213
Malibran's Tomb at Laeken 213
Hotel de Ville, Brussels . 213
Presentation of Flowers at Maines . . . 213
Concert in the Park, Brussels. 216
King's Palace, Brussels . 216
Avenue in the Park, Brussels . 216
Rue Royale, Brussels . 216
Procession of the Giant, at Antwerp . . . 217
Royal Party in the Place Verte, Antwerp . . 220
Royal Yacht leaving Antwerp. 220
King and Queen of the Belgians taking leave at Lillo . 220
King of Holland's Yacht . 220
Dutch Boats, &c., on the Scheldt 220
Her Majesty's Visit to the Midland Counties
Arch at Tamworth . 361
Drayton Manor . . 361
Pavilion at Tamworth . 362
Her Majesty passing over Lady bridge . . . 362
Tamworth Castle . . 364
Triumphal Arches
At Tolenham . . 295

	Page
At Cheshunt	295
At Ware	295
At Buntingford	295
At Reed-mill Hill	295
At Royston	295
At Melbourne	295
Her Majesty's Visit to Cambridge: Fitzwilliam Museum	269
Queen Eleanor's Cross, at Waltham	273
Triumphal Arches, 7 Cuts	295
The Senate House	280
Great Quadrangle, Trinity College	280
Grand Triumphal Arch	281
Queen's Chair, Prince Albert's Chair, Faldstool	281
New Bridge, St. John's College	281
New Bridge, St. John's College, Interior of	281
Professor Whewell in the Golgotha, St. Mary's	284
Northumberland Telescope	284
Royal Progress from Trumpington-street to Trinity College	296
Her Majesty receiving the Addresses in the Great Hall, at Trinity	297
Trinity-street, Royal Progress to the Senate-House	297
Milton's Mulberry Tree	298
Throne in King's College Chapel	300
St. John's Gate	300
The Church of the Holy Sepulchre restored	300
King's College	300
Fireworks in Parker's Piece	300
Her Majesty's Visit to the Midland Counties:
Her Majesty at Chatsworth: Grand Entrance	369
Entrance into Lichfield—Presentation of the Mace	372
Visit to Lichfield Cathedral	372
Birthplace of Dr. Johnson, at Lichfield	372
Arch at Lichfield	372
Bridge in Chatsworth Park	373
Illumination at Chatsworth	373
Grand Conservatory at do.	373
Chatsworth:—"The Palace of the Peak	376
Belvoir Castle	377
Derby Station	378
Chesterfield Railway Station and Triumphal Arch	379
Chesterfield	379
Wilford Road, Nottingham	379
Railway Station, do.	380
Nautilus Arch, do.	380
Exterior of Railway Station, do.	380
Hunting Tower, Chatsworth	392
Going to the Belvoir Hunt	392
Staunton Tower, Belvoir Castle	392
Triumphal Arch at the Earl of Wilton's	392
Duke of Wellington at the Railway Station, Rugby	393
Triumphal Arch, Thorpe Arnold	393
Ditto, Melton Mowbray	393
State Bed, Belvoir Castle	393
The Silver Cistern, Belvoir Castle	393
Triumphal Arch, Belgrave Gate, Leicester	396
News Room, Leicester	396
Triumphal Arches, Leicester	396
Entrance to the Railway Station at Leicester	397
Her Majesty's Departure from the Railway Station, Leicester	397
Pavilion at Railway Station at Watford	398
Queen Mary's Bower at Chatsworth	412
Queen's Bench, Ireland, Judges of the	344
Queen's College, Birmingham	141
Queen of Beauty, the Head of the, by Baines	221
RAY, Esq., T. M.	345
Reading, New Public Building	253
The Great Hall	253
Rebecaites, see Wales, &c.
Refuge for the Destitute, Ward for Females	417
Ward for Males	417
"Regular," East Indiaman, The, Abandonment of off the Cape of Good Hope	204
Reilly, Mr., Plate presented to—Claret Jug and Brooch	419
Repeal Association, Corn Exchange, Dublin, Weekly Meeting of the	129
Repeal Buttons	129
Repeal Meeting at Tara	136
Review of the Grenadier Guards in Hyde Park	68
The Charge	68
Forming Squares	68
An Ensign	68
Richard the Third, Mr. Charles Kean as	13
Richborough, Kent, the Discoveries at:—The Great Cross	260
Entrance to the Northern Gallery	260
Pottery Found, Axe, &c.	260
Masonry at base of Platform	260
Richmond, his Grace the Duke of	66
Richmond Mechanics' Institution	164
Roman Catholic Church at Islington Interior of	4
Ross, Captain James	268
Rosse, The Earl of, President of the British Association	156
Rosse's, The Earl of, Great Telescope, on the Lawn—Workshop	165
Wall for Machinery of the Telescope	166
Rotunda, The, at the Bank of England	428
Royal Agricultural Society's Meeting at Derby, see Derby.
Royal Artillery Practice, Throwing Shell from Howitzer	67
Royal Hunt, Meet of the	329
Royal Irish Art-Union, Distribution of Prizes	164
Royal Railway Carriage, Interior of
Royal Society, Meeting of the, at Somerset House	412
Rumpenheim, H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge's Palace at	285
Rutland, The Most Noble his Grace the Duke of	377
SAILING Match, see "Yacht"
St. Luke's Church, Chelsea	117
St. Margaret's Church, Westminster	222
St. Mary's Church, Stafford	337
St. Olave, Southwark, Interior of the Church of, before the Fire	204
St. Olave's Church, Destruction of	197
St. Peter's Church, Islington	384
St. Stephen's, Walbrook, Interior of the Church of	225
Santa Anna	425
Santa Anna, His Aide-de-Camp, Arista	384
Saragossa	116
Savoy Chapel, The Royal	261
Savoy Chapel, Interior of	261
Scott, The Rev. John, President of the Wesleyan Conference	208
Scottish Union Assurance Company	320
Searles, James, the Pedestrian	349
Sèvres Casket, presented to the Queen, by Louis Philippe	261
Shere Sing	408
Ajeet Sing	265
Shoa, The Christian King of, Presents to her Majesty from:—Abyssinian Mule	160
Crowns of the Queen and King of Shoa	160
Abyssinian Arms, &c.	160
Smith, The Rev. Sydney	340
Smyrna, The Bay and City of	244
South Eastern Railway, Opening of the	4
See "Folkestone Harbour"
Smithfield Club Prize Cattle Show:—General View	384
Mr. Beasley's eight months old Short-horned Ox	384
Mr. Hosman's twenty-four weeks and five days old Neapolitan Pig	384
Mr. Grantham's seventy months old Southdown Wether	384
Mr. Twichell's twenty months old Leicester Wether	388
Prince Albert's twenty-eight weeks old Suffolk and Berkshire Pig	389
Mr. Grantham's thirty-two months old Southdown Wether	389
Lord Western's twenty-seven weeks old Essex Pig	389
Mr. Burgess's twenty months old Long-woolled Wether	389
Earl Spencer's four years and six months old Durham Ox	389
Mr. T. Umbers's three years seven months old North Devon Steer	389
Sir C. Tempest's four years nine months old Short-horned Heifer	389
Prize Implements:—Patent Clod Crusher Rollers	390
Patent Wheels	390
Iron Liquid Manure Cart and Apparatus	390
Smithfield Market, Scene in, on the 11th Dec.	388
Spain, the Queen of, Pianoforte for	272
Spain, the War in. Andalusians	76
Catalans	76
Geronа Regiment	76
Troops of the Line	76
View of Valencia	76
Spanish Bull Fight	356
Picadores	356
Chulos, &c. &c.	356
Spohr, Louis	45
State Ball at Buckingham Palace: Bow Drawing Room	88
Two Royal Pipers	88
Grand Staircase	88
Marble Hall	88
Ball Room	89
Refreshment Tent	89
Steele, Esq., Thomas	345
Stuart, Lord Dudley	325
Sydney, New Government House at	404
"Tagus," the preparing to sail from Southampton	244
TAILORS' Asylum, Haverstock Hill	417
Tamburini (after Dantan)	77
Tamworth Castle	384
Teetotal Festival at Roche Abbey	77
Telegraph and Church of St Olave, Southwark, before the fire	138
Temperance Monument, Mount Patrick, Cork	221
Tennent, Esq., M.P. Emmerson	293
Thames Embankment	432
Thames Grand Regatta:—The Silver £40 Cup	27
Silver Challenge Cup	27
Gold Challenge Cup	27
Fulham Bridge	28
Hammersmith Suspension Bridge	28
The Putney Silver Badge	53
Thames Tunnel, Her Majesty's visit to the	96
Thesiger Esq. M.P.	304
Tierney, Rev T.	345
Tooley-street, near London Bridge, Fire at, with Ruins of St Olave's Church, &c.	197, 138
Trentham Hall, from the lake	252
Treport, Drawbridge at	175
Trinity College, Dublin	380
Provost of	380
Troops of the Line (Spanish)	76
Trotting Match for 10000 francs (Confidence)	104
Twelfth Night Characters	429
Tyrrell, The Rev. P. J.	345
VALENCIA, View of	76
Victoria, The New American Line Ship	108
WALES:—Meeting on Mynydd Selen Mountain, Carmarthenshire	145
Carmarthen, View of	309
Carmarthen Peasantry	309
Rebeccaites, or Beccas	309
Swansea, View of	309
Swansea Market-women	309
Warburton, M.P., Mr. Henry	341
Wesleyan Theological Institution, Richmond	105
Entrance Hall and principal Staircase	208
The Library	208
Westminster Bridge	261
Westminster Hall, Opening of the Law Courts	292
"Who's your Friend?" Scene from the Comedy of	157
William Frederick, Count of Nassau, the Ex-King of Holland	404
Windsor Home Park, Poultry House, Poultry, &c., see Queen, The	81
Wisley Court	237
"Woman," Scene from the new play of	237
Wood, Bart., M.P., The late Sir Matthew	221
Worcester, H.M.S., Launch of	252
Wylie, James, The celebrated draughtplayer	200
YACHT, Sailing Match between "The Mystery" and "The Enigma"	44
Yarmouth Races, The Cup Race	130
Yates, Mrs., as Louise, in "The Bohemians"	348
ZURBANO and his Staff	116

London: Printed and Published by WILLIAM LITTLE, at 198, Strand, where all communications for the Editor are requested to be addressed.—SATURDAY, January 6, 1844

GETTY CENTER LIBRARY
3 3125 00600 7450